PPLACE WHERE CHRIST WAS BAPTIZED. [MATTHEW, iii: 13.]—The Jordan is the sacred river of Christendom, and the picture here photographed represents the most sacred spot in it. Here Christ was baptized by John in the winter, A. D. 27. This is right over against Jericho and about eight miles from that ancient city. Here pilgrims come annually from all over the world to see and to bathe in this wondrous stream. The Jordan varies from one hundred to two hundred yards in width. Its flow is rapid, having a fall from Caesarea Philippi, where it rises, to the Dead Sea, where it is lost, of nearly four thousand feet. In its course it creates two lakes, Huleh and Galilee. Its banks are lined with thickly set shrubs and trees, and amid their flowers and branches birds revel and sing the whole year through.

THE PERIOD BETWEEN THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

JEWISH HISTORY FROM SECULAR SOURCES.

JUDEA continued subject to the kings of Persia about two hundred years, but does not appear to have had a separate governor after Nehemiah. It was annexed to the province of Syria, and the administration of its affairs was left to the high-priest, subject to the control of the provincial rulers. This raised the high-priesthood to a degree of temporal dignity and power which very soon made it an object of ambition to the different members of the family of Aaron, and gave rise to many violent and disgraceful contests among them for the office.

Upon the overthrow of the Persian army by Alexander, Syria and the neighboring countries fell under his power, and Tyre was taken after an obstinate resistance. Alexander then marched into Judea to punish the Jews, who, as faithful subjects of the king of Persia, had sent the Tyrians supplies of provisions, and refused them to him. But it is related that, as he approached Jerusalem, and saw a procession of the people clothed in white coming to meet him, headed by Jaddua the high-priest, and all the priestly race, in their robes of office, his heart was turned to spare and favor them. He continued to them the free enjoyment of their laws and religion, and exempted them from tribute during their sabbatical years; and when he built the city of Alexandria, he placed a great number of Jews there, and gave to them the same privileges as to his Greek subjects.

After the death of Alexander and the division of his empire among his generals, Judea became a subject of contention between the kings of Syria and Egypt, which ended in its forming for a time part of the monarchy of Egypt. Ptolemy Soter, the king of Egypt, brought many thousands of the Jews into that country, settled them there and treated them kindly, placing them on an equality with the Greeks at Alexandria. Greek being the common language of that city, it was quickly learned by the Jewish settlers, and became the native language of their children who were born there, and who on that account, in process of time, were called Hellenists, or Grecian Jews, a name which afterward came to be applied generally to all Jews speaking the Greek language in foreign countries (see Acts vi. 1; ix. 29; xi. 20, etc.). These Grecian Jews had synagogues in Alexandria, in which the writings of Moses and of the prophets, translated into Greek for this purpose, were read every sabbath day. This translation, which is called the Septuagint, contributed much to spread the knowledge of true religion through the western part of the world. It came into common use among the Jews, and the quotations made from the Old Testament Scriptures in the New, by the evangelists and apostles, are often, though not always, from this version.

Seleucus, king of Syria, about 300 B.C., built numerous cities in Syria and Asia Minor, and regarding the Jews as good and faithful citizens, endeavored to attract them to his new cities by the offer of the same privileges as were enjoyed by the Greeks and Macedonians. They accordingly settled there in great numbers, especially at Antioch in Syria.

It is worthy of notice that by these events the Jews were brought into contact with a new form of heathenism. They had already encountered its more ancient and more barbarous forms during their sojourns in Egypt and in Babylon, the headquarters and central seats of idolatry in their days. But now, by their dispersion in Egypt, and the other countries bordering on the eastern end of the Mediterranean, they were everywhere brought into contact with the more cultivated and refined mythology and philosophy of the Greeks; and there are good grounds for believing that they were the means of communicating to the more candid and teachable among them some knowledge of a purer religion.

During the reign of Ptolemy Soter the prosperity of the Jews was much promoted by the internal administration of an excellent high-priest, Simon the Just. He repaired and fortified their city and temple, and made a spacious reservoir of water, "in compass as a sea."

After the Jewish nation had been tributary to the kings of Egypt for about eighty years, it became, by the conquest of Antiochus the Great, subject to the kings of Syria, but the Jews were still governed by their own laws, under the high-priest and council of the nation.

Judea, being situated between Syria and Egypt, suffered much during the whole of this period from the frequent wars in which those countries were engaged, and was the arena of many bloody and destructive battles. Besides this, the peace of the nation was greatly disturbed by the claims of rival candidates to the office of high-priest, which afforded to the kings of Syria frequent pretexts for interfering with the internal affairs of the nation. And all these evils were considerably aggravated by the corruption and misconduct of the chief men, and the increasing wickedness of the people, who began to neglect the worship and the law of God far more than they had ever done since their return from the captivity.

God saw fit to punish the Jews for this defection by the hand of Antiochus Epiphanes, who came with an army and plundered the city and temple of Jerusalem with every conceivable circumstance of cruelty and profanation. For three years and a half they were altogether deprived of their civil and religious liberties. The daily sacrifice was suspended; the temple itself was dedicated by Antiochus to Jupiter Olympius, whose statue was erected on the altar of burnt offering; the worship of Jehovah and the observance of his law were prohibited under the severest penalties; every copy of the sacred writings that could be seized was burned; and the people were required, under pain of death, to sacrifice to idols. Never before had the Jews been exposed to so furious a persecution. The apostates were numerous, but a remnant continued faithful; and these events were doubtless useful in calling the attention of the heathen around to those great principles for which many of the Jews were willing to peril their lives.

At length, God raised up a deliverer for his people in the noble family of the Asamoneans. Mattathias, a priest eminent for his piety and resolution, and the father of five sons, encouraged the people, by his example and exhortations, "to stand up for the law," and having collected around him a large number of faithful men, he undertook to deliver his people, and to restore the worship of the God of Israel. But being very old when he engaged in this arduous work, he did not live to see its completion. At his death his eldest son Judas succeeded to the command of the army, in which he was greatly assisted by his brother Simon, a man of remarkable prudence. The motto on his standard was Exod. xv. 11: "Who is like unto thee among the gods, O Jehovah?" the Hebrew words being, Mi Camoka Baalim Jehovah: and from the initial letters of these words, MCBH, is said to be derived the word Maccabi or Maccabee, which became the surname of the family.

After several victories over the troops of Antiochus, Judas Maccabæus gained possession of Jerusalem; and his first care was to repair and purify the temple for the restoration of the Divine worship. This reconsecration of the temple and revival of its worship was ever after celebrated by an annual feast of eight days. It occurred at the time of the winter solstice (165 B.C.), and was called the Feast of the Dedication (John x. 22).

The war was carried on for twenty-six years, with five successive kings of Syria, and after many sanguinary battles the Syrians were driven out of the country, and the Jews, under their Maccabean princes, regained for a time their independence and the free exercise of their religion, which they commemorated by commencing a new epoch in 143 B.C. as the year of "the freedom of Jerusalem." They had again regular troops, strong garrisons and alliances with other powers, including even Rome, and the boundaries of the state were extended by the subjugation of the Idumeans and Philistines, as well as of Moab, Ammon and Arabia Petrea. Previously to this, in the year 153 B.C., as the Asamonean family were descended from the eldest branch of the race of Aaron, the office of high-priest was assumed by Jonathan, the then reigning prince, and it remained in the family until the usurpation of Herod.

This season of prosperity was, however, of short duration. The nation was exceedingly troubled by internal dissensions, especially on the part of the Pharisees, who first appear prominently in history in the reign of John Hyrcanus, as forming a large and powerful body, of turbulent character and lofty pretensions, and carrying on fierce quarrels with the rival sect of the Sadducees, which led upon one occasion to a dreadful civil war. There were also violent contests for the throne between rival members of the royal family, which greatly weakened the nation, and it was ill-prepared to withstand the extending power of Rome, which in the year 65 B.C. subjugated Syria, and soon afterward conquered Egypt. In the year 63 B.C. Pompey marched his army into Judea, besieged and took Jerusalem and made the country tributary to the Romans, though it was still governed by the Maccabean princes. During the reigns of the later princes of this family, Herod Antipater, an Idumean by birth, obtained a position of power and influence in the land, and after his death, his son, Herod the Great, so ingratiated himself with the Romans that he obtained the appointment of king of Judea in the place of Antigonus. He had, however, some difficulty in obtaining possession of his kingdom, as the people were greatly attached to their Maccabean kings. But he came against Jerusalem with a Roman army of 60,000 men, and, after a siege of above half a year, took the city by storm, and massacred many of the inhabitants. Shortly afterward he put to death Antigonus, and thus ended the Asamonean dynasty, after it had subsisted a hundred and twenty-six years.

Herod was a man of great abilities and of indomitable resolution, but an ambitious and cruel tyrant, unscrupulous as to the means by which he gained his ends. He persecuted to death all the members and adherents of the Asamonean house, and he even put to death his wife and two of his own sons. He degraded the high-priesthood by making the tenure of the office dependent on his own pleasure. In order to gain popularity with his subjects, as well as to increase his own fame, he greatly enlarged and beautified the temple at Jerusalem, making it, in some respects, more magnificent than that of Solomon. He also erected in neighboring cities many heathen temples, and constructed numerous public works, such as bridges, roads, baths, aqueducts and harbors, the cost of which he defrayed by heavy exactions upon his subjects.

In the thirty-sixth year of the reign of Herod, while Augustus was emperor of Rome, THE SAVIOUR OF THE WORLD WAS BORN.

Herod was succeeded in the government of the greater part of Palestine by his son Archelaus, who acted with great cruelty and injustice, and in the tenth year of his reign, upon a complaint being made against him by the Jews, he was banished by Augustus to Vienne, in Gaul, where he died. Publius Sulpitius Quirinus (who is called in Greek Cyrenias, Luke ii. 2), the president of Syria, was then sent to reduce the countries over which Archelaus had reigned to a Roman province, and a governor of Judea was appointed under the title of Procurator, subordinate to the president of Syria. But the Jews were still permitted to exercise their religious worship without molestation or restraint.

Meanwhile, in the Gentile world, the old systems of idolatry had fallen into disrepute, partly through the extreme corruptions of worship and of morals connected with them, and partly through the cultivation of Grecian philosophy, the conflicting theories of which, however, utterly failed to satisfy the wants of mankind, as they afforded little solid truth and produced no moral renovation. At the same time, the universal prevalence of the Roman power, ensuring internal peace and facilitating communication between different parts of the world, together with its indifference to the various forms of religious belief and worship, opened, for a time, a wider field for the diffusion of the gospel. So that Providence combined with prophecy to mark this as the "fulness of time," when the expected SAVIOUR should come into the world.

THE PRAYERS OF JESUS CHRIST

IN CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER.

WHERE OFFERED.	THE LESSON WE SHOULD LEARN.	WHERE RECORDED.
The Jordan.....	We must not attempt to "fulfil righteousness" without prayer—God answers promptly and unmistakably.....	Luke iii. 21, 22.
"A Solitary Place," Ca- pernaum.	The duty of early morning prayer—of secret prayer; also, that we should enter upon the dis- charge of other duties with prayer.....	Mark i. 35; see Isa. xxvi. 9; Ps. v. 3; lxiii. 1.
Chorazin—Wilderness...	To withdraw from the multitude and pray in secret.....	Luke v. 16; see Matt. vi. 5.
Capernaum—Mountain.	Every work designed to advance God's glory should open with prayer; we should not limit the time.....	Luke vi. 12; see 1 Thess. v. 17; Col. iv. 2;
Nain.....	We must be as babes if we would receive Divine Light; we should be thankful for what "seems good in God's sight".....	Ps. lv. 17.
Sea of Gal., Jerusalem, Emmaus.....	The duty of giving thanks at our meals (three examples).....	Matt. xi. 25, 26; see Isa. xxviii. 9; Matt.
Bethsaida—Mountain...	The duty of closing the day's work with prayer—secret.....	xv. 36.

Mount Tabor.....	The duty of social prayer.....	Matt. iv. 23; John vi. 15; see Ps. lv. 17.
Bethany.....	We should recognize God's power; God hears prayer at all times.....	Luke ix. 18.
Gethsemane (probably).	We should learn of Jesus how to pray.....	Luke ix. 28, 29.
Borders of Judea.....	"Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven".....	John xi. 41, 42; see Ps. cxliii. 1, 2.
Jerusalem—Temple.....	Not to pray for deliverance even from the severest sufferings, when such lie in the course of our duty, but seek God's glory in all things.....	Luke xi. 1-4; see Matt. vi. 7, 8.
Jer.—Upper Chamber...	We should remember first, in all our prayers, God's glory; we should so live that we may, at death, say with Jesus, "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do;" it is our duty to pray for others.....	Matt. xix. 13; see 1 Pet. ii. 1, 2; Matt.
Jer.—Upper Chamber...	The duty of intercessory prayer.....	xviii. 5; Ps. viii. 2.
Gethsemane.....	The thrice-uttered Prayer of Jesus' Agony should teach us: 1st. A higher sense of His suffer- ings for us; 2d. That it is not wrong to be "exceeding sorrowful;" 3d. While we pray to be delivered from evil, we should ever say from the heart, "Not as I will, but as thou wilt.".....	John xii. 27, 28; see John xiii. 31, 32;
Calvary.....	That we must pray even for our bitterest enemies.....	Phil. i. 20, 21.
Calvary.....	The Love that induced our Saviour to bear such sufferings for us as called for this prayer should teach us to love Him more and more each day.....	John xvii.
Calvary.....	May we be able to utter the same glorious prayer.....	Luke xxii. 32.
Bethany.....	May we share therein.....	Matt. xxvi. 36-44; Mark xiv. 32-40; Luke xxii. 40-44; note carefully Luke xxii. 40,

NOTE.—The above Table includes all of the recorded Sermons, and Less Formal Discourses and Addresses; the column headed "The Lesson we should Learn" is necessarily too limited to give more than the leading subject of each.

On the following page we give an interesting and, to the critical student especially, valuable Tabular View of the Sermon on the Mount.

OUR LORD'S DISPENSATION.

IF WE WOULD BE MEMBERS OF CHRIST, AND JOINT-HEIRS WITH HIM OF THE PROMISES, TEXT.

WE MUST "PRAY ALWAYS" .....	Luke xxi. 36. Mark i. 35. Luke vi. 12.
"And in the morning, rising up a great while before day, He went out and departed into a solitary place and prayed." .....
"He went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God." .....
"When He had sent the multitude away, he went up into a mountain apart to pray, and when the evening was come, he was there alone" .....	Matt. xiv. 23. John xvii.
"Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word, that they all may be one" .....	Luke xxiii. 34.
"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do" .....
WE MUST LOVE THE LORD OUR GOD WITH ALL OUR HEART, SOUL, MIND AND STRENGTH.....	Mark xii. 30.
See His example in the loving manner in which He always spoke of and addressed His Father.
WE MUST BE ZEALOUS IN DOING GOD'S WILL.....	John xv. 4, 5, 8.
When only twelve years old—"Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" .....	Luke ii. 49.
"My MEAT is to do the will of Him that sent me, and to finish His work" .....	John iv. 34.
"I have kept my Father's commandments" .....	John xv. 10.
"I have glorified thee on the earth, I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do" .....	John xvii. 4.
WE MUST HONOR OUR PARENTS.....	Eph. vi. 1-3.
"He went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them" .....	Luke ii. 51.
See also account of His committing the care of His mother to John, when about to die.....	John xix. 26, 27.
WE MUST LOVE THE CHURCH.....	1 John iii. 16.
"A new commandment give I unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another." .....	John xiii. 34.
"This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you" .....	John xv. 12.
WE MUST LOVE AND DO GOOD TO ALL MEN .....	Gal. vi. 10.
"Jesus of Nazareth, . . . who went about doing good and healing all that were oppressed of the devil" .....	Acts x. 38.
"The blind receive their sight and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up and the poor have the gospel preached to them" .....	Matt. xi. 5.
WE MUST LOVE AND FORGIVE OUR ENEMIES.....	Luke vi. 35.
"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do" .....	Luke xxiii. 34.
WE MUST PRACTICE THE CHRISTIAN GRACES.....	Matt. v. 3-12.
Humility —He "made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men. . . . He humbled Himself" .....	Phil. ii. 7, 7, 8.
Meekness —He "when He was reviled, reviled not again; when He suffered, He threatened not" .....	1 Peter ii. 23.
Mercy —"Neither do I condemn thee: go and sin no more" .....	John viii. 11.
Self-denial —"Though He was rich, yet for our sakes He became poor" .....	2 Cor. viii. 9.
Compassion —"Jesus wept" .....	John xi. 35.
Firmness —See account of His temptation in the wilderness.....	Matt. iv. 1-11.
Submission to and acquiescence in God's will —"The cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?" .....	John xviii. 11.
HAPPY AND BLESSED INDEED WILL WE BE IF WE "FOLLOW HIS STEPS" .....	1 Tim. iv. 8. [23.
In this world —"All these things (temporal necessities) shall be added unto you" .....	Luke xii. 31; John xiv.
Eternally in heaven —"Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the good things which God hath prepared for them that love him" .....	[7, 10. 1 Cor. ii. 9; Rom. ii.

THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT.

A TABULAR ANALYSIS.

SECTION.	THE LESSONS INCULCATED IN THE SEVERAL SECTIONS OR DIVISIONS.	PASSAGE.
I.	The Beatitudes. These were calculated to rectify the mistaken notions of the Jews respecting Messiah's kingdom. They have been designated "Christian paradoxes," because they place happiness in such dispositions of mind as men generally deem incompatible with it.....	Matt. v. 1-12.
II.	Here the great fact is laid down that Christians are to be the light of the world, and that their conduct and influence are to elevate and bless mankind.....	13-16.
III.	The permanency of the law is declared: like the great Lawgiver, it is holy in its character, it cannot change, and it demands purity in all.....	17-20.
IV.	Hence, spirituality of life, godly control of all man's powers, and self-rule, are essential to the Christian character.....	21-32.
V.	The ordering of speech, and the sanctity of oaths and of vows, are then expounded.....	33-37.
VI.	Revenge is forbidden, and a genial and tender spirit is enjoined.....	38-48.
VII.	Benevolence to the poor is recognized as a duty, and ostentation severely condemned.....	Matt. vi. 1-8.
VIII.	Directions given for prayer, and the form usually known as "The Lord's Prayer" set forth.....	9-15.
IX.	Purity and simplicity of heart enjoined, and the sin of hypocritical display duly censured.....	16-18.
X.	Heavenly treasures and the riches of earth contrasted as to their permanency and value.....	19-22.
XI.	The danger of a mistake on this subject, and hence the need of spiritual illumination.....	23-24.
XII.	Reasons assigned for trusting God, and encouragements to faith and obedient walking.....	25-34.
XIII.	Knowledge of self and charity toward others commended.....	Matt. vii. 1-5.
XIV.	Manifold and precious encouragements to prayer stated and urged on Christians.....	6-11.
XV.	A rule of duty laid down to guide in the intercourse of Christians with all men.....	12-14.
XVI.	How to discriminate about character. The fruit shows the tree, and so with the fruits of ministers.....	15-20.
XVII.	The sad insecurity of the mere formalist, and the uselessness of being only professors.....	21-23.
XVIII.	An illustration to show the wretched fate of the unwise who build on a sandy foundation, and the safety of those who are resting on the Rock of Salvation.....	24-29.

INCIDENTS AT THE TRIAL OF OUR LORD.

AFTER the observance of the Paschal feast and having instituted the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, to be observed in commemoration of the Great Sacrifice which was about to be offered, JESUS and His Disciples went together to the first scene of his suffering, at the base of the Mount of Olives (Matt. xxvi. 30; Mark xiv. 26; Luke xxii. 39).

Crossing the brook Kedron, they entered the Garden of Gethsemane (the oil-press). A part of this garden still remains, and the few olive trees which continue to live in it seem to be old enough to have been growing in our Saviour's time. Here JESUS took PETER, JAMES and JOHN to be near Him during the awful scene of His Agony. Thereafter, the traitor and the officers of the temple appeared, and having arrested Him, His alarmed Disciples forsook Him and fled; but the zeal of PETER and the love of JOHN led them to follow at a distance (Matt. xxvi. 36-56; Mark xiv. 32-50; Luke xxii. 39-53; John xviii. 2-11).

TAKEN BEFORE ANNAS.

The Divine Prisoner was taken first to the house of ANNAS, the father-in-law of the High-priest, CAIAPHAS, probably to ascertain if it would be safe to risk a public trial. It is obvious that all parties among the rulers desired to go forward, and ANNAS sent Him bound to CAIAPHAS, who had already publicly advised His death (John xviii. 13, 14, 24).

ARRAIGNED BEFORE CAIAPHAS.

The examination took place in the house of CAIAPHAS, and here the melancholy denial of PETER occurred. To understand the scene, it should be remembered that Oriental houses and palaces were erected with an open court-yard in the centre, and the apartments surrounding and opening into it. In the middle of this yard the servants and officers had made a fire, because of the cold of the spring night. PETER and JOHN had entered, and PETER rashly took his place among the soldiers. The Saviour had been led into one of the chambers, and thus both JESUS and JOHN could hear and see all that took place; thus it is obvious that JOHN's testimony, as recorded in his Gospel, is of the utmost value, as he was an eye witness. "The High-priest asked JESUS of His Disciples and of His Doctrine," evidently desiring to ascertain how far His influence had spread (John xii. 42), especially to learn if any members of the Sanhedrim had become His followers, and thus to prepare for dealing with them as well as with Him. On the first point, JESUS gave no information, and on the second He referred to the evidence of those who had been His hearers, whereupon an officer struck Him for contempt of the High-priest (John xvii. 19-24).

BEFORE THE SANHEDRIM.

At dawn of day (15th of Nisan, i.e., April 6th) the Council (Sanhedrim) met, and JESUS was arraigned before them (Luke xxii. 66). The first object was to convict Him as a false prophet and a blasphemer, and thus according to the Jewish law bring Him in as worthy of death. Two witnesses were required, but the evidence of all who testified was contradictory. They aimed at proving blasphemy against Him for speaking irreverently about the temple, when He referred to His own death and subsequent resurrection, but their testimony failed to establish their charge (Matt. xxii. 59-63; Mark xiv. 55-61). At length the High-priest reproached Him for His silence, and adjured Him by the LIVING GOD to say whether or not he was the CHRIST, the SON OF GOD. He then plainly said, I AM, and warned them of the time when they should see Him sitting in His Power, at the Right Hand of God and Coming in the Clouds of Heaven. He was forthwith condemned for blasphemy, whereupon the officers covered His face, spat on Him, and buffeted Him, mocking and asking Him to say who it was that struck Him (Matt. xxvi. 63-68; Mark xiv. 61-65; Luke xxii. 67-71 and 63-65; comp. Isa. l. 6; liii. 7). According to Jewish law, he would now have been led out of the city and stoned to death. But "the sceptre had departed from Judah," and the power of life and death did not now rest in Jewish hands. Their national life had ended, and the time must therefore have arrived when the Shiloh had come (Gen. xlix. 10). Hence, they unwittingly fulfilled the prophecy of JESUS respecting His Death. It was effected by the act of PILATE and the consent of HEROD, so that the ecclesiastical rulers of the Jews and the civil authority of Rome combined (comp. Ps. i.), and thus that form of death was inflicted which was the most painful, the most ignominious, and being the usual punishment of slaves and the most degraded criminals, attested the depth of that humiliation to which THE SON OF GOD descended for the salvation of man (Gal. iii. 10; vi. 14; Phil. ii. 8; Heb. xii. 2; Col. ii. 14).

THENCE TAKEN TO THE ROMAN PROCURATOR, PONTIUS PILATE.

JESUS was then led to the Pretorium, where the Roman Procurator PONTIUS PILATE had taken his seat early in the morning. The Jews could not enter a court that was inaugurated with heathen sacrifices without being polluted, and therefore unable to keep the feast, so PILATE came out to ascertain the charge against the prisoner. They accused Him at first as a malefactor, and next with the political offence of forbidding the people to pay tribute to Cæsar, and with the desire also of making Himself a King; thus aggravating their guilt (of malevolence) by falsehood, as they knew that they had in vain sought to entrap Him into a political offence, and that He had even by a miracle provided for the payment of the Roman tax. JESUS replied to the interrogation of PILATE that His "Kingdom was not of this world." After further inquiry, PILATE attempted to dismiss Him, but the priests and the elders assailed Him with other charges (Matt. xxvii. 1, 2, 11, 14; Mark xv. 1-5; Luke xxiii. 1-5; John xviii. 28-38; comp. Isa. liii. 7)

BY PILATE SENT TO HEROD ANTIPAS.

At the mention of Galilee as the scene of His seditious teaching, PILATE resolved to send him to HEROD ANTIPAS, who had come to Jerusalem to the Passover—a practice by which he hoped to conciliate the Jews. HEROD was pleased by the conduct of PILATE, with whom he had been long at variance, but getting no information from JESUS, he sent Him back again to PILATE, and thus "the kings of the earth set themselves and the rulers take counsel together against THE LORD and against His ANOINTED" (Luke xxiii. 4-12; Ps. ii. 1, 2; comp. Acts iv. 25, 26).

AGAIN BEFORE PILATE—BARABBAS PREFERRED TO JESUS.

Obliged to decide the case, PILATE tried an appeal from the rulers to the people. Knowing that the envy and malice of the priests had instigated the charge, he proposed to liberate Him whom the populace had lately hailed with such enthusiasm. The cunning of the priests, however, defeated the scheme. They knew that the brigands who opposed the Roman power were favorites with the people, and that one of this class had forfeited his life and was lying under sentence of death. The priests therefore suggested the liberation of BARABBAS, and as the people saw that no political change was likely to be effected by JESUS, they took up the cry, "Not this man, but BARABBAS!" Again PILATE tried to bring them to reason, being affected by the interference of his wife. To his inquiry, "What will ye then that I shall do to Him, whom ye call king of the Jews?" the vehement outcry of the fickle mob was, "Crucify Him!" The loud cries of the populace prevailed over reason, conscience and justice, and PILATE yielded up JESUS to their will, washing his hands and protesting before the people that he "was innocent of the blood of this just person." They accepted the awful responsibility, exclaiming, "His blood be on us and on our children" (Matt. xxvii. 15-26; Mark xv. 6-15; Luke xxiii. 13-25; John xviii. 39-40).

THE PURPLE ROBE, THE REED SCEPTRE, THE CROWN OF THORNS.

JESUS was now handed over to the Roman soldiers. Their hatred and contempt of the seditious Jews led them to treat with great indignity a person whom they believed to be a peasant aiming at political power. Scourging always preceded crucifixion, but in addition to this torture, they added the mockery of a royal insignia, crowning His head with thorns, giving Him a reed as a sceptre and assailing Him with blows and violence (Matt. xxvii. 26-30; Mark xv. 15-19; John xix. 1-3).

PILATE'S LAST WEAK EFFORT TO RELEASE JESUS.

The scene seems to have incited PILATE to make yet another effort, and if unsuccessful, he would at least insult the Jews. Knowing Him to be innocent, he presented Him in the robes of mockery, but he was still assailed with the cry, "Crucify Him!" "Take you Him and crucify Him, for I find no fault in Him," rejoined PILATE, well knowing that they dared not take him at his word. Leading JESUS back into the hall, he asked Him, "Whence art thou?" and urged the question with the intimation that he had power to crucify Him, or to set Him free. The Saviour assured him that he had no power, unless it were given him from above, and then assured PILATE of the guilt of his wicked betrayers. Alarmed, PILATE determines to release him, but again the weak and unprincipled man yields to fear, for the Jews knew what above all things he dreaded. They knew the character of his administration, and how much he feared an imperial examination into his tyrannical rule; and therefore, "If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend," was their triumphant appeal, and the fear of acquitting a usurper induced the selfish and unjust ruler to condemn to death the innocent and the just ONE. Yielding Him to their fury, he inquired, "Shall I crucify your king?" and the answer was an abjuring of the independence which had been a passion with the Jews: "We have no king but Cæsar!" (Matt. xxvii. 26-30; Mark xv. 15-19; John xix. 1-16).

GOD'S PUNISHMENT OF THE PARTICIPATORS IN THE CRIME.

The Providence of GOD took the Jews at their word, and their last futile efforts for freedom ended in their dispersion over the world. The retribution which also fell on the chief actors in this greatest of crimes which was ever enacted in the world's history was no less signal. PILATE afterward met the actual fate which he had dreaded, for he was degraded and degraded, and in a far distant land of disgraceful exile closed his life by suicide. HEROD deservedly met a similar fate, as he was divested of power and banished for the rapacity and cruelty of his rule. After a miserable life he died in exile. CAIAPHAS was deposed. There was no delay in the doom of the miserable traitor, JUDAS. In remorse he carried back the thirty pieces of silver to the chief-priests, acknowledged his sin, encountered their mockery and disdain, and the wretched man, in hopeless despair, went out and hanged himself. The chief-priests, who had perpetrated such iniquity, were yet such religious formalists that they would not return the silver to the treasury, as it had been the price of blood, and so they purchased the potter's field, without the city, as a burial-place for strangers, and thus they fulfilled to the very letter the prophecy of Zechariah (xi. 12, etc.). It may have been the place where JUDAS committed suicide, and the double memorial of the scene and the price of blood was preserved in its name, Aceldama, the field of blood (Matt. xxvii. 2-10; Acts i. 18, 19), by which it was afterward known.

INCIDENTS AT THE CRUCIFIXION.

THE incidents of the Great Sacrifice may be classified under the heads of man-ner, place and time. Our contemplation of the awful scene may be made more affecting by viewing these in order, while our gratitude and love may be rendered more heartfelt and fervid. It was a Roman execution, conducted in the usual form, with certain variations arising from incidental circumstances.

THE PLACE—CALVARY.

THE place was necessarily without the city (Acts vii. 58; Heb. xiii. 11-13; comp. Ex. xxix. 14; Lev. iv. 11, 12, 21; vi. 30; ix. 11; xvi. 27; Num. xix. 3); but the exact locality is unknown. It was near one of the gates, and beside a public road, but there is no mention of its being on a "hill" or "mount." The name of CALVARY, which occurs in Luke, is the Latin translation of the Greek word (kranion), by which all four Evangelists explain the Hebrew term GOLGOTHA (Matt. xxvii. 33, 34; Mark xv. 22, 23; Luke xxiii. 33; John xix. 17). As a mark of shame and ignominy, the criminal had to carry his cross to the place of execution, and CHRIST was thus led forth with two culprits, who were "justly in the same condemnation" (Luke xxiii. 26, 32, 41; comp. Isa. liii. 12). Everlasting honor was laid on SIMON, a man of Cyrene, whom the soldiers seized as he was entering the city, and on whom they laid the load under which JESUS had sunk. It was then that He told the women, who had followed Him, weeping, to mourn rather for the judgments which were coming on the land (Matt. xxvii. 31, 32; Mark xv. 20, 21; Luke xxiii. 26-32; John xix. 17).

THE CRUCIFIXION—THE PRAYER FOR HIS MURDERERS.

THE condemned were stripped at the place of crucifixion and fastened to the cross, which was usually of the form known by the name of the "Roman Cross," but not nearly so high as is commonly represented. Usually, the feet of the sufferer were only about a foot or two above the ground, so that, instead of being raised aloft and looking downward, JESUS suffered in the midst of His persecutors. The body was either nailed or bound by cords to the cross, and sometimes both modes were adopted. Our LORD was nailed both by the hands and the feet, as had been foretold (Ps. xxii. 16; Zech. xii. 10; John xx. 25, 27; comp. Rev. i. 7), a method exquisitely painful, though tending perhaps to shorten the torture. As in our SAVIOUR'S case, when the cross was not already fixed and standing, the sufferer was fastened to the wood as it lay on the ground, and the shock must have been agonizing when the cross was dropped into its place in the ground. Usually some drug was given to deaden the sense of these tortures, but our LORD refused the mixture of wine and myrrh that was offered to Him. He bore the agony of death in meekness and silence, as had been predicted of Him by Isaiah, and thus between two malefactors He died, the Just for the unjust, being "numbered with the transgressors" (Matt. xxvii. 38; Mark xv. 27, 28; Luke xxiii. 33; John xix. 18). While suspended on the cross His first saying—an utterance never to be forgotten—was a prayer for His murderers: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do" (Luke xxiii. 34).

THE TIME—THE GUARD.

THE time of our LORD'S crucifixion was the third hour (or 9 o'clock A. M.), the very time when the morning sacrifice was offered (Mark xv. 25); and His death was at the ninth hour, which was the time of the evening sacrifice; and the space of the intervening six hours was divided at noon by the commencement of the miraculous darkness. The cross was watched by a centurion and a guard of four Roman soldiers. The garments of the sufferers were their perquisites, and so the raiment of our LORD was divided among them, except the upper robe, which was without a seam; the soldiers cast lots for it, thus unconsciously fulfilling another prophecy: "They parted my raiment among them, and for my vesture they did cast lots" (Matt. xxvii. 35; Luke xiii. 34; John xix. 23; Ps. xxii. 18).

THE INSCRIPTION ON THE CROSS.

PILATE was enabled again to insult the Jews by the inscription which, according to custom, was placed over the culprit's head to indicate his crime. Hebrew, Greek and Latin were now understood and spoken by the people in Jerusalem, and therefore he wrote the label in these tongues. This fact in some measure explains the various readings of the Evangelists, who aimed only at giving the substance of the inscription, without noting the differences of expression in the three languages.

THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS (Matthew).

THE KING OF THE JEWS (Mark).

THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS (Luke).

JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS (John).

The chief priests felt the insult, and desired a change in the inscription, but PILATE contemptuously refused, saying, "What I have written, I have written" (Matt. xxvii. 31-38; Mark xv. 20-28; Luke xxiii. 26-34, 38; John xix. 17-24).

THE GRACIOUS PROMISE TO THE PENITENT ROBBER.

FOR three hours (9-12 A. M.) JESUS hung on the cross, exposed to the insults of the rulers and of the fickle rabble, who had changed when they saw Him apparently helpless in the hands of His enemies. Some stood to enjoy the sight, others, passing in and out of the city gate wagging their heads, taunted Him with the very prophecy which was being fulfilled—the destruction of the temple of His body that it might be raised again in three days. The chief priests even professed that they would believe on Him if He would establish His Divine power by coming down from the cross; and one of the culprits beside Him joined in railing at Him, asking as a proof of His mission that they might be delivered from the cross. The other, confessing the justice of their sentence, reproved his comrade, and uttered the memorable prayer, "LORD, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." For the second time JESUS spoke, and assured the dying penitent: "Verily, I say unto thee, To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise" (Matt. xxvii. 39-44; Mark xv. 29-32; Luke xxiii. 35-37, 39-43).

THE WOMEN AT THE CROSS.

THREE women, together with JOHN, had lingered at the cross, His mother, her sister and Mary of Magdala—the three Marys. In the hour of His agony He bade His mother to look on John as her son, and John to receive her as his mother; "and from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home" (John xix. 25).

THE MIRACULOUS DARKNESS.

IT was now noon, yet a supernatural darkness covered all the land from the sixth to the ninth hour. The Jewish months were lunar, and the Passover was in the middle of the month when the moon was full; therefore this obscuration could not be an eclipse. Deeper far than this darkness was the gloom that rested on the SAVIOUR'S soul, as He bore the burden of Divine wrath for the sins of men. At the ninth hour, He exclaimed, "My God! my God! why hast thou forsaken me?" Catching at the word "Eli," His utterance was misunderstood by those around Him as an appeal to the prophet Elijah. At this moment the Sufferer's mortal frame endured its last agony of intense thirst, and He fulfilled another prophecy by the exclamation, "I thirst." One of the spectators filled a sponge with the acid wine and water that the Roman soldiers ordinarily drank, and raised it to His mouth on the end of a stalk of hyssop. JESUS refused it, while the others said, "Let us see if Elijah will come to help Him" (Matt. xxvii. 45-49; Mark xv. 33-36; Luke xxiii. 44, 45; John xix. 28, 29).

THE DEATH OF JESUS.

ALL that the LAMB OF GOD could do for man had been endured; and now the end of His agony and the completion of His great redemption work are announced by the utterance, "It is FINISHED," and yielding His soul to God, He exclaims, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit;" and bowing His head on His breast, He expired (Matt. xxvii. 50; Mark xv. 37; Luke xxiii. 46; John xix. 30).

PORTENTS AT CHRIST'S DEATH—CONVERSION OF THE CENTURION.

THE priest who entered the holy place with the blood of the evening sacrifice at the very hour of His death saw that the veil was rent from the top to the bottom, thus intimating that "a new and living way was consecrated for us to enter into the holiest of all, by the blood of JESUS, through the veil, that is to say, His flesh" (Heb. x. 19, foll.). The rocks around Jerusalem were rent by an earthquake, the graves were opened and many of the saints arose and were seen in the city after his resurrection. All these wonders and evidences did not suffice to subdue the hardened spirit of the Jews, but in the death of JESUS the Roman centurion saw enough to satisfy his mind that "this was the Son of God!"

HIS DEATH MADE CERTAIN—THE WATER AND THE BLOOD.

AT sunset the Sabbath would begin. "That Sabbath-day was a high day," being the second day of the Feast of Unleavened Bread, when the first-fruits of the harvest were offered in the Temple, and whence the fifty days were reckoned to the Day of Pentecost. For that Sabbath this day was "the preparation." Now they would put away all defilements and all signs of mourning. They had just enacted a deed which would have profaned any day, but they could not endure its defilement by the consequences of their judicial murder. Their request that the sufferings of those on the cross might be ended was granted by PILATE, who consented that the soldiers might break their legs, and so hasten their death. The two malefactors were thus treated, but CHRIST was found to be dead already, hence His limbs were not broken. To be sure, however, that He was really dead, one of the soldiers pierced His side with a spear, and from the wound there flowed blood and water. Thus, in the death of Him, the true Paschal Lamb, two prophecies were fulfilled—"A bone of him shall not be broken," and, "They shall look on him whom they pierced" (John xix. 31-42; comp. Ex. xii. 46; Ps. xxxiv. 20; Zech. xii. 10; Ps. xxii. 16, 17; Rev. i. 7). Thus is the death of CHRIST attested, and even PILATE procures additional testimony from the centurion (Mark xv. 44, 45), because of his surprise at the briefness of the Sufferer's agony. Knowing the relation of these facts to the subsequent resurrection, JOHN, who was a witness of the scene, gives in detail all the incidents as they passed before his eyes.

JESUS LAID IN THE TOMB.

JOSEPH of Arimathea, a rich man and a member of the Sanhedrim, and who was secretly a disciple of JESUS, applied to PILATE for the body, who, when he was satisfied that JESUS was really dead, complied with his request. The conduct of JOSEPH encouraged NICODEMUS, who brought myrrh and aloes to anoint the corpse. They took the body down from the cross, rolled it in linen with the spices, and, because the Sabbath was at hand, they laid it hastily in a newly-made sepulchre, which JOSEPH had prepared for himself, in an adjoining garden. To secure the body until the Sabbath was past, they rolled a great stone against the door and departed. Thus was the prophecy of Isaiah fulfilled (liii. 9), that He should "make his grave with the rich." The chief priests remembered with anxiety the prediction that JESUS had uttered respecting His resurrection, and therefore, to guard against any devices of His followers, they obtained from PILATE a guard of soldiers, who sealed the stone and watched at the tomb (Matt. xxvii. 62-66).

THE RESURRECTION AND ASCENSION.

THE FIRST LORD'S DAY.

17th of Nisan (April 8th).—As the Resurrection is the great fact, so the day of its occurrence is the great day of Christianity. Ever since it has been called by the name of the LORD'S DAY (Rev. vii. 10); and to this epoch of the new creation of all things, marked by the NEW LIFE of CHRIST, all the permanent sanctity of the primeval Sabbath was transferred (John xx. 26; Acts xx. 7; 1 Cor. xvi. 2).

The Resurrection itself is related only by MATTHEW (xxviii. 2-4), who may have learned the facts from one or other of the Roman guard after they had got free from the danger in which they stood because of their falsehood and avowed unfaithfulness. All who heard it must have known that their story was absurd, and that, had they been asleep, they could not have known what had transpired. According to MARK, the Resurrection occurred early on the first day of the week, which commenced from the sunset of the evening before (Mark xvi. 9). It had already taken place when the first visit was paid to the sepulchre, "while it was yet dark," "as it began to dawn" (John xx. 1; Matt. xxviii. 1). Whatever portion of this day JESUS was in the tomb was, according to the Jewish custom, reckoned a day, and in the same manner the interval between His entombment and sunset on Friday was counted as a day, and thus He was three days in the earth (Matt. xii. 40; xvi. 21; xx. 19; xxvii. 63; Mark viii. 31; ix. 31; x. 34; Luke ix. 22; xviii. 33; John ii. 19, etc.).

VISIT OF THE WOMEN TO THE SEPULCHRE.

THE Jews resumed the business of ordinary life the moment that the Sabbath closed. The two MARYS were therefore able during the evening to procure the spices required to complete the hasty and partial embalment by NICODEMUS, and in the early dawn they approached the tomb, with certain other women, wondering how they would get the stone rolled away from the sepulchre. Reaching the tomb about sunrise, they found it open, and entering, they saw that the body of JESUS was not there (Matt. xxviii. 1; Mark xvi. 1-4; Luke xxiv. 1-3, 10; John xx. 1, 2).

The ardent spirit of MARY MAGDALENE led her to run at once and tell PETER of the indignity which she concluded the enemies of JESUS had perpetrated in removing His body.

The other women now entered, and there they saw an angel sitting on the right side, who told them that JESUS had arisen, and would meet His disciples in Galilee.

FIRST APPEARANCE OF THE RISEN SAVIOUR.

To the Women on their Return from the Sepulchre.—On their way back JESUS appeared to them and addressed them. They fell down to worship Him, and received from Him the message that had already been delivered by the angel (Matt. xxviii. 9, 10). The Apostles were yet in darkness, and they received the intelligence "as idle tales" (Luke xxiv. 9, 11).

VISIT OF PETER AND JOHN TO THE SEPULCHRE.

WHEN they heard from MARY her tidings, PETER and JOHN hastened to see for themselves, while the other women were in converse with the other Apostles. JOHN reached the tomb first, and, looking in, he saw the grave-clothes, but when PETER arrived he entered at once, and saw the linen clothes lying as they had been left, and the napkin that had been around the head folded and lying by itself (John xx. 3-10; comp. Luke xxiv. 12), showing that the Apostles could not have stolen the body, as they would have carried off all these things in their haste.

SECOND APPEARANCE OF JESUS.

To Mary Magdalene at the Sepulchre.—MARY had followed PETER and JOHN to the sepulchre, and when she arrived they had departed. Looking into the tomb, she saw two angels sitting at the head and feet where the body of JESUS had lain. Turning away she saw JESUS, but, excited and weeping, she did not recognize Him in her great mental confusion. The word "MARY," from the lips of our LORD, recalled her to herself, and in her excitement she would have embraced Him, but the mysterious words, "Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father," restrained her, and at His desire she went to intimate to the disciples His approaching Ascension (John xx. 11-18; Mark xvi. 9-11).

THIRD APPEARANCE OF OUR LORD.

To Peter.—PAUL states that immediately after our LORD'S Resurrection "He was seen of CEPHAS," before He appeared to the other Apostles (1 Cor. xv. 5). LUKE also mentions this appearance very emphatically in connection with the journey to Emmaus (Luke xxiv. 34).

OUR LORD'S FOURTH APPEARANCE.

The Journey to Emmaus.—The mental state of the Disciples may be seen by Luke xxiv. 13-35. CLEOPAS and his companion seem to have taken this journey merely for the sake of communion with each other respecting the bearing of the recent events on the Messiahship of JESUS. As they journey, an apparent stranger joins them, and, having asked them of the subject in which they seem so absorbed, quietly reviews the whole matter, expounding the Scriptures that related to the Messiah. Though their "hearts burn," they fail to recognize Him until He makes Himself known in the "breaking of bread," and no sooner are their eyes opened than "He vanishes out of their sight."

OUR LORD'S FIFTH APPEARANCE.

THE Apostles, all except THOMAS, were met together, when suddenly JESUS appeared in the midst of them. He called them to feel His body, and showed them His hands and His feet. He even ate food with them, and opened their minds to understand what was written of Him in the Law, the Prophets and the Psalms. He indicated the character of their Apostolic mission as witnesses of His ministry and of His Resurrection, and that they were to be preachers of repentance and remission of sins in His name to all nations. Enjoining them to wait at Jerusalem for the descent of the HOLY SPIRIT to qualify them for their work, He departed (Mark xvi. 14-18; Luke xxiv. 36-49; John xx. 19-23; 1 Cor. xv. 5, "then of the twelve").

CHRIST'S SIXTH APPEARANCE.

Second Appearance to the Assembled Disciples with Thomas.—That we find the disciples again assembled on the first day of the following week, and our LORD'S presence blessing their meeting, goes far to mark the LORD'S DAY as sacred. It was then that THOMAS, hitherto incredulous, was taught by the evidence of his senses that our LORD was risen indeed (John xx. 24-29).

THE SEVENTH APPEARANCE OF OUR SAVIOUR.

The Third Appearance of Jesus to the Apostles (seven of them) by the Lake of Galilee.—The meeting at the lake, which JOHN describes (xxi. 1-24), must have been previous to that which took place by appointment on the mountain in Galilee. Seven of the Apostles had returned to their avocations, and by a miraculous draught of fishes JESUS reveals Himself to them. It was now that He dealt so tenderly with PETER, and restored him after his fall.

THE EIGHTH APPEARANCE OF JESUS CHRIST.

To His Disciples in Galilee.—MATTHEW describes how the Disciples went to the place appointed on the mountain in Galilee (xxviii. 16, 17), and it is almost certain that it was to this assembly that PAUL refers when he says that JESUS was seen of "above five hundred brethren at once" (1 Cor. xv. 6). Here, in the region where His ministry had chiefly been spent, He closes it with the memorable commission (Matt. xxviii. 18-20) by which He sends forth His Apostles and disciples to be heralds of salvation to mankind.

CHRIST'S NINTH APPEARANCE.

To James.—After stating that JESUS was seen by such a great body of witnesses, PAUL immediately adds, "After that He was seen of JAMES," and this appears to have been a special interview, as JAMES was not among the Apostles at the Lake of Galilee.

HIS TENTH APPEARANCE, AND ASCENSION.

Our Lord's Last Interview with the Apostles, and His Ascension.—His tenth appearance. This last scene was specially reserved for the Apostles alone, who were to be His witnesses for His Resurrection and Ascension. PETER rests on the fact that when GOD raised JESUS from the dead, "He showed Him openly not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of GOD, even to us who did eat and drink with Him after He rose from the dead" (Acts x. 40, 41).

Thus, during forty days, JESUS "showed Himself after His passion by many infallible proofs." As MOSES was forty days on the Mount, and ELIJAH the same time in Horeb, and as JESUS was forty days in the wilderness tempted of the devil, so it appears that a similar period was allotted to establish the fact of His Resurrection. At last, on the fortieth day, the Apostles were assembled with JESUS at Jerusalem (it would seem by special appointment, Acts i. 4; comp. v. 6), and He desired them not to depart thence till they received the promise of the FATHER, the baptism with the HOLY GHOST. Rebuking their desire to know when He would restore the kingdom to Israel, He promised them power for the work which they had to do in His Name in Jerusalem, in Judea and Samaria, and to the ends of the earth (Acts i. 4-8). And now He led them forth over the very ground He had traversed with them six weeks before, when He entered the city for His sufferings. The farther or eastern slope of the Mount of Olives, overlooking Bethany, was called by that name, and having reached that locality, He blessed them with uplifted hands, and being received as into a chariot by a cloud, He ascended from their sight into Heaven. Meanwhile, the Disciples scarcely recollected that this was what He had Himself foretold: "What and if ye shall see the SON OF MAN ascend up where He was before?" (John vi. 62). They stood gazing up after Him, lost in admiration, until they were aroused by the appearance of two angels standing by them and declaring that He would so come again in like manner as they had seen Him ascending into Heaven. Having worshipped their GLORIFIED LORD, they returned from the Mount of Olives to Jerusalem with great joy; and while awaiting the promised gift of the HOLY GHOST, they spent the time in the Temple praising and blessing GOD (Luke xxiv. 50-53; Acts i. 1-12).

The narrative may be appropriately closed by referring to the two points on which JOHN insists: first, that we have only a small part recorded of what our LORD said and did while on earth; and secondly, that what we have, has been written with a specific object—"that we might believe that JESUS IS THE CHRIST, THE SON OF GOD, and that, believing, we might have LIFE THROUGH HIS NAME" (John xx. 30, 31; xxi. 25).

Isa liii. 4..... 5..... 6.....	SURELY he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.	John xiv. 6...	I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father but by me.
Dan. ix. 24.... 26.....	To finish the transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the Most Holy. After three score and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself.	John xv. 13...	Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.
Zech. xiii. 1...	There shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness.	John xvii. 2... 3...	As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him. This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.
Matt. i. 21.....	Thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins.	Acts iv. 11.... 12....	This is the stone that was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.
Matt. xx. 28... See Mark x. 45.	The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.	Acts v. 30..... 31.....	The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree. Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins.
Matt. xxvi. 28. See	This is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins.	Acts x. 36..... 43.....	God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ: (he is Lord of all.) Through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins.
Mark xiv. 24. Luke i. 68..... 69..... 76..... 77.....	Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people, And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David. Thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways; to give knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins.	Acts xiii. 23.. 38.. 39..	Of this man's seed hath God, according to his promise, raised unto Israel a Saviour, Jesus: through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins: and by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses.
Luke ii. 11....	Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.	Acts xv. 11...	We believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they.
Luke xxii. 19. 20.	He took bread, and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me. Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you.	Acts xvi. 31...	Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house.
John i. 29.....	Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.	Acts xx. 28...	Feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood.
John iii. 14.... 15.... 16....	As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life. For God so loved the world, that he gave his only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.	Rom. iii. 24... 25...	Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus: Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God.
17....	For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved.	Rom. iv. 25...	Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification.
John v. 4).....	And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life.	Rom. v. 6..... 7..... 8..... 9.....	When we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly. Scarcely for a righteous man will one die; yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die. But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. Much more then, being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him. For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life. We also joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the atonement. But not as the offence, so also is the free gift: for if through the offence of one many be dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man Jesus, Christ, hath abounded unto many. And not as it was by one that sinned, so is the gift: for the judgment was by one to condemnation, but the free gift is of many offences unto justification. For if by one man's offence death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ. Therefore, as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life. For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous. But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound: that as sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord.
John vi. 27.... 32.... 33.... 35.... 37.... 39.... 51.... 53.... 54.... 55.... 56.... 57.... 58....	Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you. My Father giveth you the true bread from heaven. For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world. I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst. Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out. Of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day. I am the living bread which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world. Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day. For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed. He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him. He that eateth me, even he shall live by me. This is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead; he that eateth of this bread shall live for ever.	Rom. vi. 3..... 4..... 5..... 9..... 10..... 22..... 23.....	Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection. Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him. For in that he died, he died unto sin once. Now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.
John x. 7, 9... 10... 11... 14... 15... 17... 27... 28...	I am the door of the sheep. I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture. I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine. As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep. Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again. My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me. And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand.	Rom. viii. 3... 32... 34... 39...	God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh. He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things? Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died. Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall he able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.
John xii. 24... 31... 32... 33...	Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. Now is the judgment of this world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me. This he said, signifying what death he should die.

THE SUFFERINGS AND DEATH OF CHRIST.

THE BELIEVER'S PARDON AND SALVATION: THEIR OBJECT AND RESULT.

TEXT.	THE TESTIMONY.	TEXT.	THE TESTIMONY.
Rom. x. 9.....	If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.	Heb. vii. 22... 25...	By so much was Jesus made a surety of a better testament. Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them.
Rom. xiv. 9...	To this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living.	27...	Who needeth not daily, as those high-priests, to offer up sacrifice, first for his own sins, and then for the people's: for this he did once, when he offered up himself.
1 Cor. i. 30....	Of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption.	28....	For the law maketh men high-priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law, maketh the Son, who is consecrated for evermore.
1 Cor. iii. 11...	Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.	Heb. ix. 12....	Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood, he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us.
1 Cor. v. 7.....	Even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us.	13....	For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh; how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God.
1 Cor. vi. 11... 20....	But ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus. Ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's.	14....	And for this cause he is the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance.
1 Cor. xv. 3....	Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures.	15....	For where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator. For a testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth.
2 Cor. v. 14.... 15....	The love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead: And that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again.	16.... 17....	Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high-priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others; for then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world; but now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.
19....	God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation. He hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.	25.... 26....	Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many.
21....		28....	We are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.
Gal. iii. 13....	Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree.	12.... 14....	This man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down on the right hand of God; by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified.
Gal. iv. 4..... 5.....	When the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law. To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons.	17, 18 19....	Their sins and iniquities will I remember no more. Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin. Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh.
Eph. i. 7.....	In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace.	20....	To Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel.
Eph. ii. 13.... 14....	Now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. He is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us; having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace; and that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby.	Heb. x. 10.... 12.... 14....	The bodies of those beasts, whose blood is brought into the sanctuary by the high-priest for sin, are burned without the camp. Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate.
15....		17, 18 19....	Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed.
16....		20....	Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit.
Eph. v. 2..... 23.....	Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet smelling savour. Christ is the head of the church: and he is the saviour of the body.	Heb. xii. 24...	Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh.
25, 26...	Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word; that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish.	Heb. xiii. 11.. 12..	The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin. He is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.
27.....		1 Peter ii. 24..	Ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil. Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us.
Col. i. 14..... 20..... 27.....	In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins. Having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself; Christ in you, the hope of glory.	1 Peter iii. 18	God sent his only-begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. We have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world.
Col. ii. 13..... 14..... 15.....	You, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses. Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross; and having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it.	1 Peter iv. 1... 1 John i. 7.... 1 John ii. 2... 1 John iii. 5, 8 16....	This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life. These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God. We know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true; and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life.
1 Thess. v. 9... 10...	God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him.	1 John iv. 9... 10... 14....	Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father.
1 Tim. i. 1, 15.	Lord Jesus Christ, which is our hope; this is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners.	1 John v. 11.. 12.. 13.. 20..	Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth.
1 Tim. ii. 6....	Who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time.	Rev. i. 5..... 6.....	These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God.
2 Tim. i. 1, 9...	Salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.	Rev. v. 9..... 10.....
Titus ii. 13, 14	The great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works.	Rev. vii. 14... 15...
Heb. i. 3.....	When he had by himself purged our sins.
Heb. ii. 3, 9.... 10.... 14....	How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation? We see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man. To make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings. As the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil: and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage. In that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted.
Heb. v. 9.....	Being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him.

WHEN WRITTEN. A. D.	THE BOOKS OF THE FOUR EVANGELISTS, CALLED THE GOSPELS.		WHEN WRITTEN. A. D.
	THE English word GOSPEL signifies "good tidings," and is applied to the Books that are the vehicles of the best of all good tidings to mankind. The Greek name (Ευαγγέλιον) of these Books had the same signification; from this latter comes the title, Evangelists, by which the writers of these good tidings are designated. These four precious Books present a concise record of the Nativity, Life, Words, Works, Death, Resurrection and Ascension of the SON OF MAN, JESUS, GOD MANIFEST IN THE FLESH; they unfold the character and claims and the gracious mission of CHRIST.	THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. LUKE.—This Gospel was written by St. LUKE, "the beloved physician," about A. D. 63-64, while he was with St. PAUL in Rome. St. LUKE, according to the testimony of some of the Fathers, was a native of Antioch. He would appear, from his intimate acquaintance with the Greek language, as well as from his Greek name, Λουκᾶς, to have been of Gentile extraction. But from the Hebrew terms occurring in his writings, and from his accurate knowledge of the Jewish religion, ceremonies and customs, it is highly probable that he was a Jewish proselyte; and, having afterward embraced the Gospel, he became a faithful and zealous companion of St. PAUL in many of his labors and travels (Acts xvi. 10; xx. 5, etc.). We learn from Acts xxviii. 15 and Philem. 24 that he was with the Apostle at the time of his first captivity at Rome; and from 2 Tim. iv. 11 that, during his second imprisonment, St. LUKE alone remained by his side. TERTULLIAN and CHRYSOSTOM call St. PAUL St. LUKE's master and teacher, and EUSEBIUS says he was for the most part a companion of that Apostle. Though, like St. MARK, he was not an Apostle, nor is he once mentioned in the Gospels, yet this does not diminish the credit due to his narrative, because he himself has told us the sources of information to which the HOLY SPIRIT directed him. While passing over various particulars mentioned by St. MATTHEW and St. MARK, he records many things not mentioned by them. His classical style, in both this Book and the Acts, shows him to have been a scholar, while his Gospel is certainly more of a regular narrative than either of the others, as he evidently preserved the chronological order of the main facts.	63-64 Rome.
38 and 61 Jerusalem.	THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. MATTHEW.—There has been much discussion as to the language in which this Book was written and its date. Some have maintained that it was written in Hebrew, or rather Syro-Chaldaic; others, that its original was in Greek; and others, again, that it was written by the same inspired author in both languages. The last is probably the fact, and the Hebrew copy was written about A. D. 38, the Greek A. D. 61. St. MATTHEW relates what he saw and heard with the most natural and unassuming simplicity, in a plain and perspicuous style. "For simplicity of narrative and an artless relation of facts (without any applause, censure or digressive remarks, on the part of the historian, upon the characters introduced in it; without any intermixture of his own opinion upon any subject whatsoever), and for a multiplicity of internal marks of credibility, this Gospel certainly has no parallel among human productions." St. MATTHEW wrote primarily for the Jewish Christians, and hence his Gospel abounds, more than either of the other three, in allusions to Jewish customs, and hence, too, he dwells most on those of our Lord's words and acts that had direct reference to the Jews, and points out carefully numerous instances of the fulfilment of prophecies—a line of argument especially calculated to influence the devout Israelite. It is worthy of note, that the outlines of the whole Spiritual system are in this Gospel correctly laid down. St. PAUL has amplified and illustrated, but neither he nor any other Apostle or inspired writer has brought to light one truth, the prototype of which is not found in the words and acts of EMMANUEL, as related by St. MATTHEW. [For a sketch of St. MATTHEW's life, see page 54 of these Aids.]
61 Alexandria	THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. MARK.—St. MARK is supposed to have been "JOHN, whose surname was Mark" (Acts xii. 12), called by St. PETER, in his First Epistle (v. 13), "Marcus, my son," from which it is concluded that he had been converted under St. PETER's preaching. Some have thought that he was the young man mentioned Mark xiv. 51, 52. He was a companion of St. PAUL and St. BARNABAS during their earlier missionary labors, but left them at Perga, in Pamphylia; some time later he became co-laborer with the latter. After this he went to Rome (2 Tim. iv. 11), and thence into Asia, where he again met St. PETER. He wrote his Gospel, it is supposed, under that Apostle's supervision; this supposition is based upon the fact that he is spoken of by PAPIAS, a Christian writer of the Second Century, as St. PETER's "disciple and interpreter," and upon the additional fact that, while he omits many things honorable to that Apostle, he mentions at length all his shortcomings. In fact, JUSTIN MARTYR calls it "the Gospel of St. Peter." (See also 2 Peter i. 15, 16.) The date of the Gospel has been fixed by general consent a little later than that of St. MATTHEW—about A. D. 61. That it was written directly for Gentile and not Jewish converts is evident from the facts that quotations from the Prophets and allusions to Hebrew customs are usually avoided, and, when they occur, explanatory clauses are added. St. MARK is supposed to have died at Alexandria.
	THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. JOHN.—Written at Ephesus, after St. JOHN's release from the Isle of Patmos, about A. D. 97, this Gospel completed 'he Canon of Scripture.' St. JOHN, the "disciple whom JESUS loved," from his call till our Lord's Ascension, was never voluntarily absent from His Master's side: leaning upon His breast, standing at His cross (when all the rest were scattered) and running to the sepulchre, his love was earnest and devoted. "GOD, who distributes His graces and gifts severally as He pleases, seems to have given St. JOHN a peculiar insight into the mysteries of Divine love." He takes a particular pleasure in enlarging upon it, and treats of it in a plain and inartificial style, but yet with such a lofty eloquence as is above the rules of human art, and can only be ascribed to the influence of that HOLY SPIRIT who gave him utterance. Some learned writers have thought that he wrote the Gospel as an answer to certain vile heresies that had grown up and were disturbing the Apostolic Church; it was certainly written for a more catholic purpose, which he distinctly states: "THESE ARE WRITTEN THAT YE MIGHT BELIEVE THAT JESUS IS THE CHRIST, THE SON OF GOD; AND THAT BELIEVING, YE MIGHT HAVE LIFE THROUGH HIS NAME." St. JOHN has recorded those of our LORD'S discourses, parables, miracles and prayers which the most clearly showed forth His character as GOD MANIFEST IN THE FLESH, and displayed His wondrous love to man, evidenced by His acts and words as well as by His Vicarious Sufferings and Death. [For a sketch of St. JOHN's life, see page 54 of these Aids.]	97 Ephesus.
	Thus, we have the life of our LORD in four narratives, which differ sufficiently in their details to show their independence of each other, and yet are so fully in accord on points of importance as to demonstrate that the same SPIRIT guided and influenced the mind and directed the work of their several writers (John xiv. 26).
	THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.
64 Rom 3.	THIS Book is a connecting link between the Gospels and Epistles—a useful postscript to the former and a valuable preface or introduction to the latter, especially to those of St. PAUL. The commencement acknowledges it to be a sequel to the Gospel according to St. LUKE; and this, with the fact that the same style prevails, proves it to have come from the pen of the same writer. It was probably published about the year 64, at Rome, his arrival at which city, with St. PAUL, the writer mentions near the close of the Book. Though its name would imply that it was a history of the work of all the Apostles, yet the greater part of it is an account of St. PAUL's missionary travels, showing how the Gospel privileges were offered to and accepted by the Gentiles. It covers upward of thirty years, commencing with the Ascension of our LORD and closing with the second year of St. PAUL in Rome. The Book of the Acts is one of the most important, as well as interesting, portions of the Sacred History, materially assisting us in understanding both the Gospel narratives and the Apostolic Letters. While it is unexceptionable as a literary composition, its language is so plain and unassuming	that it is grand in its very simplicity; besides, it is so unmistakably honest and impartial, that as a mere history it commands the respect of the reader. Some of the descriptive passages are exceedingly graphic, presenting so vivid a picture of the several events that the reader can almost imagine himself an eye-witness; e. g., the sublime account of the effusion of the Holy Ghost on the Day of Pentecost, of the miraculous gift of tongues, of the effect on the multitude, the sneering charge of drunkenness, and St. PETER's convincing sermon that pricked many to the heart and caused the anxious question, "What shall we do?" (see Acts ii.); the glowing description of St. STEPHEN's preaching and words, his arraignment, eloquent defence and glorious death (Acts vi. 8-vii. 60); the impressive narrative of the conspiracy to kill St. PAUL, its discovery by his nephew, who makes the plot known to the chief captain, and this officer thwarts the plotters by sending the Apostle secretly under heavy escort to FELIX; and though less exalted, not less strikingly true to life, is the account of the riotous mob raised by DEMETRIUS (Acts xix. 32), and again of the Jewish rabble (Acts xxi. 34).

WHEN WRITTEN. A. D.	THE EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL, THE APOSTLE.	WHEN WRITTEN. A. D.
	THE APOSTOLIC EPISTLES, of which St. PAUL wrote fourteen, are a Divinely-inspired commentary and an authoritative authentic exposition of the truths and doctrines of our holy religion, as uttered by our LORD and recorded in the Gospels. They contain the complete development of those "many things" which JESUS told His Disciples they were "not able to bear" during His life, and which were to be taught them by the HOLY GHOST. The Pauline Epistles are strongly controversial: they first discuss and settle the questions in controversy, and refute such erroneous ideas or doctrines as had sprung up in the Church addressed, then apply the truths deduced and proven to practical edification and holiness. In studying these letters three facts must be borne in mind: his quotations from the Old Testament are taken from the Septuagint version, then in general use; in some instances he unites passages from different prophets, without indicating the separating points; and in other places he gives the sense of a passage without regard to the precise language.
58 Corinth.	THE EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS.—It is not known by whom the Gospel had been carried to Rome, though it is thought by some of the Pentecostal converts (Acts ii. 10). St. PAUL had not yet been at Rome, but had heard of the state of the Church there from Aquila and Priscilla, who had been banished by the edict of Claudius. It was written at Corinth and addressed to the Church at Rome, which was composed of both Jews and Gentile converts. Its object was to confirm them in the faith; to guard them against the errors of Judaizing Christians; to show that Faith in JESUS CHRIST could alone obtain for them salvation. It is very valuable on account of its arguments as to the necessity, excellence and universality of the Gospel Dispensation. It is a writing which, for sublimity and truth of sentiment, for brevity and strength of expression, for regularity in its structure, and, above all, for the unspeakable importance of the discoveries which it contains, stands unrivalled by any mere human composition, and as far exceeds the most celebrated productions of the learned Greeks and Romans as the shining of the sun exceeds the twinkling of the stars.	62 Rome.
57 Ephesus.	THE FIRST EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS was written at Ephesus, in the year 57, to the Church at Corinth, a city of Greece, situate on the isthmus of that name. Its object is to notice and reprove various abuses and disorders which had crept into the Church, and to exhort the members to union, simplicity and purity of life. It contains directions about the marriage state; advice with reference to partaking of meats offered in heathen sacrifices; cautions against irregularities in the administration of the Lord's Supper; a powerful defence of the doctrine of the Resurrection; a fine exposition of and argument for Christian love; and various other matters of importance.
58 Philippi.	THE SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS was written a year after the first, at Philippi, in Macedonia, and subsequently sent to the Corinthians by St. TITUS and his associates. The first letter to the Church at Corinth having had the good effect of producing regret and reformation amongst those whom it rebuked, this was written to confirm them in their good resolutions, and to give them advice on various points suitable to their situation and circumstances, more particularly with reference to attempts that were making by false teachers to pervert their faith and to lessen St. PAUL's credit by denying his Apostolic mission.
52 Antioch.	THE EPISTLE TO THE GALATIANS is supposed to have been written, about A. D. 52, to the Church in that part of Asia Minor called Galatia. St. PAUL himself had planted the Church in these parts; subsequently certain Judaizing mischief-workers had intruded themselves among the converts, and disparaging the Apostolic commission of St. PAUL, had led some of them astray from the Gospel. In this letter the Apostle exposes the Judaizing heretics, shows that he is "not a whit behind the chiefest Apostle," and powerfully vindicates Gospel truth.
61 Rome.	THE EPISTLE TO THE EPHESIANS.—Ephesus was a city of Ionia and the capital of Proconsular Asia; it was also famous for a temple of Diana, which was esteemed one of the seven wonders of the world. Its inhabitants were noted for their superstitious arts, luxury and lasciviousness. St. PAUL preached the Gospel for a short time at Ephesus, about A. D. 53; and in the following year returned and remained there more than two years. He wrote this Epistle about A. D. 61, during the early part of his imprisonment at Rome. Its scope is to establish the Ephesians in the faith, and to this end to give them more exalted views of the eternal love of GOD, and of the excellency and dignity of CHRIST; to show them that they were saved by grace, and that the Gentiles,
	however wretched they had formerly been, now had equal privileges with the Jews; to encourage them by declaring with what steadfastness He suffered for the truth, and with what earnestness He prayed for their establishment and perseverance in it; and, finally, in consequence of their profession, to engage them to the practice of those duties which became them as Christians. (See Rev. ii. 1-7.)
	THE EPISTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS was written at Rome, toward the close of St. PAUL's first incarceration, A. D. 62. The Church at Philippi appears to have been one of the most pure and generous of that age. Its members showed the tenderest regard for St. PAUL. Twice while he was at Thessalonica, and once when at Corinth, they had generously sent him contributions for his support, which he accepted, to prevent the Gospel being burdensome to more recent converts. They had also cheerfully borne many sufferings for their adherence to the Saviour. Their conduct had been uniformly so exemplary that he had only to rejoice over them. Accordingly, in this Epistle, he pours forth his heart in expressions of devout thankfulness and hearty commendations, not unmingled, however, with exhortations and counsels.
	THE EPISTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS was written A. D. 62, to the Christians at Colosse, in Asia Minor, in reply to an inquiry which they had sent after his health and welfare. It is doubtful whether St. PAUL ever was at Colosse, as it is, also, by whom the Church there was founded. The contents of this Epistle are of a general nature, exhorting to Christian faith and practice.	62 Rome.
	THE FIRST EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS was probably written A. D. 52, to the Church at Thessalonica, the capital of Macedonia, and is supposed to have been the first written of all the Epistles. Its contents are of a general nature; but toward the end he dissuades against excessive grief for the loss of deceased friends, and recommends preparation for death and judgment.	52 Corinth.
	THE SECOND EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS was written in the same year as the former, principally to correct some wrong notions which its perusal had excited with respect to the near approach of the day of judgment.
	THE FIRST EPISTLE TO TIMOTHY.—There has been much dispute as to when this Epistle was written; internal as well as external evidence leads us to adopt the later date assigned, A. D. 64, during a missionary tour subsequent to St. PAUL's first imprisonment at Rome. St. TIMOTHY was a native of Lystra; his father was a Gentile, and his mother, EUNICE, a devout Jewess; by the latter, assisted by her mother, Lois, TIMOTHY had been well reared in the Hebrew faith, and he was one of the first of St. PAUL's converts to Christianity. St. PAUL ordained him to the ministry, and subsequently made him Bishop of Ephesus. This Epistle is a pastoral charge, instructing TIMOTHY in the duties of his office.	64 Laodicea.
	THE SECOND EPISTLE TO TIMOTHY was written while St. PAUL was a prisoner at Rome, and probably during his second captivity, just before his martyrdom.	65 Rome.
	THE EPISTLE TO TITUS.—St. TITUS was by birth a Greek, and one of St. PAUL's earlier converts to the faith; after accompanying St. PAUL for a time, the Apostle had placed him in charge of the churches in Crete. This Epistle is a pastoral charge instructing him in the duties entrusted to him.	64 Nicompolis.
	THE EPISTLE TO PHILEMON, written during St. PAUL's first imprisonment, and forwarded with that to the Colossians, by the hands of ONESIMUS. This Epistle is a beautiful specimen of Christian courtesy.	63 Rome.
	THE EPISTLE TO THE HEBREWS.—As the HOLY SPIRIT did not direct the author of this Epistle to insert his own name, or to specify the persons to whom it was addressed, the determination of these questions cannot be essential to its right use, nor is it surprising that there should have been much difference of opinion upon them. Whilst, however, many both in former and in later times have thought otherwise, it has been determined by the best authorities that it was written by St. PAUL to the Jewish converts to Christianity. There are ample internal and external evidences of the correctness of this conclusion. Its object is to show the connection between the Mosaic and Christian Dispensations. The objections to the Gospel are answered with great force, and the arguments, being addressed to Jews, are principally taken from the Old Testament. The style is elegant, and often sublime.	63 Rome.

THE BOOKS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT,

WITH THE AUTHORSHIP AND DATE WHEN WRITTEN.

WHEN WRITTEN. A. D.	THE CATHOLIC OR GENERAL EPISTLES.	WHEN WRITTEN. A. D.
	THE Epistle of St. JAMES, the two of St. PETER, the three (two of which are not "general") of St. JOHN, and the one of St. JUDE, have been called the Catholic or General Epistles, because they are addressed to the Church at large, and not to the converts of any one city or district.
61 Jerusalem.	THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF ST. JAMES was written about A. D. 61, by the son of ALPHÆUS or CLEOPHAS, St. JAMES, who is called in the Gospels JAMES THE LESS, to distinguish him from JAMES the son of ZEBEDEE. He is supposed to have been the cousin of Christ, his mother being the sister of the Virgin Mary. He was Bishop of the Church in Jerusalem, and presided at the Councils of the Apostles; in consequence of his integrity and holy zeal he was surnamed JAMES THE JUST. He was put to death in a tumult of unbelieving Jews, A. D. 62. The object of the Epistle was to animate the Jewish Christians to support patiently their sufferings for the Gospel, and to correct a misinterpretation of St. PAUL's doctrine of justification by faith without the works of the ceremonial law, which some bad men had perverted to mean without the works of the moral law, and thus opened the door to all sorts of profligacy. Hence, the Apostle shows the true nature of a living active faith, which "without works is dead."	65 Babylon.
63 Babylon.	THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF ST. PETER.—Of this inspired Epistle Dr. Clarke has well said, "No Christian can read it without deriving from it both light and life." St. PETER's style is peculiarly vigorous and impressive; as one of the early Fathers, ERASMUS, said, "It is sparing in words, but full of sense" ("verbis pauca, sententiis differta"). This Epistle is addressed to the Christians scattered "throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia," and was designed to comfort them in the terrible persecutions that had thus dispersed them, and he does this by the noblest considerations which the Gospel suggests.	68 Jerusalem.
	THE SECOND EPISTLE GENERAL OF ST. PETER.—The Apostle wrote this Epistle just before his martyrdom. It is addressed to the Church at large. Grand throughout, the style in some parts is positively sublime (see iii. 10, et. seq.).
	THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF ST. JOHN.—A learned writer has described this Epistle forcibly as "a didactic discourse upon the living fundamental principles of the Christian religion." A terrible heresy had sprung up, the propagators of which are called by the Apostle "deceivers" and "Antichrist," and the Apostle's main object seems to have been to expose and denounce this false doctrine, and to assert, and that emphatically, the Divine and Human Nature of Jesus Christ. Like the Apostle's character, this Epistle is full and overflowing with LOVE.	69 Jerusalem.
	THE SECOND AND THIRD EPISTLES OF ST. JOHN.—These are improperly classed with the General Epistles, as they are addressed to individuals; the Second to "the elect lady and her children" (or more correctly, probably, "the lady ELECTA and her children"), the Third to "GAIUS" (or CAIUS).
	THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF ST. JUDE.—The author of this Epistle was called also LEBBÆUS and THADDÆUS (Matt. x. 3; Luke vi. 15). He was the brother of St. JAMES (the Less), and hence cousin of our LORD. He was one of the twelve Apostles. We read little more of him in the Gospels than that he inquired of our LORD how He intended to manifest Himself to His disciples and not to the world (John xiv. 22). His Epistle is supposed to have been written to Jewish Christians in Syria and Arabia, where he is reported to have labored, and its design is clearly to guard the Christian Church against those false teachers who resolved all religion into speculative belief and outward profession, and sought to allure the Disciples into insubordination and licentiousness.	65 Syria.
	THE APOCALYPSE, COMMONLY CALLED THE REVELATION OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE.
95 or 96 Isle of Patmos. Published 97	This Book is styled the Apocalypse (Ἀποκάλυψις) or Revelation (i. e., the revealing or unveiling of that which had been hidden) of St. JOHN the Divine (Θεολόγος, "Theologian"), as consisting of matters chiefly prophetic, which were revealed to St. JOHN by OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST. This took place when he was in the Isle of Patmos, in the Ægean Sea, whither he was banished, as is generally supposed, by the Emperor Domitian, A. D. 94 or 95. It was published soon after his release from exile, about A. D. 97. It has been remarked by a learned and able writer that no book of the New Testament has been so strongly attested or commented upon so early as this, nor does any other equal it in the dignity and sublimity of its composition. It may be divided into three parts: Chapter i. contains JOHN's vision of CHRIST in glory; ii., iii., the seven letters addressed by our LORD to the seven Churches of Asia Minor. The remainder of the Book, after presenting us (ch. iv.) with a description of the LAMB ON THE THRONE, and bringing to our notice the Book of GOD'S decrees as to future events, is occupied in showing the contents of that Book, the subject of which is the state of the Church, from the close of the Sacred Volume till the consummation of all things; and thus it forms a suitable sequel to the prophecies of DANIEL. The Epistles to the Seven Churches supply the most important instruction to the Universal Church in every age, and may be profitably read by every Christian. As general hints for the profitable reading of this invaluable Book, which, as ages roll on, affords to each succeeding generation a brighter evidence of the Divine origin of our holy religion, and of the gracious intentions of GOD to man, the following remarks from Bishop LOWTH, the celebrated commentator, are extremely valuable: "An ordinary reader may receive great edification from those noble hymns offered up to GOD and CHRIST, and may likewise discover many useful truths, such as the adoration of the one SUPREME GOD in opposition to all creature-worship; the relying upon the merits of CHRIST only for pardon, sanctification and salvation; and that we ought to wait patiently for CHRIST'S appearing and His kingdom, and, in an earnest expectation of it, to continue steadfast in the profession of	the true faith and practice of sincere holiness, notwithstanding all the sufferings which may attend a good conscience. All may learn those marks and characters of Antichrist which it most nearly concerns us to take notice of, viz., pride, ambition and affectation of worldly pomp and grandeur; a cruel and persecuting spirit, seeking to reduce others rather by force and compulsion than by reason and argument; the love of ease and softness and a careless and luxurious life; and that whosoever are guilty of these things are so departed from the true spirit of Christianity; and surely he that takes warning from the plain and frequent admonitions of this Book to avoid these sins has not wholly lost his labors in reading it; and, withal, has entitled himself to the blessings pronounced upon those who keep its sayings." To those who would trifle with the prophetic parts of this Book because of their mystery, the following considerations may not be without value: "No prophecies in the Revelation can be more clouded with obscurity than that a child should be born of a pure virgin—that a mortal should not see corruption—that a person despised and numbered among malefactors should be established for ever on the throne of DAVID. Yet still the pious Jew preserved his faith entire amidst all these wonderful and, in appearance, contradictory intimations. He looked into the holy books in which they were contained with reverence, and, with an eye of patient expectation, waited for the consolation of Israel." We in the same manner look up to these prophecies of the Apocalypse for the full consummation of the great scheme of the Gospel, when Christianity shall finally prevail over all the corruptions of the world, and be universally established in its utmost purity." The conclusion of this Book is deeply solemn, characteristic of the Gospel, as distinct from the Law (ch. xxii. 21 with Mal. iv. 6 and John i. 17) and expressive of the design of the whole Bible, which is to point out CHRIST as the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last, and to invite mankind to take of the water of life freely offered through Him—that life of which the indwelling of His Spirit in our heart is the pledge—for without holiness no man shall see the Lord.

Here ends St. PAUL's history as recorded in the ACTS OF THE APOSTLES. There are no certain particulars of the remainder of his life. It does not appear that he was tried during this imprisonment. It is probable that, on his release in 65, he made another Missionary Tour through Greece and Asia Minor, and possibly through Spain; some have thought he also visited Britain, but though not impossible, the evidence is very unsatisfactory. Soon after this he was again carried to Rome as a prisoner, and was not treated with kindness and consideration, as during the first imprisonment, but as a felon (2 Tim. ii. 9). He was beheaded A. D. 67 or 68, during the persecutions of NERO, when between sixty-three and sixty-seven years of age. There has been much discussion as to the chronology of St. PAUL's life; without entering into the question, we have taken the dates as they appear in the standard editions of the Bible; it is possible (and we think probable) that two years should be subtracted from each date given.

THE APOSTLES OF OUR LORD.

WHEN our LORD entered upon His ministry He was followed by great multitudes of people from Galilee and from Decapolis, and from Judea, and from beyond Jordan. He now proceeded to provide for His Church the teachers who were to edify His people, and He commenced to proclaim His doctrines by the celebrated Sermon on the Mount. The TWELVE APOSTLES whom He selected were needed to bear witness to His own deeds and words (Matt. iv. 17-25; x. 2-4; Mark iii. 1, 13-19; Luke vi. 12-49). He ordained them "that they should be with Him, and that He might send them forth to preach, and to have power to heal sicknesses and to cast out devils." After His Ascension it became a chief part of their mission to bear witness to the fact of His Resurrection, a fundamental truth in the System of the Gospel. For this duty it was essential that their personal intercourse with Him should be constant; and, hence, St. PETER speaks of them as "witnesses chosen before of GOD . . . who did eat and drink with Him after He rose from the dead" (Acts i. 21, 22; comp. x. 41). The marks of the Apostolic office were these: Personal intercourse with CHRIST; appointment by Himself; the gift of the HOLY SPIRIT breathed on them by CHRIST, and more plentifully bestowed on the day of Pentecost, thus enabling them to work miracles and to speak in foreign tongues; to which was added the power to confer that gift on others. The union of these qualifications rendered it impossible for the Apostles to have successors in office, and thus they were distinguished from every other class of ministers, whether Deacons, Evangelists, Pastors or Bishops.

The time is not certainly determined when our LORD separated the Apostles from His disciples and followers to their distinctive office. They were from the lower ranks of life, and it appears that some of them at least had been with Him before they were called as Apostles, but after their appointment they remained continuously in His service. They were all on an equality, so far as official rank was concerned, during and after the ministry of CHRIST on earth. St. PETER, indeed, from his emotional and energetic character, was usually prominent among them, and enjoyed the distinguished honor of founding the Jewish and Gentile Churches (Acts ii. 14, 42; xi. 11; comp. Rev. xxi. 14; Eph. ii. 20); but we never find in Scripture the slightest trace of primacy or official superiority assigned to him. It is true that he and JAMES and JOHN, the sons of ZEBEDEE, are admitted to the inner privacy of our LORD'S acts and experiences on several occasions (Matt. xvii. 1-9; xxvi. 37; Mark v. 37), but this is no evidence of superiority and distinction in office.

Early in our LORD'S ministry they were sent out, two and two, to preach repentance and perform miracles in His name (Matt. x.; Luke ix.). They were warned by their Master of the solemn character of their office. They were with Him in His journeyings, while teaching and attending the Jewish feasts. They saw His wonderful works, heard His discourses and conversations with the people (Matt. xix. 13; Luke x. 25). They recognized Him as their Master and the CHRIST of GOD (Matt. xvi. 16; Luke ix. 20), but while they ascribed supernatural power to Him, they made slow progress in comprehending the true import of His spiritual teaching, being blinded by their national prejudices (Matt. xv. 16; xvi. 22; xvii. 20, 21; Luke ix. 54; xxiv. 25; John xvi. 12). They were obliged to seek explanations of His simplest parables, and even when our LORD was led to death they had learned but little of the true nature of His kingdom (Luke xxiv. 21; John xvi. 12), although He had been so long instructing them. They forsook Him in alarm, and even left His burial to one who was not of their number.

The fact of His Resurrection seems to have awakened their minds to a clearer conception of His mission, yet even after His exposition and intercourse some of them seem to have returned to their original calling, and it required a new direction from our LORD to recall them to their great work, and reunite them in Jerusalem (Acts i. 4).

On the Feast of Pentecost, ten days after our LORD'S Ascension, the HOLY SPIRIT descended on the infant Church (Acts ii.), and thenceforward the Apostles became different men, and with great power and boldness they gave forth their witness to the Life, Death, Resurrection and Ascension of their GLORIFIED MASTER AND LORD, as He had predicted they should do (Luke xxiv. 48; Acts i. 8, 22; ii. 32; iii. 15; v. 32; xiii. 31).

The Mother Church in Jerusalem sprang up under their hands, and their superior dignity and authority were recognized by the rulers and the people (Acts v. 12-16). Even when St. STEPHEN suffered, the trial does not seem to have reached the Apostles, and when they did leave Jerusalem for Samaria they delayed not, but entered on their work in that city, and now the first period of the Apostles' agency ends. The centre of labor was Jerusalem and the central figure St. PETER. Antioch soon became the centre of a second period, and now the central figure is St. PAUL, who was not one of the original Twelve, but was miraculously called and prepared by our LORD, who regularly qualified and commissioned him for the work. Here a Church of Jews and Gentiles was soon gathered (Acts xi. 19-30; xiii. 1-5) by the united labors of St. PAUL and other Apostles. Intimate intercourse existed between the Churches at Antioch and Jerusalem. From this time a third period opens, in which the original Twelve Apostles disappear, and the prominent figure in the subsequent history is St. PAUL, the great Apostle of the Gentiles. When the narrative leaves him at Rome, all the Gentile Churches from Jerusalem round about to Illyricum owe to him their foundation and look to him for spiritual direction and Apostolic care. The others disappear from the page of inspired history, and when they were removed by death, the Apostolic office ceased as a matter of course, for its continuance was from the very conditions of its existence (comp. 1 Cor. ix. 1) absolutely impossible. The Bishops and Pastors of the ancient Churches co-existed with, and did not in any sense succeed, the Apostles in the things which were peculiar to their office; and thus it is evident that it can only be chronologically, and not officially, that in the Church there can be any persons who are Successors of the Apostles.

PETER.—His original name was SIMON. He was the son of JONAS, and was brought up to his father's occupation as a fisherman on the Sea of Galilee. He and his brother ANDREW were partners of JOHN and JAMES, the sons of ZEBEDEE. Various allusions in the sacred narrative seem to indicate that their social position was easy, and that they had a fair measure of education. PETER lived first at Bethsaida and afterward at Capernaum, in a house which he or his mother-in-law owned; and it must have been a large one, as he received in it not only our LORD, but multitudes who were attracted by the miracles and the preaching of JESUS (Matt. xix. 27, etc.). The passage in Acts iv. 13, where PETER and JOHN are called "unlearned and ignorant men," does not necessarily mean that they were illiterate, but rather that they were "laymen," i. e., men of ordinary education when contrasted with those who were educated in the schools of the Rabbis. That he was an affectionate husband and married in early life are facts inferred from Scripture. CLEMENT of Alexandria, and others, tell us that his wife's name was PERPETUA, that she had children and that she suffered martyrdom. The impression prevailed that PETER was advanced in life at the time of his death, but there is no evidence to prove that he was much older than our LORD. He was probably only between thirty and forty when called, along with ANDREW, at the Lake of Galilee. Thereafter JAMES and JOHN were appointed, and ere long PETER and his eleven fellow-disciples were set apart as our LORD'S immediate attendants (Matt. x. 2, 4; Mark iii. 13-19; Luke vi. 13). From this time forward PETER held a prominent place among the Apostles. His energy and boldness urged him forward, but he held no distinct office above his brethren, and he certainly never claimed any power which did not equally belong to his associates. It would appear that his consciousness of ability and devotion to his Master seemed to develop a tendency to rashness that verged on presumption. He even incurred a severe rebuke from our LORD (Matt. xvi. 23) because of his dictatorial manner, and yet it is obvious that, bold as he no doubt was, he frequently manifested his greatest weakness immediately after some decided display of resolute devotion, as may be seen by his anxiety to find out who among the Apostles would prove a traitor, loudly asseverating his own purpose of steadfastness, and then forthwith in a moment of weakness miserably denying his LORD (Matt. xxvi. 33-35; Mark xiv. 29-31; Luke xxii. 33, 34; John xiii. 36, 38).

He was restored again after his fall by our LORD at the Lake of Galilee, and the prediction of his death showed him that he would indeed be permitted to follow his glorified Master. After the Ascension he and his colleagues were to govern and extend the Church that their Master had founded, and the narrative of the Acts of the Apostles presents him as a leader, although neither exercising nor claiming any authority or superiority over his brethren. Before ANANAS and CAIAPHAS the boldness of PETER and JOHN was observable, and they utterly refused to be time-servers. Miracles of healing and of judgment, as in the case of ANANIAS and SAPPHIRA, were wrought by PETER, and from Jerusalem he and JOHN were sent to Samaria. There he was confronted with SIMON MAGUS, and about three years later he came into contact with PAUL (Acts ix. 26 and Gal. i. 17, 18). The baptism of CORNELIUS was the crown and consummation of the ministry of PETER, as it was the first-fruits and the earnest of the great Gentile harvest. Shortly afterward he was imprisoned by HEROD AGRIPPA (Acts xiii.), and his miraculous deliverance closes the second great period of his ministry.

From this time there is no continuous history of him. He left Jerusalem, but the scene of his labors is not recorded. Six years later he returned, when the Apostles and elders assembled to settle the question about circumcision. It was at Antioch where the painful collision between him and PAUL occurred, when an essential point in Christian discipline and living was determined. That PETER preached in the provinces mentioned in his first Epistle is mere conjecture, but there is reason to believe that he did reside for a time at Babylon. If he ever visited Rome, it must have been toward the close of his life. There is no allusion in the Epistle to the Romans to his having been in the Roman capital, and the traditions and evidence bearing on the controversy are confused and contradictory. CLEMENT, IGNATIUS, DIONYSIUS, IRENEUS, CAIUS, ORIGEN, TERTULLIAN and others testify to the fact that he was at Rome, and that he and PAUL suffered martyrdom there about the same time, and yet the evidence on the other side is so exceedingly weighty that it may be considered an unsettled question. He may have been in Rome, and even suffered martyrdom there, but it is morally certain that he was never Bishop of the Church, and that he never claimed a primacy there or elsewhere over his brethren.

ANDREW was one among the first-called of the Apostles. He was brother to PETER, but whether older or younger is uncertain. He was of Bethsaida, and had been a disciple of JOHN THE BAPTIST. With another of JOHN'S disciples he brought his brother PETER, and they attached themselves to JESUS. In the catalogue of the Apostles his name appears second in Matthew and Luke, but in Mark and Acts he is enrolled after PETER, JAMES and JOHN as the fourth, and in company with PHILIP. He appears to have enjoyed great intimacy with our LORD, and to have been assiduous in his duties (John xii. 22; vi. 8). There are few details given of him in Scripture, and many of the traditions are quite uncertain. EUSEBIUS makes him preach in Scythia, JEROME and THEODORET in Achaia (Greece), and NICEPHORUS in Asia Minor and Thrace. He is said to have been crucified at Patrae, in Achaia, on a cross "deussate," hence called after his name.

JAMES and JOHN, the sons of ZEBEDEE.—In the spring or summer of the year 27, ZEBEDEE, a fisherman, was on the Sea of Galilee with his two sons engaged at their occupation. Near them was another boat with SIMON and ANDREW, all of them being partners. Being unsuccessful, they landed and began to wash their nets. The new Teacher (JESUS) appeared on the beach, and at His call they left all and became His disciples. The leading incidents in the career of JAMES may be briefly stated. In the following year he was confirmed as an Apostle, and witnessed the miraculous healing of JAIRUS' daughter. In the spring of 28 he was present at the Transfiguration. Very early in the year 29 he urged our LORD to call fire down from heaven to consume a Samaritan village, and about three months later he and his brother made their ambitious request through their mother SALOME. On the night before the crucifixion he was with our LORD in Gethsemane. He witnessed the Ascension, and shortly before the Passover, in the year 44, he was put to death (Acts xii. 1) by HEROD AGRIPPA.

THE APOSTLES OF OUR LORD.

JOHN is generally believed to have been younger than his brother JAMES. His life may be divided into three periods: 1. Before his call to the discipleship he no doubt lived with his parents in or near Bethsaida, and little is known of him. When the voice of JOHN THE BAPTIST was heard in the wilderness of Judea and multitudes flocked to hear him, the sons of ZEBEDEE were among the number. 2. But a greater than JOHN arose, and these brethren attached themselves to Him. PETER, JAMES and JOHN came within the innermost circle of our LORD'S friends. He enjoyed the memorable distinction of being the disciple whom JESUS loved. He witnessed the Transfiguration, and was with Him during His agony. He was the first of the disciples to recognize our LORD after His Resurrection, and his zeal was unwearied in the company of PETER in the expansion of the Church. Fifteen years after PAUL'S first visit to Jerusalem he was there, at the settlement of the great question which had agitated the Church, and his position and influence were those of one who was known to be a chief "pillar" in the Church (Gal. ii. 9). 3. The traditions of a later age connect him with Ephesus after his departure from Jerusalem. It is held that the seven Asiatic Churches were his special charge, and that he had much to do in saving them from soul-destroying error. Persecution drove him to the island of Patmos, where he labored in the mines, and where he received the Revelations which close the New Testament. POLYCARP, IGNATIUS and PAPIAS were his disciples; and at a great age, and after seeing the Church extended from Palestine westward to Italy and Gaul, he died, and so the last of the Apostles of our LORD passed away.

PHILIP was of Bethsaida, the city of ANDREW and PETER (John i. 44), and probably was among the followers of JOHN THE BAPTIST. It is probable that from ANDREW he learned that the CHRIST had appeared. In the Gospels his name usually occurs at the head of the second group of four, as PETER'S name is at that of the first (Matt. x. 3; Mark iii. 18; Luke vi. 14). The first three Gospels tell us few facts about him, but JOHN records a few important utterances. After the Ascension and the day of Pentecost all is uncertain about his history.

BARTHOLOMEW, one of the twelve, was probably born at Cana of Galilee. He is said to have preached the Gospel in India, but if he went eastward, it is likely that his labors were not extended beyond Arabia-Felix. There is a tradition which connects him with Armenia, and reports him to have been there fayed alive and then crucified with his head downward.

THOMAS.—Nearly all that we know of him is derived from the Gospel of JOHN, where he is represented as a man slow to believe, seeing the dark side of any question, subject to despondency, but filled with attachment to our LORD. The earlier traditions represent him as preaching in Parthia or Persia, and the Church in Malabar in India is reputed to have been founded by him, but this is evidently an error, as a Nestorian THOMAS who labored in India was no doubt the missionary of that province.

MATTHEW, the Publican, was the writer of the Gospel that is called by his name. He had been a farmer of the taxes, or a public officer, engaged, no doubt, by a Roman knight or some man of high standing. EUSEBIUS says that after our LORD'S Ascension MATTHEW preached for fifteen years in Judea, and then went to foreign nations. SOCRATES SCHOLASTICUS says he labored in Ethiopia. AMBROSE sends him to Persia, ISIDORE to the Macedonians, while others hold that he preached among the Medes and Persians, but nothing is really known of his later history.

JAMES, the son of ALPHEUS, and his younger brother JUDE, appear to have been called to the Apostolate in the year 27. It is likely that JAMES had taken part in the effort to restrain the SAVIOUR, as mentioned in Mark iii. 21; John vii. 7. We hear no more of him until after the Crucifixion and the Resurrection, and again he is lost sight of for ten years. When PAUL came to Jerusalem we find JAMES on a level with PETER deciding the course to be adopted toward PAUL. Tradition places him over the Church in Jerusalem, and HEGESIPPUS says that before Vespasian began the siege of the city he was thrown down from the temple by the Scribes and Pharisees; he was then stoned, and his brains were dashed out by a fuller's club.

LEBBEUS was a name of the Apostle JUDAS or JUDE, the brother of JAMES, of whose later history nothing is known. Tradition connects him with the Church at Edessa.

SIMON, the Canaanite (ZELOTES, Luke vi. 15; Acts i. 13), was one of the twelve, but nothing is known of his later life. He is reported to have labored in Egypt, Cyrene and Mauritania, and to have been crucified in Judea in the reign of DOMITIAN.

JUDAS ISCARIOT is called the son of SIMON in John vi. 71 and xiii. 2, 26, but in the other Gospels he receives no other name but ISCARIOT, the meaning of which is conjectural. We can scarcely hope to explain fully the reasons why such a man was called to the Apostolate, but the choice was not made without a foreseeing of the issue (John vi. 64). As soon as the Twelve had to accompany our LORD in a body, it became necessary that provision should be made for their wants; and their form of life (Luke viii. 3) brought the temptation before which he fell. The Galilean or Judean peasant was entrusted with larger sums than he had ever owned, and covetousness, unfaithfulness, the lust of the world, overpowered him. He became infuriated when he perceived that his Master had read his heart, and in the madness of his rage he sold "the innocent ONE for thirty pieces of silver." What he did after the betrayal is not recorded, further than that the sight of his enormity so filled him with remorse that life became intolerable, and he died a hopeless suicide. It would appear that the rope by which he sought to hang himself gave way, and so, falling headlong, his abdomen was lacerated, and thus he died, as it were, a double death, and so went to his own lot.

PARABLES OF OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR JESUS CHRIST
UNFOLDED.

“All these Things spake Jesus unto the Multitude in Parables; and without a Parable spake He not unto Them.”—Matthew xiii-34.

THE parables of Jesus are the most attractive parts of the New Testament, to nearly all Bible readers and students, although they are often confusing because they present both a dark and a bright side of humanity.

There is a natural delight in this manner of teaching, because it appeals to the understanding, the feelings, and the imagination, exciting the whole soul, with all its faculties, into pleasurable activity. Things learned with delight are the longest remembered.

The disciples were offended at their frequent use as a means of instruction, and perhaps justly so, for they gave various views of “the kingdom of God” without explanation, which, as even a well-finished picture does, needed full and clear light to bring out the truth that is in the work, or in the lesson. Such clear light we have in the text of the gospels and epistles, but they who heard the parables never profited by those writings.

Some have said that the truth was hidden in parables as a means of puzzling His disciples, and compelling them to search for instruction, and also for concealing the mysteries of the “kingdom” from the multitude. Esdras tells us that he was commanded by God to publish one part of the word revealed to him, and to conceal another part. This was probably so done because there are moral conditions necessary for understanding the truth. Some of his hearers desired spiritual instruction, and looked to him for help; others were indifferent, and many rejected the teachings. To all the warning words, “Take heed how ye hear,” were significant.

The parables were framed to teach spiritual and heavenly truth, which might awaken the soul to a consciousness of its divine origin, improve the intellect, and purify the reason. To this end, therefore, they are never sullied by jesting or raillery at the follies or the crimes of mankind.

Fables differ, in using animals and animal instincts, jests, raillery, sarcasm, and bitter mockery at the calamities which overtake men on account of their follies and crimes. While the parable never transgresses the laws of nature, the fable always does, in attributing speech and reason to animals, trees, and stones.

The myth differs from both, in presenting itself as the truth, while the parable and fable never pretend to do more than convey the precious essence.

Proverbs are usually obscure or enigmatical, and depend on remote allusions for their meaning and force, but sometimes they are concentrated parables—a whole lesson in a sentence; as in this one, "If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch."

The allegory is another form of fable or parable, or, rather, a different form of teaching, for it contains its explanation in itself, but it transfers the properties, qualities, and relations from the human to the lower order of things, as in the case of this one: "I am the true vine, and ye are the branches."

The faithful in the Church believe that God has established a spiritual "Kingdom of Heaven," through the atoning work of Jesus the Christ, and that the benefits of the kingdom have been freely offered to all. That kingdom is represented in the parables, which present it in different aspects: first, concerning the entrance to the kingdom; second, on the privileges and the duties of the kingdom; third, showing the relation of the kingdom to the world; and fourth, those which refer to the future world of spirits.

No rule can be made for interpreting the parables that does not allow good sense, reason, and spiritual insight to have full play. Too much must not be expected from any one parable. It is more likely that one single truth is the object of the lesson, than that we are to look for meanings in every phrase and every word, as some have supposed. The Gnostics built up a scheme of religious speculation on the supposed meaning of words, and even letters, and so made a cloud-land of their faith, where they could invent, color, and change their teachings as their fancy suggested. The parables to them were mere speculations about the creation, the origin of evil, the fall of angels, and other kindred topics, which they had imagined were more important than spiritual truth.

Other more recent writers endeavor to show that the parables are a part of the history of the Kingdom of God, and its progressive development to the end of time, thus combining spiritual with political and ethical things, unwisely.

The use of parables was common among the Jews before the teaching of Jesus, for He appealed to some as well known. The book called the "Shepherd of Hermas" has several, especially in the third chapter.

There are no parables in the apocryphal gospels, and a few only in other apocryphal writings of the New Testament age.

The parables have been grouped in this collection into four divisions, in which those which are like each other in purpose as lessons are placed together.

The four divisions are: 1. ENTRANCE INTO THE KINGDOM OF GOD—The Prodigal Son, The Lost Sheep, The Lost Piece of Money, and the Pharisee and Publican; 2. DUTIES AND PRIVILEGES OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD—The Royal Marriage Feast, The Great Feast, The Friend at Midnight, The Rich

Fool, The Barren Fig Tree, The Importunate Widow, The Two Sons, and The Good Samaritan; 3. RELATIONS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD TO THE WORLD—The Mustard-Seed, The Sower, The Seed Growing Secretly, The Tares, The Leaven, The Pearl of Great Price, The Hid Treasure, The Merchantman, The Net, The Unmerciful Servant, The Unfaithful Steward, The Laborers in the Vineyard, The Two Debtors, and the Wicked Husbandmen; 4. RELATIONS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD TO THE FUTURE WORLD—The Ten Virgins, The Rich Man and Lazarus, Unprofitable Servants, The Tale of The Unjust Judge, and The Pounds.

In these divisions of these gems of teaching we see how fully the great Teacher dealt with the various problems of life, concerning what he needs to fit him for a life of faith, what society everywhere wants, and what will most contribute to genuine progress toward perfection in humanity. To follow His teaching is to make each succeeding generation better than it would be by merely imitating the faith and practice of former ages.

There seems to be an outline of belief in a future life, and teaching that the test of the personal life of each soul here will be reached when it passes into the future state of existence. How much the parables which are assigned to this subject add to what has been said in other places, in the Bible and elsewhere, must be left for each reader to determine from an acquaintance with the stores of thought and imagination laid up for us in the precious relics of ancient books.

The parables contain the secret mysteries of the heavenly kingdom, which are the guides for planting and increasing faith, and are the most precious of all in the library of choice readings for the Christian in a leisure hour.

THE PRODIGAL SON.

LUKE xv. 11-32.

THIS is the pearl or crown of all parables. Many interpretations of its supposed meaning have been offered. One is that it refers to the Jews as the elder son, and to the Gentiles as the younger son, who wandered away into apostasy, and the return provided in the new dispensation of the Church.

Supposing that the publicans and sinners were Jews who had fallen into evil ways, the argument is framed for receiving again into communion those who had been cut off from the Church.

Others say that the publicans and sinners must have been heathen, in spite of the declaration of Jesus that one of the chief publicans, Zacchæus, was a son of Abraham, and that Matthew, the apostle, had been a publican.

The simple truth in the parable seems to be that Jesus came to call and receive sinners within the covenant, and wherever there are penitent and proud sinners there the parable is finding its fulfilment. In this view the younger son is really the Gentile world, and the self-righteous elder son is the Jewish synagogue.

The sin of pride is the sin of sins—and the name of Satan in Arabic is Eblis, pride. This sin possessed the younger son when he felt that he could become independent and sufficient in himself, and so asked for his share of his father's property. In spiritual language this means man's desire to become independent of God, to become a god to himself (Gen. iii. 5), and to lay out his life at his own will and pleasure. This is in great contrast to the prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread," which acknowledges a constant dependence on God.

The father granted his son's request, because he would not keep him at home against his will, whose heart was set on roaming. This is quoted as an argument in favor of the doctrine of free-will. The only true freedom is a freedom in God, all else being bondage to sin. Serving God is serving one master, but to depart from Him is to become subject to the natural passions, which are many masters.

After deciding to go away from home, a little while is spent in reflecting before actually setting out. This is the spiritual history of one who says that there is no God, and that he will set up an opinion for himself. His conduct is compared to that of men who forsake the fountain of living waters for broken cisterns that hold no water (Jer. ii. 13). In the long (six months) dry season of Palestine, a good cistern is very valuable, but a broken one is an infinite contrast to a fountain of sweet waters.

The wanderer feels free at last. Free to think and act, but without sufficient knowledge or wisdom to avoid errors and shun vices, and the inevitable result was disaster. The famine in the land where the young man had wasted his portion found him unprovided for evil days, and therefore increased his misery.

The spiritual famine among those who deny the existence of God means a want of truth, sincerity and love—the true nourishment of the soul. The love and care of parents and relatives, domestic affections, and the friendship of neighbors were absent, leaving the soul hungry—famishing.

One other fact is noticed, and which is as true now as it was then: when the young prodigal had spent his last piece of money, not one of all those who had joined him in wasting his substance would lift a finger to help him in his need. Such boon companions in riotous living are the first to take themselves off when the prodigal's money is spent.

He "joined himself to a citizen of that country" probably means that he tried to frame a new system of faith and belief in his apostate condition. To one who has been brought up "in the fear of the Lord," the change to unbelief after maturity is literally wasting spiritual inheritance and substance, and the attempt to reconcile one's self to the new surroundings is difficult indeed. The temptation to "arise and go to my father" was irresistible, when he remembered how happy and contented he was when under the care of his spiritual father and possessed of the riches of faith and belief.

But the resolution to return was not taken until he had tried to reconcile himself to the ways of the world by entering into its service. This may mean that he entered into business, became familiar with the crafty ways in which worldly men succeed, the subtle snares that they lay for the unwary, the deceptions, frauds, and mean, petty crimes that they practice who are bent on accumulating money, right or wrong, and that these are the husks that swine feed upon. To fill the belly, or the bank, with such husks is not to increase the riches of the soul. The man or the woman who grinds dollars out of poor, hard-worked, starving humanity, does not grow in spiritual riches, of truth, honor, brotherly love, or charity. Bah! they don't pay! Such a person is indeed a citizen of that "far-off land," far away from the heavenly Father's home of love, grace, purity, and joy. A citizen of that country of apostasy is compelled to associate with those who delight—or at least pretend to delight—in speaking disrespectfully of all that once was held precious and lovely in the Church. God and the angels, love and mercy, and all spiritual things are constantly held up to scorn, ridicule, and contempt. Such revilings are the merest husks from which the kernel of life, truth, and love has been stripped; and the more the soul strives to gather of such stuff, the more miserable it is, for the bondage becomes intolerable; it increases every moment, as Habakkuk says (ii. 5), he "enlargeth his desire as hell, and as death, and can not be satisfied."

Such a fall, so low in guilt and misery, is an extreme case, but is possible to any soul after the first downward step.

This parable might very well have a new title, for it is really a SOUL'S TRAGEDY.

In the darkest hour of his troubles "he came to himself." His first thought was of his father, the fountain of spiritual truth and life, and the pleasant home-life, where the atmosphere is faith and love. The return was then easy, when it had been decided upon, and the reception was cordial, hearty, and, except the envy of the brother, in every way satisfactory and consoling.

THE LOST SHEEP.

MATT. xviii, 12-14; LUKE xv, 3-7.

THE popular character of the teachings of Jesus, at the time in which this parable was spoken, drew the outcasts of the people to hear His comforting words. He received them graciously, taught them freely, and lived in familiar social relations with them which offended the Scribes and Pharisees. The Old Testament form of righteousness was an outward separation from sinners, as from the infected with disease, and the Scribes and Pharisees had no remedies for sinners, nor hope nor wish for their redemption, nor had they knowledge of any antidotes against the supposed danger from infection. When asked why He received sinners, He answered that He acted as they would in seeking a lost sheep.

He came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance,—to find lost sheep. It was the owner himself who seeks the lost sheep. Only one—one in a hundred—but that one was lost. A lost sheep is the most helpless of animals, and vainly wastes its strength in useless bleating and aimless wandering, until, exhausted, it falls in death.

The shepherd's care is the only hope for the lost sheep. His effort must be made at once, for every moment increases the danger, and he leaves the flock to go after the one lost.

The spiritual rulers of the Jews were called shepherds by the prophets. One of the psalmists calls the Lord his Shepherd, and another says the Lord is the Shepherd of Israel.

It is said by some that the incarnation of the Son of God was a putting on the shepherd's garment of flesh, and His life from the baptism of John was a search for the strayed sheep of Israel. And the text of the gospels sets forth the toilsome way, with its thorns of scorn, hate, and betrayal.

The shepherd is said to search until he found the lost sheep, when he carefully helped it out of difficulty, and, if needed, carried it back to the fold.

The dangers which the shepherds face from wild beasts in the wilderness in our day in Palestine are great. They are seldom armed with more than a stick, and, although lions are rarely met, bears, hyenas, and wolves are common in some parts, and are always hungry and ferocious when they approach the flocks. David told King Saul that he had killed both a lion and a bear in defence of his flock.

When the shepherd returned to his home with the recovered sheep, he called his friends together, and they rejoiced over his success. The lesson is that heaven and earth are one in "the kingdom," and that there will be joy in heaven over one repentant sinner, more than over ninety and nine just persons which need no repentance. This repentant sinner then enters into the inner sanctuary of faith, and is the cause of more joy among the redeemed than those who remain at the legal door refusing to go in.

The early Christians portrayed the Lord as the Good Shepherd in paintings, sculptures, mosaics, on gems, glass cups, seals, and many other articles of personal or public use, and great numbers of those relics have been preserved to our day. In some of those ancient pictures Jesus is represented as the Orpheus of the Christians holding a harp and surrounded by animals that are charmed with His music.

THE LOST PIECE OF MONEY.

LUKE xv. 8-10.

THE Church is the organ by which the Holy Spirit does its works of mercy. In this parable the Church is personified as a woman; the piece of money is the soul, stamped with the image of the Great King (Gen. i. 27), as the silver, gold, or copper was with that of the emperor or other ruler. The candle is the word of God, held forth by the Church, and by whose light sinners are found, and each one is precious in the Lord's eyes as the silver money is to the merchant.

The woman sweeps the house when searching for the lost piece, and raises the dust—of selfish ease, and calls out such remarks as those in Acts, where it is said the Apostles were charged with having turned the world upside down, as the Church is always doing, while searching for sinners.

The woman confesses that she lost the piece of silver, as if she had contributed to the loss through negligence, and called her female friends and neighbors together (see Ruth iv. 14, 17; Prov. iv. 3); and it is supposed by some commentators that they were the angels.

In the Epistle to the Corinthians the term angels is applied to certain redeemed members of the Church.

In the book of Job it is said that "sons of God" shouted for joy and sang together at the creation, and in the parable of the Lost Sheep that there is joy in heaven over a repentant sinner; so in this parable there is rejoicing, but it is here on the earth. Some suppose that the joy here referred to is in a group of the invisible angels who are sent into the earth to minister to the heirs of salvation, and who belong to a higher race.

There are several thoughts which group around this lesson. The lighted candle is peculiar to this parable, and indicates that the Church needs help—the help of the truth, which the light signifies—for the search. The candle is the word. The image of the golden candlestick and its mystic explanation are familiar with students of the Old Testament, among the furniture of the tabernacle and the temple, and candles and candlesticks are used also in the Revelation of John.

The Spirit is the maker of the word, and its light the truth, and is therefore the true searcher, the Church or the woman being only means to the end. "Christ is the Light of the World," and therefore He it is who searches for and finds the lost pieces from the spiritual treasury.

Sweeping the dust away that may have covered the piece of silver was necessary as a part of the process of finding it. Whether covered with dust or hidden by tarnishing, the searcher must still sweep.

It was silver that was lost, and intrinsically precious; valuable, even when lost, and although more useful when restored, yet no more worth than before.

Those who are inclined to mysticism see in the lighted candle a symbol of the divine incarnation; the glory which the Saviour had within shining through the fleshly covering which only partially concealed it. The light of the candle and the divine glory still illuminate the world.

THE PHARISEE AND PUBLICAN.

LUKE xviii. 9-14.

PERSONAL responsibility in asking for God's favors is illustrated in the parable of the Prodigal Son. There the son asks forgiveness. In this parable there is an estimate of the different views which men have of prayer to God.

Two men seek to draw nigh to God in prayer, in the temple, where was seen the great altar, with its daily sacrifices of blood, in token of sin; near it the great laver, for cleansing hands, faces, and feet, and supplying water for various purposes; and in the holy place the altar of incense, symbol of prayer, ever rising toward heaven; and the golden candlestick, with its seven typical lamps, emblems of the seven planets, the seven spirits of wisdom, goodness, and piety; and the table of shew-bread, where the tribes of Israel were each represented by a loaf of bread, which was renewed each week; and in the holy of holies, behind the veil, the ark of the covenant, with the two tables of the law; and each and all of these things, with many others in and about the holy house, indicated that Jehovah was believed to be a prayer-hearing God.

The Pharisee may have represented the Jewish people, and the publican the Gentiles. The Jew gloried in his own merits, and extolled himself, but through pride and self-righteousness failed, in not gaining divine favor. The Gentile meekly acknowledged his vileness, repented of his sins, and obtained mercy and grace.

It is supposed that the lesson was intended for certain followers of Jesus who had a latent Pharisee in their hearts, and were content with cleaning the outside of the bowl, being indifferent or ignorant of the uncleanness within, and who would not be likely to say, "Deliver me from mine adversary," because they do not feel conscious that they have an adversary, and it can also be applied to others who have found their sins an intolerable burthen, and look to God for delivery.

The act of the Pharisee, in separating himself from others, because he felt himself to be better, less sinful, a more strict observer of fast-days, and tithe-paying, and other outward religious acts, was an exhibition of an ugly, foul, proud, and scornful soul, which was cold and dead to all the world of humanity beside itself.

The publican, through his humbling himself, was exalted, while the Pharisee, through his self-exaltation, was humbled. Pride is at the root of every sin, and even when doing good, if pride is mingled with the motives, there is a lessening of the good, in proportion to the extent of the pride.

DUTIES AND PRIVILEGES OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

THE WEDDING GARMENT; OR, THE MARRIAGE OF THE KING'S SON.

MATT. xxii. 1-14.

THE King in this parable is Christ himself, and the feast referred to is an allusion to the joys prepared for those who are invited to their reward. The enmity of the Pharisees had reached its highest pitch, and they had resolved to put Jesus out of the way. The guests that are invited refuse absolutely to come, misuse the messengers, their acts amounting to open defiance of the king's authority, which was simply rebellion.

The king punishes them by destroying the murderers and burning their city. Some suppose that the enmity to the king had been growing in secret for a long time, and on this marriage found a pretext or opportunity for breaking out. Sinners of every degree were invited to fellowship in the blessings of the Gospel, and their entrance to the marriage feast was without scrutiny, for by grace alone were they called, both good and bad. But when they are inside the king will make a strict examination, and will not excuse any whose garments are in any sense improper or unfit. That is, members of the Church must live without reproach.

The guest was self-righteous, or a hypocrite, and in need of a garment that should cover, rather than expose, his poverty of spiritual things.

THE TWO SONS.

MATT. xxi. 28-32.

IN this discourse the two sons stand for two classes in the Jewish people. The one who said he would not work, and repented, and did go into the vineyard to work, was the representative of the publicans and harlots; and the other son who promised so readily to work, and did not go, was the representative of the priests, elders, Pharisees, and all the respectable and religious in society. The human nature of our day is precisely like that of the time in which this parable was spoken, and we have only to look around us for its application as they did who heard it at the first. Many are conscious of a willingness to do right, but who also are like the second son in neglect or refusal to act, and feeling satisfied in having a pious feeling, religious sympathy, and in having cherished sentiments of the most kindly import, without one effort at putting them into practice.

Others are unfeeling and wantonly rude as well as disobedient in their repudiation of God's authority, and take pride in affecting a deeper and more resolute ungodliness than they really feel. In our day such persons pretend to be viciously wicked and active in opposition to all that is called Christian, but whose hearts or consciences are still alive, hate hypocrisy, love to do right, and may at any moment resolve to come to the truth, the light, and the way.

THE WICKED HUSBANDMEN.

MATT. xxi. 33-45; MARK xii. 1-12; LUKE xx. 9-19.

THIS parable exhibits a picture of the inexhaustible patience and long-suffering of the Father toward His children the Jews, of the Son toward his Church, and of God toward the sinner.

In Isaiah the vineyard is the symbol of the Jewish Church, and the Lord is said in Exodus to have planted it. The wall around the vineyard, of stone or of thorns, is the separation by birth, race, or religion of the Jew from the Gentile—of the worshipers of God from those who fall down before idols.

This garden of the Lord was cultivated by the deliverance from Egypt, the law from Sinai, the wandering in the wilderness, the passage over Jordan, the settlement in Canaan, the teaching of the prophets, the captivity in Babylon, the restoration under Ezra, the long rest under the Greeks, and the final harrowing by the Romans. The annalists say that Jehovah refused at one time to speak any more face to face with the Jews, and after that declined to give responses when consulted by Urim and Thummim, leaving them under the guidance of the law alone.

When it was the fruit season, servants were sent to learn the results of the harvest. In spiritual language this is said to mean those occasions in which souls are tried and required to show good fruits of virtue and righteousness.

The servants sent were the prophets, and they were killed. Luke says that when the son of the owner of the vineyard was sent, the wicked keepers of the vineyard killed him, knowing him to be the heir of his father, their employer.

Jewish tradition is filled with instances of ill-usage of spiritual teachers—servants of the Lord of the Vineyard—and many of them are alluded to in the Epistle to the Hebrews: "And others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover, of bonds and imprisonment; they were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain by the sword; . . . of whom the world was not worthy."

Sending the Son is the last and crowning act of divine mercy, and if it fail, the last resource of heavenly love will have been exhausted, and the transgressors will have filled up the measure of their guilt.

In this view the entire succession of generations of Israelites, from the first to the last, are considered as one body, one vineyard, and in that sense only could those then living be called to account for what had been done ages before to the prophets.

The punishment consisted in losing the favor of the Lord, and seeing their birthright transferred to the Gentiles.

The priests and Pharisees are said to have been angry when they saw that the parable was intended for them. But the Great Teacher, having shown that the charge laid on them was a duty, proceeded in another to set forth the same obligation as a privilege.

THE FRIEND AT MIDNIGHT.

LUKE xi. 5-8.

THE lesson herein is addressed to every one who may be called to serve and assist or relieve a wanderer from the way of life when he wishes to return to the true path, for it teaches the method of gaining a supply of spiritual food needed in such cases. The application is made to the Divine Friend in behalf of the penitent who has returned, and who also engages in secret prayer. The gift is obtained by persistence, for "the kingdom of God suffereth violence, and the violent taketh it by force," and things long desired are more sweet when obtained. Faith, patience, and humility are called into exercise by these denials, for it is shown by them who will pray always and not faint, who will not be discouraged by the first lack of success.

THE UNJUST JUDGE; OR, THE IMPORTUNATE WIDOW.

LUKE xviii. 1-8.

THE lesson enforced in this parable is the duty of continued prayer, in which God likens Himself to an unjust judge, and brings forward an instance of a wronged woman, a widow, pleading in vain for redress. She suffers injustice and appeals in vain to the dispenser of justice for a while, but succeeds through importunity. An unrighteous petition gains no hearing in any case.

Although long delayed the day of deliverance will surely come to all who are unjustly oppressed.

Those who look for the second coming of the Son of God find in this lesson much consolation, whether that event is expected at the end of each soul's earthly life, or at the end of the world's period. Delays are trials, wearisome, and seem like denials, but the Divine Father, who appears as the unjust judge, knows when and how to avenge his children's wrongs.

The judge is described in strong terms as a bold, bad man, who is boastful of his impiety, but who has more regard for his own ease than for either God or man. The prophet Isaiah said that God creates evil, and in the book of Job we learn that evil is used by Jehovah as a means of discipline. The appearance of the Father in this parable in such a character as the unjust judge is therefore no surprise.

The closing sentence is rich in suggestions for thought. At His coming shall He find such faith in the world as the widow had? His work then will be of heart-searching and of judgment. His search will discover the faithful to themselves and to each other, for they are known to Him now, and then will it be shown that prayer is the test of faith. Prayer is the medicine that expels spiritual sickness, says Chrysostom the Golden.

THE GOOD SAMARITAN.

LUKE x. 30-37.

THE lawyer who questioned Jesus understood the letter of the law, but not its spirit—its spiritual application was to him unknown. He had no true conception of the meaning of the word neighbor. He probably felt obligation toward those who were designated as having claims on him—or, in other words, his poor, his relatives, his friends, his associates, and rejected every prompting to assist the miscellaneous herd of poor, the unknown crowd of beggars, the rags and tatters of humanity who were strangers and had no one to vouch for them as worthy and needy of bounty. This lawyer has representatives among us now. It is very difficult for a really deserving poor man or woman to find help, while a hypocrite who will fawn upon the dispensers of "charity" will be bountifully supplied.

The traveler—a Samaritan and not a Jew—found a Jew, whom he had been taught from infancy to despise and avoid, wounded and helpless in the highway, and without question as to whether he belonged to his church, or to any congregation, or had any society claims, he did all that was required, and more beside. This was to an entire stranger, stripped of every valuable thing which might have given a clue to his former rank or condition, and whose only appeal was present need.

In this case the priest did not recognize him as a member of his flock; the Levite failed to see a familiar face, having never met him among the frequenters at his shrine, because both flock and shrine had too narrow quarters. The Samaritan worshiped in a broader temple, as wide as the earth itself—all men were his brothers and entitled to his assistance when in need.

Some have recognized in the traveler personified human nature, or Adam, the head of the race, who has forsaken Jerusalem, the heavenly city, the city of the vision of peace, and is going down to Jericho, the profane city, the city under a curse. Once in the way, out of the presence of his God, he falls a prey to a robber, who strips him of his original righteousness and leaves him wounded, slandered, reviled, and supposed to be dead because crushed under the false and deceptive cruelties of defamation.

The special lesson is to exhibit the great gulf that exists between knowing and doing. Knowing and keeping the law is not enough, but having faith and doing what that requires is the true way of spiritual life.

THE BARREN FIG-TREE.

MATT. xxi. 18; MARK xi. 12; LUKE xiii. 6-9.

ALL of the parables, excepting this one, are founded on acts, or supposed acts, or relations between men, which are in themselves rational, or the product of sensible persons. In this case the surprise consists in the act of Jesus in punishing a natural object which could not possibly bear the stain of guilt. If the entire parable is symbolical it is certainly rational.

The fig-tree was said to have been rich in foliage, but destitute of fruit, and so a symbol of the Jewish people, so profuse in outward shows of piety, but destitute of its reality. The fruitless tree which failed for three seasons, under the patriarchs, the prophets, and the priests, or of the natural law, the written law, and of grace, to realize the aim of its being, was destroyed, and by this we understand that the Theocratic people, for the same reason, was worthy of destruction.

THE SEED GROWING SECRETLY.

MARK iv. 26-29.

MARK alone records this parable, the lesson in which is the secret, invisible energy of the divine word, having a life of its own, with the power of unfolding itself according to the laws of its being, and it may be left, when once planted, to flourish by its inherent energy.

There is some difficulty in determining who was meant by the man casting the seed into the ground, whether Jesus or His disciples. It is clear that Christ was intended as the one who put in the sickle and gathered the saints at the harvest, which was when faith had done its proper work.

The parable is supposed to apply to the origin and progress of the Church, rather than of any one person. The Lord at His first coming in the flesh by sowing the word of the kingdom planted the Church and withdrew. It has been without His visible assistance ever since, and is expected to be so until it has borne and brought to maturity all its appointed fruit. When the harvest of the world is ripe, when all have had the opportunity of faith, He will appear the second time.

THE LABORERS IN THE VINEYARD.

MATTHEW xx. 1-16.

SECOND to that of the Unfaithful Steward, this parable is full of difficulties in the way of clear interpretation. Chrysostom queried fifteen centuries ago over the various problems in this parable, as many have since and are doing now. He asked, "How can one who is himself a member of the kingdom of God be held by that lowest of all passions, envy, and an evil eye, grudging in his heart the favors shown to other members of that kingdom?" If it be denied that the grumblers are truly members of the kingdom, how is it that they are paid the wages?

Neander says the idea is, that all who faithfully obey their call, who are truly converted, and labor diligently after their conversion, whether it occur at an earlier or a later period, and their new life is long or short, are made partakers of the same blessedness in the kingdom of God. The question is not what they were before their conversion, but what they become after it. No one is entitled to receive more than his fellow receives; there being no human merit in the case, all that is given is of God's free grace and mercy in redemption. And it applies also to the relations of nations, including the Jews and Gentiles.

Many fanciful interpretations have been proposed, of which this is a specimen: If it is supposed that the hours of the day in which the laborers were hired are the successive ages in the world's history, then it is said that the different laborers hired were Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses and the Apostles; Jesus standing for the Lord of the Vineyard. In each case they were bidden to labor in the vineyard—to teach righteousness. Those called in the earlier ages had the harder task; the later were Christian teachers. Others say the summonses were given to Moses and Aaron, David and the kings, Maccabean princes and priests, and to Christ and the apostles.

Another idea is that the different hours are the different periods in men's lives at which they enter on the Lord's work.

The true spiritual meaning probably is that the reward is whatever each soul makes of it, as Thomas Aquinas says. There is one vision of God, but many degrees in the capacities of souls for enjoying it; one divine ray of light, which gladdens the healthy eye, but inflames and torments the diseased.

The Mystics taught that God exerted only one power, which operated for reward in good souls, and for punishment in evil.

The sentence, "Many are called, but few chosen," refers to the special qualities that some souls have for spiritual joy.

THE WISE AND THE FOOLISH BUILDERS.

MATT. vii. 24-27.

HEARING and doing, or practical efforts in support of the faith, is the lesson of this parable, which was spoken to instruct and encourage hearers to become doers of the word.

The wise man, who built his house on a rock, was one who took the faith into his heart, and built his spiritual edifice there, where it was secure against all attacks of doubts and criticisms, and resisted the storms of calumny and defamation.

The foolish builder is one who built on sand, and, spiritually, was the insincere man, whose self-righteousness was in opposition to the righteousness of the Lord; whose good works satisfied him that he had a claim on the Redeemer; whose profession of religion with its outward forms stands with him instead of the spirit and power of the faith.

Christ is the rock, the precious, immutable, sure foundation of all hopes of the kingdom of God. Those who build on that rock have some knowledge of the character, person, offices, and work of Christ, as set forth by the Church, and reject all things that are inconsistent with such a faith and belief.

THE TWO DEBTORS.

LUKE vii. 41-43.

DIVINE faculties were believed to slumber undeveloped in the soul until roused to action by teaching, example, or visions. It was further supposed that when that faculty was developed its possessor was able to see not only invisible things, but the character of any whom they met.

When the Pharisee noticed that Jesus permitted a lewd woman to perfume His head and feet with spiced oil, although the act itself was common, yet, because he believed her touch was contagious, he felt that Jesus was polluted by it; and probably thought that if Jesus could permit such defilement, or if He was ignorant of the character of the woman, He was doubly unfit to be called a prophet of God, because He could not see evil, or if He did, He did not rebuke it in this case. This argued in his mind a ceremonial lack of holiness.

The Persian poet Saadi wrote a beautiful legend which is well worth reading in connection with this parable:

“Jesus, it is said, while on earth, was entertained one day in the cell of a dervish of great reputation for sanctity. In the same city lived a youth sunk in vice and sin, whose heart was so black as to horrify Satan himself. Hearing of the presence of the great prophet, the young man appeared at the door of the cell, and lamented deeply the wickedness and folly of his past life, and shed many tears, imploring pardon and grace. The dervish was very indignant at his approach so near God’s holy prophet, and bid him depart, for there was no forgiveness for such a wretch as he. He also apologized to Jesus for his intrusion, and offered a prayer in these words: ‘O God, grant me that I may stand far from this sinful man in the judgment day.’ Then said Jesus, ‘Your prayers are granted. The young man sought mercy and grace, and has found them; for his sins are forgiven; his place shall be in Paradise on the great day. And for you, unforgiving and unmerciful dervish as you are, your place shall be in hades, far from him, as you wished it.’”

THE WISE AND FOOLISH VIRGINS.

MATTHEW xxv. 1-13.

CONSTANT preparation for the uncertain time of the second advent of Christ was the subject of this parable. The ever pressing necessity of being ready was clearly urged, but the time of that coming was purposely left undetermined in this, as it is in all other references to that question.

Virtue, under the form of prudence, is also a part of the lesson. Christian prudence differs from that ever-vigilant presence of mind which springs from one constant and predominant aim in life.

It is possible that the Great Teacher intended to warn His disciples against trusting in the vicarious services and merits of others.

The spiritual lesson is plain. The Bridegroom is Christ, the bride is the Church, the house is the earth. The wise young women have prepared for the expected visitation, but the foolish have neglected their duty. That is, some who are converted and join the Church never do anything more to advance in spiritual growth.

RELATIONS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD TO THE WORLD.

The Kingdom of Heaven is likened unto a certain king, which would take account of his servants. And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him, which owed him ten thousand talents. But forasmuch as he had not wherewith to pay, his lord commanded him to be sold, and his wife, and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made.

THE parables in the thirteenth chapter of Matthew have been considered as a connected series, indicating, progressively, the several stages of advancement through which the mystical Kingdom of God on earth was to proceed, from its beginning to its end, or consummation, for it can never end. Each parable belongs or relates to a certain period in that growth, during which a certain state of things exists, and each succeeding stage includes all that have gone before, the grand concluding scene re-enacting the entire series. In this view the Sower belongs to the time of calling the apostles, when the seed of the word of eternal life was first sown; the Tares to the next season, when dissensions, heresies, and false doctrine began to creep in; the Mustard-Seed to the time of Constantine, when the church had grown strong and extensive, and could afford shelter and aid to others; the Leaven to the time of its diffusion throughout the world; the Hid Treasure to the age when the church was still persecuted; the Pearl to the time in the future when Satan will be bound and the Kingdom of God be esteemed above all other things; and the Draw-net to the judgment, when the separation of contending elements will take place.

THE SOWER.

MATT. xiii. 3-8, 18-23; MARK iv. 4-8, 14-21; LUKE viii. 5-8, 11-15.

THIS is the first of the many parables of the Great Teacher, and it introduced a new manner of teaching to His hearers.

This and the one of the Wicked Husbandmen are the only ones common to the synoptic gospels, Matthew, Mark, and Luke.

The seed, being the truth conveyed in spoken words, fell on ears that were more or less educated, trained, and fitted for understanding what was said. The different degrees of ignorance, indifference, scorn, jealousy, hatred, and active opposition were likened to the various accidents incident to the business of sowing grain in a field.

The explanation which the Lord gave is clear. A hearer can only profit by what is heard in proportion to former education and training, and in the degree of willingness to receive instruction. How much such a preparation may depend on heredity, how much we may be indebted to our parents or other ancestors and teachers, is well worth considering.

The Scripture teaching seems to be that no soul can be good until the word has been received, and that there are many degrees of difference between good and bad souls both before and after they have received the truth.

Vast tracts of the earth's surface are useless for sowing anything, much less for growing food, and many small gardens are so precious for use in raising choice flowers, etc., beside the many places occupied by dwellings and other things required in our busy world, that grain-producing is impossible in such soil. Many men are mental deserts, icy-cold regions, while others are so occupied as to make it nearly impossible to get their attention to divine things.

The typical hearer would be one who was mature, educated, trained to think, anxious to know the truth, received it from an intelligent source, gladly meditated over it, patiently proved its fitness for this world, and then imparted the glad tidings to others.

THE TARES.

MATT. xiii : 24-30.

THE tares are the children of the wicked one, that is, doubts, errors, and heresies; and their fruit is centuries of violence and crime, intensified by having been done under a pretense of serving God; countries desolated by the follies, vices, and passions of their people; diseases that can not be eradicated, and that make us tremble for the future of mankind; sin and sorrow more bitter, more cruel, more appalling than any physical disease, because they are the products of spiritual disease.

The church teaches that Christ came to inaugurate a new order of things, which must prevail until all evil disappears from the world. Progress is difficult in the church where there are so many adverse elements, and is often apparently much farther advanced in the world outside of the church, in all the material requisites of civilization, and so far as a scientific basis for morals prepares the way, in spiritual matters also occupying a position higher and purer than the corrupt church.

The Master proposes to delay until the harvest, when He will separate the wheat from the tares, for He does not counsel hasty action in the church.

The true believer is satisfied with the reflection that although "The mills of God grind slowly,

But they grind exceeding fine," and simply looks forward to the second coming of Christ, and His purifying work in the final consummation, when evil will no longer be permitted to mar the lives of the good—the justified.

The tares may look as well as the wheat. The most dangerous enemies of good order and of virtue are often the most smooth-tongued and comely, finely-formed, plausible hypocrites and frauds in society.

The fruit of a person's life is according to the seed sown. No one in whose early years the seeds of tares were sown in greater proportion than of wheat, can expect a harvest purely of grain. The tares, fables, fancies, false doctrines, and all other forms of unwisdom, produce fruit as well as the truth, innocence, devotion to duty, and right.

THE MUSTARD-SEED.

MATT. xiii. 31, 32; MARK iv. 30-32; LUKE xiii. 18, 19.

In this parable we are reminded how small and slight may be the beginnings, the gradual progress toward the marvelous increase of the church, and the final spiritual dominion throughout the earth.

Jesus is Himself the mustard-seed and the man that sowed it, for the germ of the church was in Him, and unfolded itself from Him; and its pure principles are one with Him, as the tree is with the seed from which it grew.

Jesus as the Sower of the seed is the Great Teacher and example and the field, or as Luke says, His garden was the world.

The smallness of the seed is shown in the spoken word, which may fall on indifferent ears and be remembered only in part; and even when an impression had been made on some one, a fisherman, for instance, the beginning was still small.

The image of the mustard "tree," with birds resting on its branches, suggests the many drones and hangers-on in the church, and hypocrites with all sorts of vicious and wicked frauds, who seek the cloak of religion as a cover for their evil intentions. The growth of the tree exhibits the increase of truth among the students of God's word. That truth is the wealth of the kingdom of God, and they are blessed who are so fortunate as to become heirs of its precious treasures, and in any way be able to contribute to the increase or growth of truth in humanity.

THE LEAVEN.

MATT. xiii. 33; LUKE xiii. 20, 21.

As the parable of the Mustard-Seed signified the wonderful spread of the kingdom of God, openly, so this exhibits the hidden influences with which the church works its way in society and into the hearts of men. That is to say, Gospel truth in its influence on the hearts of men is like the working of leaven which in a little time affects the whole measure of meal.

Leaven is a fit emblem of the spread of gospel truth because it so aptly represents the good and evil which are ever blending in human life. The natural action of leaven is toward corruption, but the secondary action is for good, producing the best bread.

It was symbolic of moral corruption and therefore held to be offensive to God, and therefore it was condemned in the exodus (Ex. xii. 19), and was not permitted in the bread of the wanderers. But as the Passover represented deliverance from Egypt, the Feast of First Fruits was a memorial of the entrance into Canaan. After passing over Jordan the symbol of evil in leaven became the symbol of good.

In the most common use made of leaven we find it means falsehood, cunning, fraud, corruption, naughtiness, and sin, and yet Gregory Nazianzen says: "Lay aside the evil leaven which has grown old and maketh sour, and be transmuted into the new leaven, which is Christ Jesus." This good view of leaven indicates or prophesies the diffusion of the Gospel throughout the world—the three measures of meal perhaps meaning the Pharisees, Sadducees, Scribes, and the publicans and sinners and the Gentiles.

The working of leaven is like spiritual truth, from inside outwards. The world is not yet entirely leavened, and there is much work still for believers to do.

THE HID TREASURE.

MATTHEW xiii. 44.

THIS parable refers to the personal appropriation of the benefits of the kingdom of God, which every soul needs, and when possessed becomes a hidden treasure. The Gospel not being looked for by some, is yet sometimes met with by them, and becomes a matter of great joy, fitly termed a treasure, which is very naturally hidden in a country where there are no banks of deposits, and society is in an insecure condition.

It is the custom among rich men in the East to bury a part of their treasures while using another in business, as security against the rapacity of the government, thieves, and invading armies. Such deposits in the earth are frequently found by workmen. In one case at Sidon, in a garden, three stone jars were found filled with gold coins of Alexander the Great and of Philip, his father. Finding such a hid treasure one becomes suddenly rich. The inquiring sinner who finds the truth that is in the Gospel becomes suddenly spiritually rich, heir to and partaker of the wealth of the kingdom of God.

The value of this spiritual treasure becomes apparent only to those who make the discovery for themselves of the real nature of divine grace. Discoveries of treasure are made by those who search, and very seldom by accident.

Some say the field in which the treasure is hid is the Scriptures.

Selling all to buy the field containing hid treasure may mean that a soul must part with everything that has obscured

God's claim to the homage of his heart, for the field is to be obtained "without money and without price."

THE PEARL OF GREAT PRICE.

MATTHEW xiii. 45, 46.

THE kingdom of God is likened to a pearl of great price, which is eagerly sought by a wealthy man who is willing to pay any sum for it. The pearl is the truth, and when once the search for truth has been begun the effort gains in force, absorbs the thoughts and time of the soul, and permits no rest so long as there is a higher truth in prospect that may be attained. This is said in the parable to be selling all and buying the pearl of great price. This is a world in which exchange is absolutely necessary. No good thing can be had for nothing. Equal and exact exchange of value is nature's law, which law is as unerring as the law of gravity in the scales where a pound of gold only balances a pound of feathers. The soul is ready and really does exchange all that it has for the hope of future joy, believing that the hope is well founded and complete as a perfect pearl.

The merchant who seeks the pearl is Christ, and the pearl is the Church. In this view Christ gave Himself—all that He had to give—that the church might be established. Another says that the pearl is the kingdom of God, which was secured to us by one who was richer than all others, yet became poor for the sake of enriching humanity. Having gathered the riches of human life into a well-rounded and complete form, which is beautifully emblomed in the pearl of great value, he provided the machinery of the church as the most efficient means of imparting spiritual riches to poor souls.

THE DRAW-NET.

MATTHEW xiii. 47-50.

THE parable of the Tares recognizes the present mingling of good and bad souls in the church, good and bad plants in the garden, good and bad seed in the field, and this takes up the legend and refers to a future separation of good and bad elements in the spiritual world.

We are witnesses of such discrimination in the economy of nature constantly going on, in which fit material is chosen and unfit is rejected, and may easily be persuaded by analogy that a similar process purifies the spiritual world. This lesson, therefore, looks forward to the final consummation of the church, when it shall be coextensive with the world—that is, include every soul that has ever lived.

The problem of the presence of good and evil in the world, and also in the church of redeemed souls, has puzzled and grieved many of the best people in all ages. Many have asked, Why should the infinitely Just and Good apparently make laws and break them, in His dealings with men? Why should the infinitely Good and Wise seem to cast contempt on virtue and piety, and reward vice and rebellion? The only rational answer is that the Infinite has power to restrain or chastise wrong and avenge innocence, and this power is always used at the proper time.

That this is and has been the idea in the minds of all writers in the church, we learn from accounts of Satan in Eden, Ham in the ark, Golden Calf at Sinai, Judas among the Twelve, and now a spiritual Babylon within Israel's camp. When these opposing elements are to be harmonized has not been determined, for a large part of the church has maintained the belief that rewards and punishments are to be expected in the future life.

Chrysostom said this is a terrible parable, and Gregory the Great said that it is one to tremble at, but can not be expounded.

THE UNPROFITABLE SERVANTS.

LUKE xvii. 7-10.

THIS parable presents the Jew in his servile condition under the Law—the old or Mosaic dispensation. The disciples asked for increase of faith. The Lord will grant the request, but at the same time will magnify the value of the gift they ask. He shows them that all works done without the living principle of obedience which they enjoy under the new dispensation are merely servile, and merit only a servile reward, for God can take no pleasure in them, since He owes no thanks to them, because such are unprofitable servants after all they may do. The lesson teaches humility. Truly, there is no royal road to earthly ease and worldly distinction as followers of the Lord, for they must contend with their own corrupt hearts, trusting in Him for help and victory, for by a living faith in the Master they will be enabled to do all things.

Spiritually this lesson means that we must renounce our own righteousness and trust in that of the Great Example. All that we have or hope to become depends on grace—the grace of the Lord.

THE UNJUST STEWARD.

LUKE xvi. 1-9.

CHRISTIAN prudence is the lesson taught in this parable, that is to say, the faithful will always use the world and the world's goods against the world and for God, as exemplified in the conduct of the unjust steward, which was commendable.

Not to be honored for robbing his master, but commended for cleverness and shrewdness in providing for himself in the future, by making friends among his master's debtors. The sharp practice of business men is admired by men who are willing to profit by the wits of such as use craft and are unscrupulous.

The relation of the steward to his master shows the relation of man to God. The faithful are expected and required to be conspicuous among their fellow-men for intelligent and reverential acknowledgment of this lesson. Unfaithfulness in any form stands as its own witness against us, for all things are naked and open to the eyes of Him with whom we have to do. He needs no witness, but unfaithfulness ever makes many witnesses who delight in exposing it.

All stewardship looks forward to the day of settlement. It is the right of the master to require a report, and with God the reckoning is sure. We respect the laws of the material world, so far as they are known, and we are becoming more and more acquainted with them from year to year, and laws of the moral or spiritual world are probably founded on the same immovable principles, and will be obeyed as surely and as soon as we are made to know them as well as we know the laws of the material world.

The use of the conduct of bad men in the parables is somewhat perplexing, but even the upright may learn some lessons from selfish and dishonest men, without compromising themselves.

By showing their faithfulness in the things of this world, men prove their fitness to be intrusted with a higher stewardship, over heavenly riches, the true riches of faith.

Fidelity in the stewardship of the Lord is in choosing to serve God instead of mammon. In truly serving God mammon is made our servant.

THE UNMERCIFUL SERVANT.

MATT. xviii. 21-35.

PETER inquired, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of God? and this lesson was the answer, teaching the law of forgiveness as a means of gaining souls. The Jewish law required forgiveness three times over for the same offence, but commanded punishment for a fourth, and Peter felt that he was proposing a very generous rule in more than doubling the number of times that one should forgive an erring one. The Master taught that forgiveness should be unlimited—seventy times seven meaning to an oriental an endless succession.

Some Christian writers maintain that certain offenses ought not to be forgiven, for in most good men's estimation there is a limit beyond which it is contrary to good morals to go. But even in most aggravated cases, when it is known that forgiveness can be ascribed only to a merciful spirit, men do applaud the man who dares to forgive even the greatest of injuries. In contrast to this the unforgiving spirit is quite sure to exhibit unreasonableness and meanness, as this unforgiving debtor did, and within a few moments after he had received the highest tokens of favor for himself. He betrayed no sense of shame, no feeling for his master's losses, but only a dread of personal slavery and suffering. He seemed incapable of serious humility, honest thoughtfulness in facing the facts, or of a love of truth. He is very ready to promise if he can by it escape present disagreeable consequences.

But the King (who is God in fact), who had before dealt with the unmerciful servant as a creditor with a debtor, after hearing of his conduct with his fellow-servants, then dealt with him as a judge with a criminal, and delivered him to the tormentors.

This raises a question. Do sins that have been forgiven return on the sinner by reason of after offences? The forgiven soul, living near Christ, is free; "the soul that sinneth, it shall die." The soul that sins knowingly, and not one that does a wrong ignorantly, is guilty. A soul may sin "ignorantly" against some priestly law and still remain innocent before Jehovah.

The unmerciful servant was delivered to the tormentors until he should pay his entire debt. This is said to mean that judgment in the spiritual world which is looked for at the end of the world. In the meantime those who are faithful in the kingdom of God forgive others their trespasses as they hope to be forgiven.

THE GREAT FEAST.

LUKE xiv. 15-24.

God's provision for man's spiritual nourishment and gratification is called a great feast. The abundance and variety of supplies for the feast are calculated to satisfy the spiritually quickened who hunger and thirst after righteousness, and who long for peace and joy after trial and suffering.

The natural man is so indifferent to heavenly or spiritual things, his desire is so wanting or so very faint, that the feast must be prepared in an attractive manner. Even then, those who were invited, who knew what good things might be expected, and who are supposed to have been the Scribes and Pharisees, did not come, and publicans and sinners were compelled to attend instead.

The servants who were sent out to invite the guests were the apostles and evangelists, or, if we accept another interpretation, He was the Lord himself, who is the only true apostle and evangelist, whose mission was to do the Father's will on earth.

Those who were invited and excused themselves represent such as believe themselves in no need of divine things, rich enough in all that the priest is supposed to deal, occupied so much with their own affairs that there is no time for attending to anything more, and so well supplied with good things of their own that the feast has no attractions. Such souls may be spiritually poor without knowing their condition. The poorest, in fact, were those who felt it beneath their dignity to spend their time over such useless matters as the priests have to offer. The gospels do not record a single instance of one of the so-called spiritual leaders of the Jews who had attached himself in any way to Jesus. They all repudiated the Christ and His spiritual kingdom.

The anger of the master at those who despised his feast is the anger of God whose love is despised. They were all in the city—that is, in the Jewish people. The second class of invited guests were also among the Jews—the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind—or, in other words, the spiritually sick and needy.

The phrase, "compel them to come in," has been quoted as an excuse for calling in the civil power in aid of the church against such as opposed certain doctrines in all ages since the early church gained any power or influence in public affairs. Many wars have been waged over a trifling difference of opinion on one point or another, and probably will be in the future; for so long as the church can control in civil affairs, it will make a servant of the civil power. The only safety is in keeping religious and secular matters entirely distinct.

The spiritually poor, who are conscious of their poverty and unworthiness, must be forcibly reminded that the invitation is intended for them. The pious monk Anselm says that God compels poor souls to come in through calamities, and Luther said they were driven in by their awakened conscience.

Those who have no desire for or knowledge of spiritual things readily find excuses for absenting themselves from the "table of the Lord." The food is not attractive to them, and so the parable is true to human nature, which loves the world and its pleasant things, but has to acquire a liking for divine things.

Some are kept away by pride, or business, or pleasure, and are courteous enough to offer an excuse, but others refuse in plain terms—will not come to the supper because they have as good or a better at home.

Then the master in anger invited the poor, the maimed, the lame, and the blind to be guests at the supper. That is those who are spiritually ailing, while those who think they are spiritually rich, virtuous, meritorious, exclude themselves.

If the city in the parable represented the theocracy, or the Jewish people, then the highways and hedges stand for the Gentiles, or Pagans. In this sense the parable is prophetic, for it showed how God had prepared a supper for a larger number of guests than could be found among the Jews, and sufficient for the world—for both Jew and Gentile.

The command to gather from the highways and hedges other guests for the feast is supposed to refer to the preaching of the Gospel to the Gentiles, more distinctly announced in the command to preach the gospel to every creature.

The revelation of the Father's will in the solemn annunciation, "that none of these men which were bidden shall taste of My supper," seems to have been applied thoroughly to the Jews, for exceeding few have ever accepted the Gospel from that day to this. Jesus has never been welcome in the synagogue.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

LUKE xvi. 19-31.

In the writings of Justin Martyr, of Ambrosius, of Irenæus, and Tertullian, among the ancients, as well as in those of many moderns, this is not accepted as a parable, but such is its popular title still.

The lesson enforced is the fearful consequences of unbelief, of a heart set on this world, and refusing to accept the invisible or spiritual world on faith, and the consequences, discovered when too late to avoid them.

The sin of the rich man is unbelief; hard-hearted contempt and neglect of the poor, and luxurious squandering on self are the forms of his transgressions noticed. Those who reject the idea of an invisible spiritual world of righteousness, truth, and joy, must of necessity delight in things which can be seen, handled and possessed. This was also the offence of the Pharisee, love of the world, hard-heartedness toward others, and prodigality toward himself. The possession of riches was not included as a part of the offence. The rich man was not punished for being rich, nor Lazarus rewarded for being poor. When the rich forget that they are God's almoners, stewards for the poor, and indulge in pride and idleness, they are in danger of future misery.

If this parable refers to the spiritual riches which the Pharisees, or Jews, were supposed to appropriate to themselves, and the poverty which Lazarus, as the type of the Gentile nations, endured, we may find it exemplified and illustrated by the world as it now is. The rich man as the church claims to have the choicest spiritual riches, and assumes that non-believers are outcast and poor as Lazarus was, but assuming that time has brought its proper retribution, we find on looking about us that the great work of civilization has been done outside of and in spite of the church, and they possess the true riches of the world which in any way benefit mankind, while the church is literally "in hell," or hades, as it is in the new version, under the criticism of the scholars and thinkers of the age. The parallel could be carried further, but, of course, what the actual experience is in the unknown world of spirits can not be conjectured by us with any certainty. If we accept the statements of this parable as direct teaching from the Great Teacher, who must have known all about the subject, then this is the most awful of all the passages in the Bible.

The church itself recognizes that the feeling of the masses is that of simple indifference, and that unlimited skepticism, the positive license of a conscious godlessness, and a resolute self-trust and self-will are their only rule of life, as we learn from the writings of the Bishop of Bedford and Canon Barry, both of England. And John Bright says that the working classes care as little for the dogmas as the upper classes do for the practice of Christianity.

The leading thought of the parable is this: He that could not be awakened to repentance by Moses and the prophets could not be by the reappearance of the dead. The subordinate idea is the contrast between the rich man and Lazarus; those who seek their highest good in the pleasures of the world, and are thereby excluded from the kingdom of God, forming the principal figure. The kingdom found the hearts of rich men far less accessible than those of the poor like Lazarus; for the very reason that their feelings and dispositions were precisely those of the rich man of the parable.

THE STRAIT GATE.

LUKE xiii. 24-30.

Who would not now gladly ask for instruction from the Great Teacher if it were possible? This parable is an answer to one who inquired as if in doubt about the ultimate success of the kingdom, and was not in earnest himself.

The answer was not direct, but general. Each parable teaches a special truth, and no one repeats the lesson in another. In one the present time is the field for work; in this the future is referred to, as a warning, as something to be prepared for. The door is open now, but there will come a time when it will be shut—by the hand of death.

If the lesson and warning were directed to the Jews, the door was shut to them at the destruction of Jerusalem, first under Titus, A.D. 70, and finally under Hadrian, A.D. 136, when the people were expelled from the promised land.

The Great Teacher urged His hearers to strive—not to rest and expect others to do the work—but to make personal and never-ceasing effort to improve every opportunity. The homely adage, "self-made man," applies to this lesson. Very few men, if any, succeed in life who are not self-made.

THE GOOD SHEPHERD.

JOHN x. 11-16.

CHRIST criticised the Pharisees with severity, and justly, as false guides to the people, a late instance having called attention to them, in the case of the action of the priests and leaders toward a poor blind man. Christ declares Himself the divinely called leader of the people, and the blind man the type of all who felt oppressed and were repelled by the selfish rulers and teachers. He is the door both for the sheep and the shepherds, and He addressed the shepherds specially in this parable.

All who seek to gather followers and form parties in the theocratic community, and to turn men to themselves instead of to the Messiah, were thieves and robbers, and such persons never gain entrance to the hearts really seeking salvation. They prey on simple and credulous souls. The true teacher who leads his flock to the true fold will be saved, both the flock and himself.

Hirelings can not be trusted when there is real danger. The two classes of Pharisees are described as thieves or hirelings. One sacrificed the welfare of the people to their selfish ends and aims; and the other with better intentions, but with too little true love, and therefore lacking in courage to risk their all for the good of souls. They fled before the Evil One, the wolf.

The flock is larger than the Jewish people, and includes the Gentiles—all mankind. But the Jews have neglected to enter the fold, and George Herbert, the sweet singer of the church, has told of their loss in this verse:

"Poor nation, whose sweet sap and juice
Our cyens have purloined, and left you drie;
Whose streams we got by the Apostle's sluice,
And use in baptisme, while ye pine and die;
Who by not keeping once, became a debter;
And now by keeping lose the letter."

CHRIST THE DOOR.

JOHN x. 1-10.

HERE as in other parables we find spiritual truth represented by a similitude from nature. In the parable of the Sower Christ is the husbandman, the divine word is the seed, and the various degrees of susceptibility for the word in men's souls are likened to the variously productive soils in which the seed is planted, and in this the relation of souls to Christ is compared with that of sheep to the shepherd; and the self-seeking teacher, who offers himself, on his own authority and for a bad purpose, as a guide of men, is likened to a thief who does not enter the sheepfold by the door, but climbs over the wall.

This parable differs from those in the other gospels in being less historical in style. It merely alludes to what usually happens, while they refer to what might have or did actually happen once only, and then when human affairs are taken to illustrate spiritual truths.

Faith in Jesus as the only door of entry into the divine sheepfold is the lesson; and such faith is the supreme sacrifice for sin. All outward ordinances together will not suffice if this is wanting. This faith is for sinners, not for those who need no repentance. Any soul may come and be saved from the curse of the law, and when within the fold, under the care of the Shepherd, be free to come and go anywhere in the pasture land—that is to find spiritual food, to profit by doubts, criticism, inquiry, any and every aid to discovery of the truth. This method is now the rule in the church, and is bringing all sects and divisions into closer union. Thought, study, inquiry, scrutiny, for the fullest possible information on every point is the only safe way in this age of scientific investigation.

Christ is the shepherd and He is the door of the fold, for no one can enter but through His spiritual guidance and help into the kingdom of God.

THE TALENTS.

MATTHEW XXV. 14-30.

DIVERSITY of gifts followed by equal rewards is the lesson of this parable. The reward depends on the motives, not on the amount of one's labors, except so far as this might be affected by the disposition of the heart, and perhaps also to rebuke ambition and jealousy among the disciples themselves. The servant who makes no use of the capital entrusted to him is condemned. Faithfulness and zeal, not the measure of gifts, are made prominent, and the disciple is encouraged to put all diligence into our outward service, if we would give our account at the last with joy and not with sorrow.

An Oriental poet has told a story which illustrates this parable, as here:

"There went a man from home: and to his neighbors twain
He gave, to keep for him, two sacks of golden grain.
Deep in his cellar one the precious charge concealed;
And forth the other went and sowed it in his field.
The man returns at last—asks of the first his sack:
'Here, take it; 'tis the same; thou hast it safely back.'
Unharmed it shows without; but when he would explore
His sack's recesses, grain there finds he now no more;

One-half of all therein proves rotten and decayed,
Upon the other half have worm and mildew preyed.
The putrid heap to him in ire he doth return;
Then of the other asks: 'Where is my sack of corn?'
Who answered: 'Come with me, behold how it has sped,'
And took and showed him fields with waving harvests spread.
Then cheerfully the man laughed out and cried: 'This one
Had insight, to make up for the other that had none;
The letter he observed, but thou the precept's sense;
And thus to thee and me shall profit grow from hence;
In harvest thou shalt fill two sacks of grain for me,
The residue of right remains in full for thee.'"

THE POUNDS.

LUKE XIX. 11-27.

CHRIST made use of many parables during His ministry, while His disciples expected Him to establish a visible kingdom, to give them clearer ideas of the process by which a spiritual kingdom was to be founded and developed.

Three points were brought forward in this: the opposition to be met at Jerusalem; His departure (to the unseen world), and later return in triumph; and, finally, their duty to labor actively in the interval, and not to await in indolence victory by other means.

He showed how they must win their places in the kingdom of God by faithfully using the means intrusted to them. The use of money loaned on interest is the framework of the lesson.

Jellaleddin, the great religious poet of the East, wrote a poem in which life is described as a sum of money, to be laid out at interest for God:

"O thou that are arrived in being's land,
On His affairs was sent, at His command,
Thee thy Lord gave thy faithfulness to prove,
The sum of life, a capital in hand.
Hast thou forgotten thine entrusted pound?
Dazed with the market's hubbub dost thou stand?

"Instead of dreaming, up and purchase good:
Buy precious stones, exchange not gold for sand,
Thou at the hour of thy return wilt see Thy monarch set, with open book in hand.
What thou from Him receivedst He will bring
To strict account, and reckoning demand:
And a large blessing, or a curse from Him,
Thy faithfulness or sloth will then command."

The enemies of Jesus and of all righteousness will be judged in the great day. The destruction of Jerusalem has begun the fulfilment of this prophetic parable. That frightful day of doom to the Jewish people was a second coming of Christ in His wrath to them; but it will be fully ended only when Antichrist, and all who have served under his banner, shall have received his final doom.

CATARACT OF THE JORDAN. [MATT., iii:13.] —We have already seen the Jordan at the place where Christ was baptized. We are standing now before the source of one of the streams which lends its waters to form the Jordan. We are at Casarea Philippi, where one of the branches of the Jordan flows out from under the Hermon Mountain. The water here is clear and comes rushing and struggling out, flowing under fig and olive and black walnut trees. Outside of its sacred association, the Jordan is one of the most interesting sights, naturally, in the world. It falls in the course of a flow of not much over 100 miles, as much as 4,000 feet. At its source the purest water in the world, at its home in the sea the bitterest and most disagreeable. It begins with the ice of Hermon and ends with the heat of the desert.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO SAINT MATTHEW.

Nothing is of more importance, nothing more deserves a plain and fully-attested account, than the birth, life, death, and resurrection of our Redeemer, on which the eternal honour of God and the salvation of men so marvellously depend, and in which the scope and principal predictions of the Old Testament are so manifestly fulfilled. In the four Gospels now before us these things are plainly related, fully attested, and the accounts all deeply marked, not only with the utmost candour of the writers, but with the infallible direction and infinite authority of the Holy Ghost. Matthew and Luke trace our Saviour's history from his conception in the womb to his glorious ascension. Mark and John begin their accounts with his public appearances at his baptism and as a minister of the circumcision. Matthew and Mark (who often shortens, but sometimes adds to Matthew's accounts) chiefly insist on his acts; Luke, and especially John, on the divine discourses which he delivered. But, in all, the miracles which he wrought, the instructions which he inculcated, the conduct which he uniformly pursued, and the manner in which he endured his sufferings, plainly demonstrate him the Son of God and Saviour of the world. Matthew, Mark, and Luke seem to have written their histories of Christ about thirty years after his death, without having previously seen one another's narrative.

[The inspired title is not 'Gospel,' but 'The book of the generation of Jesus Christ.' The word 'Gospel,' however, beautifully expresses the import of the sacred narrative. 'Gospel' is derived from the Saxon god, good, and spel, a history or message; and is a translation of the Greek Ευαγγέλιον, from ευ, good, and αγγελία, a message.

Matthew, also called Levi (Lu. 5. 27), was a native of Galilee. He was a 'publican,'—in modern language, a collector of rates or taxes; or, perhaps (see ch. 9. 9), he might receive the more dignified title of 'custom-house officer.' He was one of the twelve who were early called to the service and companionship of our Lord. He preached the gospel of his kingdom during our Lord's ministry, ch. 10. 3; saw him after his resurrection; received the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost; and afterwards preached with much success, especially in Judea. His Gospel is believed to have been written about A.D. 41, or about eight or ten years after our Lord's ascension. As he wrote immediately for the Jewish converts, it has been conjectured that he wrote originally in Hebrew, and that his Gospel was translated into Greek about A.D. 60, while the evangelist was yet living; and there is no doubt that in very early times there were two copies (or MS. editions) of his Gospel, the one in Hebrew, the other in Greek. Nevertheless, from Matthew's interpretation of Hebrew words into Greek (see ch. 1. 23; 27. 33), and the perfect accordance of his phraseology, in such cases, with that of the other evangelists, who unquestionably wrote in Greek (comp. Mar. 5. 41; 15. 22, 34; Jn. 1. 38), the legitimate conclusion seems to be that Matthew, as well as the other evangelists, originally wrote in the Greek tongue. That he may have given an edition in Hebrew is no doubt possible; but the existence of such a Hebrew original rests upon no authority of MSS., can never rise beyond the level of conjecture, and is therefore inadmissible as an item in legitimate Scripture criticism. C.

The Gospel of Matthew might be termed the Bible in miniature. The object of the Bible is to present an all-sufficient Saviour and a complete scheme of saving truth to a sinful world. This is done by Matthew. No essential doctrine is omitted; no essential duty is overlooked; no essential ordinance is left out. The plan of the Gospel is systematic and logical. The genealogy of our Lord is traced from Abraham; and he is thus connected with the revelations and promises made to patriarchs and prophets. The mystery of his conception is explained; and he is thus proved to be God Incarnate. The story of his infancy, growth, wants, and sufferings is told; and he is thus proved to be man. The descent of the Divine Spirit upon him at baptism is narrated; and he is thus shown to have been specially consecrated and prepared for his great work. His temptation and triumph are recorded; and he is thus shown to have power over Satan, man's enslaver. His sermon on the mount and his parables are given; and he is thus shown to be the great Teacher. A series of stupendous miracles wrought by him is detailed; and he is thus shown to be very God. His passion and death upon the cross are described; and he is thus shown to have borne for us the curse of a broken law. His resurrection from the grave and his assumption of universal sovereignty are recorded; and he is thus shown to have completed redemption work, and to have become 'Head over all things to his church.'

Every fundamental doctrine of Christianity is embodied in this Gospel:—human depravity, repentance, faith, the incarnation, substitution, and sacrifice of Christ, the trinity, the judgment, heaven and hell. Every duty we owe to God, to ourselves, and to others is unfolded:—worship, prayer, Sabbath observance, implicit obedience to God, honour to parents, love to the brethren, charity to mankind, holiness of life and language, purity of thought. Matthew records the institution of the sacraments, baptism and the Lord's supper. He relates the appointment and commission of a gospel ministry, and he closes his Gospel by that solemn charge given by our Lord to his church:—"Go ye and teach all nations, . . . teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

It is well to note that the word gospel (with its Greek equivalent) is not used in the text of the New Testament in the same sense in which it is used in the title of this book. In the Greek text the term Ευαγγέλιον is confined to the 'glad tidings' of the Messiah's coming, and the salvation preached in his name. Thus in Mat. 11. 5, 'The poor have the gospel preached unto them;' that is, the advent and doctrine of the Messiah. So in Ro. 1. 1: 'Separated unto the gospel of God.' We also read of the 'gospel of salvation,' Ep. 1. 13; the 'gospel of peace,' Ep. 6. 15; the 'gospel of glory,' 1 Ti. 1. 11. Early ecclesiastical writers used the word in a more strictly technical sense, namely, as a proper name of the Lives of Christ. Justin Martyr is the first, so far as we now know, who employs it in this sense. The sacred narratives of the life and sufferings of Christ were then called 'Gospels,' and their authors 'Evangelists.'

Matthew was son of Alphæus, Mar. 2. 14; and as it is probable that James, the son of Alphæus, was a son of Mary, the wife of Cleophas, and sister of the mother of our Lord, Jn. 19. 25, Matthew was thus a near relative of Jesus. He was a native of Galilee; and his family must have been poor, as otherwise he would not have accepted the office of publican. From the time of his call he remained a close attendant upon Jesus, and witnessed nearly all the great events of his life. After the ascension he appears to have confined his ministry chiefly to the Jews, and to have laboured in Palestine. His Gospel was specially adapted to the wants of those among whom he laboured; and the fullest and most recent researches show that it could scarcely have been written before the year A.D. 60. P.]

* Jesus was the personal name of our Lord, given by the angel at the annunciation, to denote the special work he should accomplish. He was to be the Saviour of mankind. Christ, equivalent to the Hebrew Messiah, is the prophetic name of our Lord, indicative of his great offices, as anointed Priest, Prophet, and King. As here used it is a proper name; but in the body of the gospel narratives it is an appellative, and in Greek has the article. It is descriptive of him as the Messiah, the Anointed One.—P.

The reason of the change is, that the old name had become obsolete, and to distinguish the city from another of the same name, the words 'in the land of Judah' are added. Another verbal change is made upon the same principle. Matthew, under divine inspiration, modifies the language which he quotes, so as, while preserving its import, to adapt it to the new circumstances.—P.

2 Saying, Where is he that is born king of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him.

3 ¶ When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.

4 And when he had gathered all the chief priests<sup>1</sup> and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born.

5 And they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judaea: for thus it is written by the prophet;

CHAPTER I. Ver. 1-17. In this genealogy of Christ, by his supposed father, we have four women inserted, three of them Gentiles, and Bathsheba, an adulteress, to discover him as the Saviour of the Gentiles and of the greatest sinners. The three immediate descendants of Joram by Athaliah are omitted, to mark the curse of God upon unhallowed marriages to the third and fourth generation. 18, 19. Mary's espousal to Joseph prevented the imputation of bastardy to her son, and secured her an assistant to bring him up.—Joseph was afraid of marrying an unchaste woman on the one hand, or, on the other, of publicly exposing to be stoned one whom he hoped might be innocent.

Ver. 3. A considerable difference in the spelling of several names will be observed—e.g. Judas is spelled Judah; Phares, Pharez, Ge. 46. 12; Thamar, Tamar, Ge. 38. 6; Ezrom, Hezrom, Ge. 46. 12, &c. &c. This variety presents to the attentive reader of the Scriptures no serious inconvenience. It would, however, have been well had the translators studied uniformity.—Only four women out of forty-two are mentioned in this register—Thamar, Rahab, Ruth, and Bathsheba, against each of whom there lies some charge, either of personal sin, heathenism, or poverty. These facts are, most probably, thus educed to obviate the cavils of the Jews against the poverty of our Lord's mother, and, historically, to show that he came to save both Jew and Gentile, guilty not merely of original, but of the deepest actual transgression. C.

Ver. 18. Dating from the birth of Christ did not commence till about A.D. 730, which birth some place in the fifth year before the common era. From Malachi to Christ there are reckoned 400 years; from Ezra, 500; from Solomon, 1000; from the exodus, 1500; and from the creation, 4000; or, according to other calculations, 4004. C.

Ver. 19. A just man. Mild, benignant, as the word signifies among the Hebrews, Ps. 114. 17; Pr. 12. 10. C.

Ver. 22. That (or so that) it might be fulfilled. Not as if the design was to fulfil the prophecy, but that the event fulfilled it. For such use of the Greek iva, see Mat. 23. 26; Lu. 9. 45. C.

Ver. 23. Considerable difference of opinion exists as to the mode of interpreting this and many kindred passages in the New Testament. The passage quoted is from Is. 7. 14, and a glance at the context shows that the prophet there, under divine guidance, speaks of an event about to occur in his own time, and which would be a sign to the Israelites; whereas the words are by Matthew interpreted as prophetic of the Messiah. The solution is this, that while the words of Isaiah did refer directly to an event soon about to take place, yet that event was itself typical of another and greater—namely, of the incarnation. Such being the case, the language of the prophet applies as fully to the anti-type as to the type. There is no straining of the meaning therefore, no accommodation, in Matthew's application of Isaiah's words. The inspiring Spirit designed them to be applicable to our Lord. P.

REFLECTIONS.—Though long delays of God's favours may much exercise our patience, they do not in the least weaken his promises. Full and convincing is the evidence that our Jesus is the true Messiah, the Saviour of Jews and Gentiles, males and females, of sinners, even the chief. Marvellous was the providence of God that he should prepare him his holy manhood through and from such abominable persons and acts. But strange alterations take place in the temporal condition and moral qualities of families in a few generations. How miraculous was our Saviour's conception and birth, and how honourably testified! With great wisdom and prudence God conducted every circumstance thereof to his honour and to the happiness of those concerned. Yet they who receive remarkable honours from God may expect remarkable trials; but if we keep a good conscience, God will maintain, or, in due time, vindicate our honour. It is very comely when piety towards God, fidelity towards man, and tenderness of our reputation, go together. And in suspicious cases we should always hope the best, and depend upon God for such solution of our doubts as may enable us to proceed with freedom and comfort. But nothing can more enliven a perplexed mind than

THE HOLY LAND

IN THE TIME OF OUR SAVIOUR

VIEW OF BETHLEHEM. [MATTHEW, ii:1.]—Six miles south of Jerusalem is Bethlehem. When Jesus was born here in the days of Herod the king it was only a village. Its history dates back to the time of Jacob, who buried his wife Rachel near this place. Bethlehem was the home of Boaz, who married Ruth, and whose son was Obed, and whose grandson was Jesse, the father of David. Here David tended his father's sheep, and here he was anointed by Samuel as King of Israel and Judah.—I. Samuel, xvi:11-13. From this place went up the triumphal song, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." There are some 6,000 people here now, and they make their living by carving scenes in the life of our Savior out of mother-of-pearl, and by pressing flowers, which they sell to tourists.

art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule<sup>3</sup> my people Israel.

7 Then Herod, when he had <sup>k</sup>privily called the wise men, inquired of them diligently what time the star appeared.

8 And he sent them to Bethlehem; and said, Go<sup>1</sup> and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that <sup>n</sup>I may come and worship him also.

9 ¶ When they had heard the king, they departed: and, lo, the star,<sup>4</sup> which they <sup>o</sup>saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.

10 When they saw the star, they <sup>p</sup>rejoiced with exceeding great joy.

11 ¶ And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and <sup>a</sup>worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures,<sup>5</sup> they presented<sup>6</sup> unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

12 And <sup>r</sup>being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, <sup>s</sup>they departed into their own country another way.

13 And when they were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord <sup>t</sup>appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, <sup>u</sup>Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod<sup>v</sup> will seek the young child, to destroy him.

14 When he arose, he took the young child<sup>7</sup> and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt:

15 And was there until the death of Herod, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, <sup>w</sup>Out of Egypt have I called my son.

16 ¶ Then Herod, when he saw that he was

† There is some difficulty in the interpretation of this quotation. Bethlehem was a town of Judah;
Rachel was mother of Benjamin, and Ramah was one of the chief cities of that tribe; how then can it be said that Rachel was weeping for her children? The solution is this—Rachel died and was buried on the southern border of Benjamin, and within half a mile of Bethlehem.
Herod slew the children not in the town merely, but 'in all the coasts thereof,' and consequently in that part of Benjamin around Rachel's sepulchre. The sepulchre was, and still is, well known. By a bold and beautiful

presented as rising from her tomb, and filling the whole country with a wail of sorrow over her slaughtered children.

mocked of the wise men, was <sup>v</sup>exceeding wroth, and sent forth, and slew all the children<sup>8</sup> that were in Bethlehem,<sup>9</sup> and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, accord- ing to the time which he had <sup>z</sup>diligently in- quired of the wise men.

17 Then was fulfilled<sup>1</sup> that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet,<sup>2</sup> saying,

18 In Rama was there a voice heard, lamen- tation, and weeping, and great mourning, Ra- chel weeping<sup>3</sup> for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not.<sup>4</sup>

19 ¶ But when Herod was dead, <sup>a</sup>behold, an angel of the Lord appeareth in a dream to Joseph in Egypt, 20 Saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and go into the land of Israel: for they are dead<sup>5</sup> which sought the young child's life.

21 And he arose, and took the young child and his mother, and came into the land of Israel.

22 But when he heard that Archelaus<sup>6</sup> did reign in Judea in the room of his father Herod, he was afraid to go thither: notwithstanding, <sup>b</sup>being warned of God in a dream, he turned aside into the parts of <sup>c</sup>Galilee:<sup>7</sup>

23 And he came and dwelt in a city called <sup>d</sup>Nazareth: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets, He shall be called a Nazarene.<sup>8</sup>

CHAPTER III.

1 John preacheth: his office, life, and baptism. 7 He rebuketh the Pharisees: 13 he baptizeth Christ in Jordan, and receiveth a witness from heaven.

IN those days came <sup>a</sup>John the Baptist, preach- ing in the wilderness of Judea,

3 For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, <sup>c</sup>The voice of one cry-discoveries of Jesus Christ as the great God-man, who effectually saves from sin and wrath.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1. Wise men. Magi. These were originally Persian philosophers and priests; but the name was applied to such men of other countries as applied themselves to the study of astronomy, theology, &c. Daniel was set over the Babylonian college of the Magi, Da. 5. 11, whereby we may learn the purity of their scientific pursuits and original religious principles. These visitants were probably Jews; but from what country east of Jerusalem does not appear. C.

Ver. 2. Tacitus and Suetonius testify that, throughout the whole East there was, about this time, a general expectation of the birth of a king in Judea who should reign over the whole world. This opinion would naturally arise from the prophecies concerning the birth of Christ, which, by means of the Septuagint translation, and the dispersion of the Jews, had now been extensively diffused through all that had once been the Greek, and now was the Roman empire. C.

Ver. 4. Chief priests. The heads of families in the twenty-four courses, 1 Ch. 24. 6, and all that were members of the Sanhedrin, or Jewish senate, Mat. 26. 3; Jn. 18. 3.—Scribes. Literally writers, because they were chiefly employed in writing copies of the law, and, because of their familiarity with it, in giving interpretations. From 1 Ch. 24. 6; 2 Ch. 34. 13; Ezr. 7. 11, 12, it is evident that the scribes were exclusively of the tribe of Levi. C.

Ver. 15. This prophecy has been interpreted as a mere accommodation of the words of Hosea to our Lord. But the doctrine of accommodation is such that, if once admitted, it must introduce a constant uncertainty of interpretation, unless the accommodation be expressly declared. Here there is no such intimation. The words were therefore originally intended for Christ, and were never fulfilled, except in type and shadow, till Christ the Son of God was literally 'called out of Egypt.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—How deep was the debasement, and early the sufferings, of our Redeemer! and yet attended with the honours of an extraordinary star directing to him; the devout visit of the wise men; and the repeated directions of God concerning him. How early the Gentiles begin their gathering to Shiloh! and often they who live farthest from the means of grace are first converted. Even in extraordinary appearances of nature we ought to inquire after God's mind and will; and if we be earnestly desirous to know and find Christ, neither pains nor perils will hinder us. Nothing produces so great a hatred of Christ and his kingdom as ignorance of their nature and design. And it is awful when repeated directions concerning him do but make men the more deceitful and desperately murderous. Adorable is the providence of God, which disappoints the devices of his crafty, powerful, and cruel enemies, and turns them into means or occasions of verifying his predictions and executing his purposes. He takes delight to encourage and direct young converts who are ready humbly to give to Jesus themselves and all that they have. And the more nearly any are connected with Christ, the more divine protection and direction they may expect; and the more readily and cheerfully must God be obeyed. Into what monsters of wickedness has sin transformed some men! And wicked rulers will never want wicked instruments to act by. Children, life, lands, and all other created enjoyments, are certain sorrows, but very uncertain comforts. Let my care be to have God as my portion, and to live with him as my Father and Companion, go where I will!

CHAPTER III. Ver. 2. The kingdom of heaven often denotes the gospel dispensation, but sometimes the heavenly glory, or the work of grace in the heart. 7-10. Ye hypocritical Pharisees and irreligious Sadducees, who, like your father the devil, are full of malignant enmity to all real goodness, who hath instigated you to apply for my baptism as a mean of escaping the temporal and eternal judgments to which ye are so exposed? Bring forth therefore good works in heart and life, suitable to the nature and evidential of the sincerity of your repentance, or else my baptism will do you no service. Imagine not that your not being profane Gentiles, but descendants of Abraham, will secure you from God's justice; for he will rather raise up a seed of believing and obedient followers of Abraham out of these Gentile soldiers, or even these stones, than save any of you who persist in your sins. God is now giving you the last trial. If ye reject the Messiah and his gospel offers which shall soon be presented to you, his judgments, which are now waiting, shall quickly destroy your nation, and cast you into temporal and eternal miseries, on account of your wickedness. 11, 12. By my baptism I am but attempting to prepare you for the infinitely more worthy Messiah, who will pour out upon you his Holy Spirit in a miraculous manner, and whose operations

THE TREE OF THE VIRGIN AT MATARIYEH. [MATTHEW, ii: 13-15.]—Out about six miles from Cairo and in the suburbs of the ancient city of On, where Moses was educated, is the village of Matarieh, where Mary and Joseph with the infant Jesus spent the time of the sojourn in Egypt. There is an old tree here inclosed, as you see in the picture, that is said to be the identical tree under which the holy family rested. Nearly all tourists who go to Egypt make a pilgrimage to Matarieh. Near this place was the Temple of the Sun, where Potiphara, the father-in-law of Joseph, acted as priest, and here Joseph and Asenath, his wife, lived. The holy family could have spent the time of the sojourn in Egypt at no more fitting place than in the neighborhood where Joseph and Moses lived.

SCENE ON THE JERUSALEM ROAD. [Matt., ii:21.]—Upon the death of Herod Joseph and Mary returned from Egypt to Nazareth. After leaving Egypt they went up by Hebron and Kuryet El Anab, and from thence by the Jerusalem road to Ramleh and then northward to Nazareth. The scene given in the above picture, in the light of all historical statement, was witnessed by the holy family. For this is the road from Jerusalem to Ramleh that has been here in all ages. It is about twelve miles out from Jerusalem and about four miles from Kuryet El Anab. Standing at this high point we are in sight of the Mediterranean Sea and the Valley of Ajalon and the plains of Sharon.

ing in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

4 And the same John <sup>a</sup>had his raiment of camel's hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins;<sup>2</sup> and <sup>b</sup>his meat was locusts and wild honey.<sup>3</sup>

5 ¶ Then<sup>4</sup> went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan,

6 And were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins.

7 ¶ But when he saw many of <sup>b</sup>the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, <sup>c</sup>O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to <sup>d</sup>flee from the <sup>e</sup>wrath to come?

8 Bring<sup>f</sup> forth therefore fruits meet for repentance:<sup>4</sup>

9 And think not to say within yourselves, We<sup>g</sup> have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able <sup>h</sup>of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham.

10 And <sup>i</sup>now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: <sup>j</sup>therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

11 If indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: but he that cometh after me <sup>k</sup>is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: <sup>l</sup>he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire:

12 Whose<sup>m</sup> fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire.

13 ¶ Then<sup>n</sup> cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan, unto John, to be baptized of him.

14 But John forbad him, saying, <sup>o</sup>I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?

15 And Jesus answering, said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for <sup>p</sup>thus it becometh us

It was, and still is, different from the costume of the peasants in other parts of Palestine. It consists of a loose robe of camel's or goat's hair; a coarse under-garment bound round the waist by a girdle of leather; a coloured handkerchief thrown over the head, and encircled by a fillet of camel's hair. The feet are either bare or partially covered with sandals of undressed skin. The simple costume has remained unchanged among the Bedawin of Arabia and the semi-nomad shepherds of Palestine for thousands of years.—P.

to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered him.

16 And<sup>z</sup> Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him:

17 And, lo, a voice from heaven, saying, <sup>aa</sup>This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Christ fasteth forty days, and is tempted of the devil. 11 The angels minister unto him. 12 He dwelleth at Capernaum, 17 beginneth to preach, 18 calleth Peter and Andrew, 21 James and John, 23 and healeth all the diseased.

THEN was <sup>a</sup>Jesus led up<sup>1</sup> of the Spirit into the wilderness, to be <sup>b</sup>tempted of the devil.

2 And when he had <sup>c</sup>fasted forty days and forty nights, he was afterward <sup>d</sup>an hungered.<sup>2</sup>

3 And when the tempter came to him, he said, <sup>e</sup>If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread.

4 But he answered and said, <sup>f</sup>It is written, <sup>g</sup>Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

5 Then<sup>h</sup> the devil taketh him up into the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple,

6 And saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, <sup>i</sup>He shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

7 Jesus said unto him, <sup>j</sup>It is written again, <sup>k</sup>Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

8 Again,<sup>l</sup> the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them; will be enlightening, warming, powerful, and purifying. He, by his infinite knowledge, by his gospel doctrines, and by his gracious and awful providences, will purify his Jewish church, and separate the precious from the vile; admitting every sincere believer into his gospel church and heavenly mansions, and casting out unbelievers, as light and vain, worthless and unprofitable, into lasting miseries on earth, and eternal banishment in hell.

Ver. 2. The word here translated repent is not the word used describing Judas, Mat. 27.3. That word merely signifies to be distressed when a thing is done. The word used by John signifies to think after an action, so as to change the mind and amend. C.

Ver. 5.6. This statement contains a curious, succinct, and edifying notice of a great religious revival, such as God frequently bestows upon his church. That much proceeded from mere excitement, much from fashion, much from hypocrisy and base worldly feelings or motives, cannot be doubted. Still, in the midst of all that is thus transient or unreal, there is much that is real and abiding; and the work of God is not to be neglected because the world, or the flesh, or the devil may attempt to disgrace the original by base and spurious imitations. C.

Ver. 7. Pharisees. So called from a Hebrew word that signifies to separate; because they separated themselves by superior strictness of religious profession.—Sadducees. A Jewish sect, said to derive their name from one Saddoc, who denied spiritual existences and a future state of rewards or punishments. C.

Ver. 10. Fundamental truths and principles were now to be tested by Christ's gospel. Formality would no longer be tolerated. Name, and profession, and external rites would no more supply the place of sound doctrine and purity of heart. The fruitless tree, however noble in appearance, would be cut down as a cumber of the ground. P.

Ver. 11. He shall baptize you, &c. This promise was miraculously fulfilled on the day of Pentecost; and, ordinarily, in every believer, when the 'Spirit of truth' refutes every falsehood, and the 'Spirit of holiness' expels every impure desire. C.

Ver. 12. Burn up the chaff. In warm countries chaff and such light materials are frequently burned to prevent their harbouring the eggs and young of destructive insects. C.

Ver. 13-17. We note in this simple but solemn narrative the following grand truths:—1. Our Lord's public and formal consecration to office. The Holy Spirit, of whom the anointing oil was a symbol, was 'poured out' upon him. 2. The gift of the Spirit was permanent. It descended and remained upon him, Jn. 1.32. 3. The Spirit came in the form of a dove, the symbol of peace to a guilty world. 4. Our Lord's assumption of office as Mediator was publicly accepted of the Father. 5. The glorious Trinity is here openly manifested combining to work out the scheme of redemption. P.

Ver. 15. All righteousness. That is, every righteous ordinance—here, most probably, referring to the washing of the priests previous to inauguration, Ex. 29.4. C.

Ver. 16. Like a dove. Neither these, nor the words in Lu. 3.22, convey the idea that the Spirit appeared in the shape of a dove, but merely that the body of the Shekinah light descended after the manner of a dove, hovering over its resting-place before it descends. C.

REFLECTIONS.—No place on earth can shut us out from the visits of divine grace. And often the sweetest intercourse with God is enjoyed when we are most withdrawn from the world. Ministers should accommodate themselves to the circumstances in which God places them. They who call others to self-denial, mourning for sin, and mortification of it, must show themselves as examples; and they who have experienced spiritual pleasures, must look upon carnal delights and enjoyments with a holy indifference. Thorough convictions of the horrible nature of sin, and of the vanity of earthly things, are good preparations for readily receiving the gospel. Even ministers and ordinances are but empty things without Christ. But the faithful work of ministers, and the almighty influences of God, are necessary to gain him admission into men's hearts. And it is the promises and power of the gospel which chiefly induce men to sincere grief for their sins. Yet, alas! multitudes often seem fond of hearing the gospel, while few really believe it; and most men are ready to rest in external professions or privileges, without any experience of the power of religion. Indispensable is the necessity of true repentance, marked by a holy life, under the influence of the Holy Ghost; and happy for ever are they who are once partakers of this grace! But awfully miserable are they who remain hypocritical and unfruitful hearers! Their day of grace soon comes to an end, when they shall be separated from the godly, and cast into endless destruction. God puts great honours upon such as, through a real sense of their own unworthiness, seek to shun it.—But what delight Jesus took to fulfil all righteousness necessary for him as our Savior, and to honour all his Father's institutions! And great was the delight of JEHOVAH and his Spirit to qualify him for and bear witness to his work. May my soul therefore entertain the most exalted and endearing thoughts of him, as the Son of God and my Saviour, as the Father's Beloved, in whom I am accepted to eternal life!

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 3. If thou be the Son of God. Does not the 'if' imply a doubt calculated to stimulate pride; while the formation of 'bread' is calculated to remind our Lord of his 9 And saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me.

10 Then saith Jesus unto him, <sup>2</sup>Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, <sup>3</sup>Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.<sup>3</sup>

11 Then<sup>r</sup> the devil leaveth him, and behold, angels came and ministered unto him.

¶ In this threefold temptation we have combined in principle the whole range of human temptation. St. John contrasts the love of the world with the love of God. The former comprehends all sin; the latter all righteousness. He then sums up the whole contents of 'the world' in three things: 'the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life' (1 Jn. 2.16). These three constitute the whole range of sin, and the sole channels of temptation. Satan knew this, and he tried them all with Jesus. He first assailed him through 'the lust of the flesh'—the natural appetite which man must satisfy if he would sustain life. 'The pride of life' was next assailed—the natural desire for display, for exhibiting power. The final assault was upon 'the lust of the eye'—ambition, in fact. The apostle affirms that Christ was in all points tempted like as we are; and here is proof of it.—P.

CHAPTER V.

1 Christ beginneth his sermon upon the mount, declaring who are blessed, 13 who are the salt of the earth, 14 the light of the world, the city on an hill, 15 the candle: 17 that he came to fulfil the law. 21 What it is to kill, 27 to commit adultery, 33 to swear falsely: 38 exhorteth to suffer wrong, 44 to love even our enemies, 48 and to aim at perfection.

AND seeing the multitudes, <sup>a</sup>he went up into a mountain:<sup>1</sup> and when he was set, <sup>b</sup>his disciples came unto him:

2 And he <sup>c</sup>opened his mouth, and taught them, saying,

3 Blessed<sup>d</sup> are the poor in spirit; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

hunger?—Note, The first act of Christ's ministry was a conflict with Satan, in which body and spirit both triumph, for the example and encouragement of all his tempted people. C.

Ver. 5. It is not necessary to suppose, with some, that Satan carried our Lord through the air, but merely that he conducted him to the roof of the temple, and placed him on a pinacle, or rather battlement, of the temple. Satan now quotes Scripture, though falsely, because imperfectly (comp. Ps. 91. 11, 12), and thus attempts to foil our Lord with his own chosen weapon. C.

Ver. 8. By comparing this verse with Lu. 4. 5, it will be evident that Satan exhibited, as it were, a visible panorama of all the glories of earthly kingdoms; while he may also have pointed out their relative positions and boundaries. C.

Ver. 13. Capernaum—not being mentioned in the Old Testament, is supposed to have been built after the return from Babylon. Our Lord's denunciation (Mat. 11. 23) has been so signally realized, that the place where it stood cannot now be distinguished. C.

Ver. 15. In this verse the chief scenes of our Lord's public ministry are mentioned. Each clause is in the original a proper name, and ought to be so translated. The true meaning may be thus brought out:—The land of Zebulon; the land of Nephthalim; the sea-coast (i.e. the circuit of the Sea of Galilee); Peraea (the country beyond Jordan); Galilee of the Gentiles (a district of Upper Galilee, so called because it was chiefly inhabited by Gentiles). Capernaum stood nearly in the centre of these provinces. P.

Ver. 18. Sea of Galilee. This sea is a considerable fresh-water lake, sometimes called the Sea of Tiberias, from a town of that name on its western shore; sometimes also the sea or lake of Gennesareth, Chinnereth, or Cinnereth, from a tract of land lying on its western border. C.

Ver. 23. Synagogues were now very numerous in Judea, Jerusalem alone containing nearly 200. Some think none were erected till after the Babylonish captivity, but they are mentioned in the Psalms; and even if they were not, the necessity of such places for public worship and instruction would go far to render their previous existence probable, if not certain. C.

Ver. 24. Devils should rather be translated demons; for the word devil seems properly to apply to one evil spirit, exercising some authority over his numerous agents of evil. The idea that this demoniacal possession was merely a figurative expression for certain severe diseases, is utterly inadmissible, inasmuch as there is a clear distinction drawn between such possession and ordinary disease; moreover, the demons are represented as speaking—a statement which no violence of figure could apply to any bodily disease. C.

deemer, who so wrestled in prayer, so struggled with the temptations of Satan, so laboured in teaching and healing sinners of mankind—all for the sake of his enemies, and that he might succour them that are tempted! It is necessary that preachers be fitted for their work by remarkable endowments of the Holy Ghost, solemn prayers and fasting, and even by experience of manifold temptations. And never is Satan more ready to harass souls than immediately after solemn fellowship with God, or while employed in extraordinary devotion. He leaves no circumstance unimproved for his purpose; and nothing is too horrid, atheistical, unbelieving, murderous, or idolatrous for him to insist on, nor any worldly advantages too great for him to promise. If therefore we hope to defeat him, we must undertake it not by carnal reasoning, but by a believing use of the oracles of God answerable to his temptations. And God and his angels take pleasure to honour those who faithfully resist Satan. In vain do sinners attempt to stop the gospel of Christ. If one preacher be laid aside by death or imprisonment, God can raise up another more excellent; and if some thrust the gospel from them, he will make others gladly receive it.—Infinite is the excellency and usefulness of our Redeemer in publishing the gospel; in enlightening the world by his truth; in healing diseases unnumbered of soul and body; in dispossessing devils, and raising up ministers to win sinners to himself. No natural unfitness can hinder his qualifications, and no obstinacy can ignore his call. May the grace of his kingdom induce multitudes to repentance, and his instructions make many light in the Lord! May his grace afford us pastors according to his own heart, by whose ministrations many may be converted to himself!

CHAPTER V. Ver. 3. Truly happy they are, and shall be, who are sensible of their own ignorance, sinfulness, and insufficiency, and depend on God's free grace for instruction, forgiveness, and supply; and whose hearts are so weaned from the riches, honours, and pleasures of this life, that they readily submit to God's disposals, and part with everything temporal for the gospel's sake; for they have a full and everlasting interest in all the riches and honours of the kingdom of grace here, and of the kingdom of glory hereafter. 4. Happy are they who evangelically mourn under a deep sense of their own sinfulness of heart and life, and the miseries to which they are thereby exposed, and for the dishonour done to God by others, or the miseries inflicted on them; for they shall, in due season, be revived by the comforts of the Holy Ghost, and shall at last enter into the full and everlasting joy of their Lord. 5. Happy are they who, sensible of their own unworthiness, and of God's great goodness, readily submit to his will in all things without murmuring, and who are gentle and patient to their fellow-creatures, hardly provoked and easily appeased; for they, with God's friendship, and with inward satisfaction in their own minds, shall enjoy whatever of the good things of this world are most for their real advantage, and shall have their happy share in the new heavens and the new earth. 6. Happy are they who highly value, and earnestly desire and apply, my complete sacrifice for their justification, and my Word and Spirit for the sanctification of their nature; for their desires shall be granted, and their souls eternally filled with all possible graces and comforts. 7. Happy are they who, from an unfeigned faith in God's special mercy to themselves, are tender-hearted towards others, readily forbearing severities, forgiving injuries, pitying and relieving the distressed; for God, in his unbounded kindness, will reward them with mercies inexpressibly more valuable. 8. Happy are they whose religion is pure and undefiled, whose hearts are purified by faith, their consciences washed in the blood of Jesus from guilt, their natures and tempers rendered holy by his Spirit, and who allow themselves in no hypocrisy, pride, or sensuality; for they shall enjoy delightful

WALL OF TIBERIAS—IN SIGHT OF THE PLACE WHERE CHRIST DELIVERED THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT. [MATT., iv: 25.]—"And there followed him great multitudes of people, from Galilee and from Decapolis, and from Jerusalem and from Judea, and from beyond Jordan." The verse quoted above gives us some insight into the wonderful influence of our Lord at this particular part of His career among the masses of Palestine. When He went up into the mountain to deliver the memorable sermon recorded in Matthew's Gospel, He was surrounded by people from all parts of the Holy Land. While on top of the mountain, where according to tradition He delivered the sermon, He was in sight of the place where Tiberias now stands. The party who secured the photographs which are found in this work were on top of the Mount of Beatitudes, May 8th, 1894. We came down from the mountain and descended directly to Tiberias. The above view was taken on the 8th of May, 1894, about 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

17 ¶ Think not that I am come to destroy fellowship with God here, and the full and immediate vision and enjoyment of him for ever. 9. Happy, and that eternally, shall they be who, being reconciled to God through Christ, have his peace filling their hearts, and rendering them earnestly diligent to maintain and promote peace in every society they are connected with, as far as they can, in a consistence with truth and holiness; for this manifests them to be the children of God, who shall he openly and eternally owned as such, and enjoy all the privileges that belong to the adoption of sons. 10-12. Happy are they who, with faith and patience, undergo the severest persecutions for their adherence to me, my truths and ways; for they are interested in, and shall enjoy, all the blessings of the gospel and of the heavenly state.—Do ye therefore, my disciples, reckon it a real happiness, and rejoice and glory in it, if, while ye live soberly, righteously, and godly, ye be reproached and persecuted for preaching my gospel, and following my example in holiness; for God will graciously reward you, and make even your troubles work for you an exceeding and eternal weight of glory; and know, for your encouragement, that in this path of persecution all the ancient prophets, those favourites of Heaven, travelled to and obtained their heavenly, their distinguished, rewards. 13. Ye are appointed, by your instructions and example, to spread abroad the savour of my knowledge wherever ye go, to reform the world, and preserve it from utter corruption and ruin. If therefore your hearts be gracious, your doctrines sound, and your lives exemplary, ye will be the blessed means of purging out corruptions in faith and manners, and of making multitudes of converts acceptable to God and useful to man. But if ye degenerate into unfaithful, cold, and carnal tempers, corrupt notions, and licentious lives, ye will become the most unprofitable, worthless, and contemptible of men. 14-16. Ye are appointed, in the most public manner, to spread abroad the light of my gospel in a dark world, and, by your instructions and example, to direct sinners into the way of salvation. Take care, therefore, that your doctrine and conversation shine with such lustre and purity before all men wherever ye go, that, by means thereof, they, under the influence of divine grace, may be brought to esteem, acknowledge, and admire the great excellency of real religion, as displayed in you, and to embrace and practise it themselves, to the glory of your heavenly Father. 17, 18. Think not that I am come to abrogate the moral law, or to set aside the writings of the Old Testament, or to teach anything contrary thereto. No, my great aim and work is to confirm them. I am come to explain, enforce, and establish the moral law, as an everlasting rule of righteousness, and to vindicate it from the injurious glosses which have been put upon it. I am come to fulfil all its precepts and its penalty, as a broken covenant, in the room of sinful men; and, in so doing, to answer all the types, accomplish the prophecies and promises, and to fill up all the defects of the Old Testament dispensation. For I assure you, in the most solemn manner, that no part of the typical ceremonies, or of the Old Testament predictions, shall be left unfulfilled, and no obligation of the moral law shall ever be set aside. And as I myself will persevere in the most exact obedience till the last moment of my humbled life, so will I excite and enable my followers to persevere in their obedience till the end of the world. 19. Whoever therefore shall wilfully set aside and transgress even the least of these moral commands, or teach or encourage others to do so, shall be held unworthy to be a subject, and much more an officer, in the gospel church, or of admission into the heavenly glory; and he who, from a principle of faith and love, shall conscientiously respect all these commandments, and teach and encourage others to do so, shall be highly honoured among my subjects and servants. 20. I assure you that, unless ye be interested in my complete fulfilment of the law in your stead, and unless your personal conformity to the law be more excellent, spiritual, and extensive than that of the highest pharisaical pretenders to holiness, ye can never be admitted to the blessings of the kingdom of grace here, or of glory hereafter. 21, 22. For, to give you some specimens of their defective interpretations and observances of the moral law, they pretend that there is no disobedience to the ancient command prohibiting murder, and adjudging murderers to death, but in wilfully and unjustly taking away a man's life. But such is the spirituality and extent of this commandment, that whosoever indulges rash, wrathful, and causeless anger, or a malicious and revengeful temper, is, in God's account, guilty of murder in his heart, and thereby exposed to his righteous judgment; and whoever in pride and passion revile their neighbours as worthless empty wretches, or as profane reprobate brands of hell, involve themselves in still deeper guilt, and ought to be punished by men, but shall not escape the far more severe and everlasting justice of God. 23, 24. Never therefore presume to perform any act of religious worship, or to hope for its acceptance with God, while ye indulge yourselves in causeless and sinful anger, or in evil speaking; but if ye have offended a brother, first humbly confess your fault, ask his pardon, and satisfy him for the wrong you have done him, and then present your devotions to God, in hopes of forgiveness and acceptance. 25, 26. And as both God and your brother are jointly offended, without delay embrace the reconciliation which God offers you in his promises, and be reconciled to your offended brother while ye are in the way of mercy, lest death cut you off in your sins, and drag you to the tribunal of God, that you may be condemned and cast into hell, from whence ye can never be released, since everlasting sin is the complete equivalent of everlasting hell. 27-30. The scribes and Pharisees pretend that nothing else is prohibited by the ancient commandment respecting adultery but a man's actually lying with a woman who is not his wife. But I assure you that, according to the mind of God in this precept, every man who looks upon any woman with unchaste desires after her, and contrives how to accomplish them, is guilty of adultery in his heart, though he has not had opportunity to commit it in fact; and therefore, if this, or any other sin, should be ever so dear, apparently pleasant, or profitable to you, and though it should require great self-denial, and be very painful for you to part with it, yet, as the loving, harbouring, or practising it, would defile and endanger your soul, offend God, and expose you to his everlasting wrath, mortify, detest, and abhor it without delay: it is better to suffer the greatest uneasiness and temporal loss in so doing, than that your whole man should be eternally lost, in hell on account of your indulging and practising it. 33-37. Your scribes and Pharisees pretend that the ancient command relative to swearing prohibits only the breach of such oaths as are sworn by God himself, or the swearing by his name in ordinary conversation; but I assure you that it prohibits the swearing by any creature, and the violation of such oaths as are sworn by them, since God is represented in, and connected with, every creature ye can swear by. Do not therefore swear at all by creatures, or in common conversation, but merely affirm or deny things as they really are; for all other means to gain credit to what you say, in the common affairs of life, proceed from the devil and your own sinful habits or lusts, and imply that yourselves are unworthy to be believed, or that your hearers are unreasonably incredulous. 38-42. The ancient law prescribed only for the direction of magistrates, in the retaliation of injuries done by their subjects one to another, is understood by your scribes and Pharisees as if it warranted private persons to indulge a malicious temper, and revenge themselves in lawsuits or otherwise; but I admonish and charge you never to avenge yourselves by rendering evil for evil; and, in lesser matters, bear even repeated affronts and injuries with patience, rather than retaliate in a contentious, revengeful, and furious manner; and, as far as ye can, without embarrassing your own worldly circumstances, be always ready, by giving or lending, to relieve the necessities of others, especially if they humbly apply to you for help. 43-48. Your scribes and Pharisees have further pretended that the ancient law of loving your neighbours warrants you to hate all those who are not of your kindred and religion; but though ye ought never to approve the wickedness of your enemies, I solemnly charge you to love their persons, as partakers of the same human nature with yourselves, speak good of them as far as ye justly can, and heartily wish them all temporal and eternal happiness; take all opportunities of doing good to them, and earnestly pray for their conversion and salvation who hate, curse, despitefully use, and persecute you, that ye may appear the genuine children of that God, and perfectly conformed to his image, who is so graciously liberal of his providential favours, even to his wicked and unreasonable enemies of mankind; for if ye only love them who are affectionate and kind to you, or be friendly to those of your own kindred, religion, or party, what peculiar excellency is in that conduct, or what gracious reward can ye expect for it? It is no more than even the worst of men think themselves obliged to, by the common ties of gratitude, nature, or society. Study therefore to have your principles and behaviour greatly superior to all this, and rising to the highest resemblance of your heavenly Father, whose tender mercies are over all his works, in the displays of his goodness and all his other moral perfections.

Ver. 1. Set. Sitting was the Jewish posture of instruction; and it still prevails among teachers in the universities. The Jewish readers, however, seem to have stood up until they commenced to expound. See Lu. 4.16, 20. C.

Ver. 13. Salt is a compound body, whether natural or artificial. Its general character is rapidity, and a preservative power when combined with animal substances. But if by any chemical agency one or more of its constituents be separated from the others, the part remaining may retain much of the appearance of the original compound, and yet have lost its most remarkable

THE HORNS OF HATTIN, WHERE CHRIST PREACHED THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT. [MATTHEW, v: 1.]—The fifth, sixth and seventh chapters of Matthew contain the ever-memorable Sermon on the Mount. The Horns of Hattin together make up the Mount of Beatitudes, where this sermon was delivered. Standing on the top of the highest peak of this sacred mount one can survey the whole country where most of the mighty works of Christ were done. To the east, three miles away, is the Sea of Galilee, and rising beyond is the Gadarene country. To the west is Cana of Galilee, and to the north is Mount Hermon. The Horns of Hattin, or the Mount of Beatitudes, stands about half a mile distant from the road leading from Nazareth to the Sea of Galilee. The sides of the Mount are covered by a thick growth of prickly pears and briars.

time were given to two of the three great divisions of the Old Testament. The Law was the ordinary designation of the Pentateuch. It was so applied and understood by all. But the whole events in the Pentateuch—typical events, typical men, prophecies, promises, rites, ceremonies, feasts, festivals—were realized or fulfilled in Christ. The whole Law was in this respect one grand prediction—one continuous prophecy, which received its fulfilment in the mission, the person, and the work of our Lord.—P.

and valuable properties. Maundrel declares that when, in the Valley of Salt, near Gebul, he broke a piece that had been exposed to the rain, sun, and air, though it retained the sparkling appearance of the salt, it had totally lost its savour, in conformity to our Lord's description.—Note. The disciples were commissioned by the salt of truth, by the example of self-denial, purity of life, and piety, to counteract the corruption of falsehood, covetousness, licentiousness, forgetfulness of God, and idolatry. But if the salt (Christians themselves) have lost its savour, where-with shall it (the salt itself) be salted? C.

Ver. 17. Neither to abrogate nor repeal the moral law, to which it is evident he refers; for he proceeds to vindicate it from the false glosses of the scribes and Pharisees. But neither did he formally abrogate or repeal the ceremonial law, though it he also fulfilled. The ceremonial law ceased among the Jews when Providence rendered its observances impossible. Upon the Gentiles it was never binding. See Ac. 21. 20-26; 15. 1, 23-29. C.

Ver. 18. Till the types be fulfilled by the antitype; till the end be attained by Christ in his righteousness; and till the predictions with which all is illustrated and enforced shall be fulfilled—first, in the dispersion, and afterwards in the restoration, of Israel. C.

Ver. 19. Shall be called the least. Of all men the least pleasing to God; one who knew the law, but was at once a teacher and example of disobedience. See ver. 20.—Note. 'The kingdom of heaven' does not mean the kingdom of glory, but the gospel dispensation. See Mat. 13. 24-30, 47-50, &c. C.

Ver. 20. Your righteousness can never mean personal righteousness in an acknowledged sinner, for the two ideas are utterly incompatible; see Ro. 3. 10. There is no righteousness but that of God through faith, Ro. 3. 22. This righteousness exceeds that of the scribes and Pharisees—1. In its Origin and Author—God in Christ. 2. In its perfection—having the excellency of God's work in the flesh. 3. In its efficacy upon the conscience, to purge it; and upon the heart, to write the law on it, He. 9. 14; 8. 10-12. C.

Ver. 22. In this verse allusion is made to well-known Jewish customs. Various degrees of guilt received from them various degrees of punishment. The fundamental principle here is, that sins of thought or wish are, in the sight of God, virtual transgressions of his law. The man who cherishes causeless anger breaks the sixth commandment, and is liable to the judgment—a Jewish tribunal which inflicted death by the sword. The man who in his anger gave utterance to the contumelious epithet raca was liable to the council, which inflicted death by stoning. The man who said to a brother fool was liable to the Gehenna of fire; i.e. to die the death of a malefactor, and to have his body thrown into the valley of Hinnom, there to be burned. The punishment in every case was death. So in regard to every sin; whatever its kind or degree it is worthy of death, though that death may be inflicted in different ways, and accompanied by different trials. P.

Ver. 26. The adversary signifies, in the original, an opponent at law. He detains his prisoner till he has paid 'the uttermost farthing' of a limited pecuniary debt—diminishing by every payment. How much more shall a righteous God adjudge to 'everlasting punishment' (Mat. 25. 46) impenitent and obstinate sinners, whose guilt has been daily increasing through time (2 Ti. 3. 16), and whose profligacy and rebellion will abide through eternity! Re. 22. 11. C.

Ver. 34. Swear not at all. This prohibition does not extend to 'an oath for confirmation (which is) an end of all strife,' He. 6. 16, but to profane swearing in ordinary conversation. See ver. 37. The lawfulness of a solemn oath in judicial controversy cannot be questioned by any that consider the moral character of the judicial law of the Jews, and the still more solemn example of God himself. See Ge. 26. 3; Ex. 22. 11; De. 29. 12; 1 Ki. 8. 31; Mat. 5. 33; Ac. 2. 30; He. 6. 17; 7. 28. C.

Ver. 36. These were all common forms of swearing. Some of them are so still in the East. In fact, easterns can scarcely utter a sentence without some form or other of imprecation. Their language is polluted with oaths and blasphemy. It was probably in consequence of this pernicious practice that our Lord administered the rebuke. P.

Ver. 38. These quotations were just rules for judges deciding between man and man; but more than dangerous if applied to sanction and measure out private revenge; which perversion of them our Lord here forbids. C.

Ver. 47. The publicans, as the original Greek intimates, were the tax-farmers; and the name seems also applied to their collectors. They seem to have been adopted as the lowest standard of character, both on account of their rapacity and the popular odium attendant upon them as agents of the Roman despotism. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Carnal men have very mistaken views of real happiness; it is vain to expect it without being made truly holy. But what a rich variety of blessings the gospel provides for the followers of Christ, under their numerous sorrows, persecutions, reproaches, fears, and dangers, to animate and encourage their holy desires, faith and hope, meekness and patience, humility, love, self-denial, peace, and joy! And marvellous is their happiness in the full enjoyment of God. Delightful are the hints of gospel grace given by our Saviour, which were to be more clearly manifested after his ascension to heaven. And great glory to God, honour to themselves, and profit to their neighbours, do professors, and especially ministers, bring forth when they act in due character. How indispensable and broad, how holy, just, and good, are all the commandments and oracles of God! And great is his grace, and excellent his righteousness, who magnified and made them honourable in the room of guilty men. It is highly necessary to be clothed with his righteousness, endowed with his grace, and conformed to his pattern, in every good word or work. But base is their temper, criminal their conduct, and fearful their danger, who attempt to relax the obligation or contract the obedience of God's law. And it is impossible to have fellowship with him, or have our services accepted by him, while we indulge hatred of brethren, or any other sinful lust. Yea, great reverence of God, and his name and ordinances; great chastity and purity of heart and life; universal mortification of indwelling lusts, and dominion over our appetites and passions; a sacred guard upon our speech, and forbearance under injuries; a diffusive beneficence to mankind, and imitation of our heavenly Father; are necessary to manifest us Christians indeed! Are these, my soul, the laws of the great God my Saviour, and I so unlike them? Are these the laws by which I shall quickly be judged, and do I so little regard them? Let these considerations quicken my soul, and animate me to more serious attention and exact conformity.

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 7, 8. Though in prayer ye may very properly repeat some important and affecting terms to express the fervent requests of your hearts, and, on some occasions, enlarge your supplications or thanksgivings, yet never multiply words merely to spin out your prayers, or as if ye were praying to heathen idols, which are inattentive, unable, or unwilling to understand or answer your requests; for your heavenly Father, who loves you, and takes pleasure in blessing you, is thoroughly acquainted with all your wants and desires. 9-13. Therefore draw near to him with reverence and confidence, as children to a Father, infinitely kind and exalted, able and ready to help you and others around you, and acknowledge your own unworthiness, weakness, sinfulness, wants, and dangers; entreat and plead that he would, by his grace, enable you and others to glorify him in all things whereby he makes himself known; and that he would dispose all things in the church and world to his own glory; that Satan's dominion in the world and the hearts of men may be destroyed, and the kingdom of grace set up in the gospel dispensation, and daily advanced, by the bringing of multitudes into the church, and into a state of real fellowship with Christ, helping them therein, and increasing their knowledge, comfort, and holiness, till at length they be admitted to an eternal triumph in the kingdom of glory; that, by his grace, ye and others may be enabled to know, obey, and submit to his will in all things, as glorified saints and holy angels do in heaven; and that of his free gift, even in the most perilous times, ye may receive a competent portion of the good things of this life, and his blessing with them; and that, for Christ's sake, he may freely pardon all your sins of omission and commission in heart and life, by which ye have forfeited all enjoyments, and owe a debt of obedience to his injured law and justice, especially as his mercy is so infinitely superior to yours, whom, by his grace, he has enabled from the heart to forgive the injuries done to you; and that he would either keep you from being tempted to sin, or support and deliver you when ye are tempted. And take all your encouragement in prayer from God's own perfections, characters, and promises; and in all your prayers praise him for what he is, what he has done, is doing, or will do; and let both prayers and praises be offered up with earnest desire, and in full assurance of being acceptably regarded. 14, 15. And remember that your hearty forgiving of injuries done you is of inexpressible importance in your supplications; for if God's grace enable you to do this, it is a certain evidence of your being his children, whose iniquities he is engaged, by grace and promise, to for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

31 It hath been said, 'Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement:

41 And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.<sup>4</sup>

42 Give<sup>a</sup> to him that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away.<sup>5</sup>

45 That ye may<sup>d</sup> be the children of your Father which is in <sup>e</sup>heaven: <sup>f</sup>for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust.

46 For<sup>g</sup> if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans<sup>8</sup> the same?

47 And <sup>h</sup>if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? do not even the publicans so?

48 ¶ Be<sup>i</sup> ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.<sup>9</sup>

CHAPTER VI.

1 Christ continueth his sermon in the mount, speaking of aims, 5 prayer, 14 forgiving our brethren, 16 fasting, 19 where our treasure is to be laid up, 24 of serving God, and mammon: 25 exhorteth not to be careful about worldly things, 33 but to seek God's kingdom.

TAKE heed that ye do not your alms<sup>1</sup> before men, to be seen of them: otherwise ye have no reward of<sup>2</sup> your Father which is in heaven.

2 Therefore <sup>a</sup>when thou doest thine alms, do not sound a trumpet<sup>3</sup> before thee, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets, that they may have glory of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their <sup>4</sup>reward.<sup>5</sup>

3 But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth:

4 That<sup>b</sup> thine alms may be in secret: and thy Father, which <sup>c</sup>seeth in secret, himself shall reward thee <sup>d</sup>openly.

5 ¶ And <sup>e</sup>when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites<sup>6</sup> are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of <sup>7</sup>men. Verily I say unto you, <sup>f</sup>They have their <sup>8</sup>reward.

6 But thou, when thou prayest, <sup>h</sup>enter into thy closet, and, when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father, which seeth in secret, <sup>i</sup>shall reward thee openly.

pardon; but if ye indulge an implacable and revengeful temper, which makes you averse to forgive injuries done against you, your prayers for pardon are a contradiction to the design of the gospel, and a mocking of God, and ye in vain expect that he will be merciful in pardoning your infinitely greater provocations against himself. 16-18. When ye keep a private fast, on a religious account, never affect to make it known to the world around you by demure looks, disfigured faces, or slovenly airs, that ye may be extolled as wonderfully pious and mortified men. But, instead thereof, conceal your work as much as ye can from the world, and let it lie between God and your soul, in great searchings of heart, ingenuous confessions of sin, deep contrition and humiliation for it, and in serious meditation and solemn prayer. Then shall your all-seeing heavenly Father publicly own and bless you in this world and in that which is to come. 19-24. Never let your chief care and pains be exerted in getting and hoarding up earthly treasures, which are so perishing and apt to be lost, or even to endanger your lives; but chiefly esteem and labour to enjoy the favour of God, the graces of his Spirit, and the complete enjoyment of him hereafter, which are heavenly treasures that can neither perish nor be taken from you. For whatever you reckon your chief treasure will command your thoughts and affections, aims and pursuits; and ye will be either earthly or heavenly minded, and all your happiness either mean and perishing, or great and everlasting, according as earthly or heavenly things are the chief good in your account. Ye have therefore great need of a true spiritual judgment in making your choice; for if, the heart being weaned from this world, your mind has a right and clear discerning of the excellency of spiritual things, all the other faculties of your soul will be well directed in their pursuits after them. But if, through an inordinate affection to the world, your mind be blind or biassed with respect to spiritual things, the other faculties of your soul will, to your inexpressible hurt, be misguided and perverted by it; and remember, that as no man can, at one and the same time, heartily, truly, and perseveringly serve two masters of contrary tempers, commands, and interests, no more can your hearts and lives be at once devoted to the service of God and seeking after the riches, gains, and treasures of this world. 25-30. Never be anxiously or distrustfully careful about the necessities or conveniences of this present life; but, in the way of dutiful diligence in your callings, quietly depend upon God for what he, in his infinite wisdom, sees best for you; for if, without your care, he gave you your life and being, which are more valuable, why not trust him for whatever is necessary to support them in his service? Will your heavenly Father, who, without their anxious care or labour, provides necessary food for the fowls of the air, ever neglect to provide for you, his dear children and redeemed servants? And when all your anxious care cannot add to the height of your body or the length of your life, why should ye not entirely rely on the all-giving and all-governing providence of God to nourish and preserve them? And with respect to your raiment, if God so protect and gloriously adorn the flowers of the field, which are so quickly to wither and be burned, what a shameful weakness of faith it betrays in you to doubt of his providing proper raiment for you, who are made and redeemed for infinitely more noble and lasting purposes? 31-34. Never therefore, as if ye were mere heathens, be distracted and torn to pieces with anxious cares about your food, raiment, or other temporal enjoyments; but quietly and firmly depend on your heavenly Father, who knows your necessities, and has given you his promises that

7 But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.<sup>9</sup>

8 Be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him.

9 After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.

10 Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

11 Give us this day our daily bread:

12 And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

13 And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

14 For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you.

15 But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

16 Moreover, when ye fast, be not, as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance: for they disfigure their faces,<sup>2</sup> that they may appear unto men to fast. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

17 But thou, when thou fastest, anoint thine head, and wash thy face;

18 That thou appear not unto men to fast, but unto thy Father which is in secret: and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

19 Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal:

20 But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal:

21 For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

22 The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light:

23 But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness,<sup>4</sup> how great is that darkness!

24 No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.<sup>5</sup>

25 Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?

26 Behold the fowls of the air: for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?

27 Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature?<sup>7</sup>

28 And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin:

29 And yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.

30 Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven,<sup>9</sup> shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?

31 Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed?

32 (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek:) for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things.

33 But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.

he will supply you with everything truly good and useful. And let it be your first and principal concern to mind what pertains to the glory of God and the eternal salvation of your own souls, as set before you in the gospel; seek, without delay, all the rich advantages of his kingdom of grace and glory; seek that divine righteousness by which ye are entitled to the same, and that heavenly grace and holiness of conversation which qualifies you for the enjoyment of the eternal blessedness in heaven; and then ye may safely trust God to provide for you the necessities of life. Be therefore content with such things as ye have, and never distress your minds with fears about future wants and troubles in this world. For God has promised that as your days are, so your strength shall be; and ye will always find enough of present trouble to exercise all the grace ye have at the time.

Ver. 2. Do not sound a trumpet. As there is no rabbinical record of the custom of sounding a trumpet before almsgivers, this expression has been generally interpreted as a metaphorical expression for ostentation. This supposition, however, seems inconsistent with our Lord's usual graphic delineation of existing manners. And that a people who 'loved to pray in the corners of the streets, that they might be seen of men' (ver. 5), should also court a like publicity for their alms-deeds, is perfectly consistent with that uniformity that generally prevails in human character. C.

Ver. 13. Temptation. That is, trial of faith and resolution. This petition has been paraphrased, 'Suffer us not to be led into temptation;' and translated, 'Abandon us not to temptation.' But the Authorized Version is worthy of all preference; and contains an humble and expressive acknowledgment of a weakness, nay, of bias to sin, that deprecates being led into any trial. C.

Ver. 22. Single. Unmixed with blood, as during active inflammation; or unobstructed by specks or opaque films, when the inflammation has subsided. C.

Ver. 27. A cubit being 18 inches, the idea of most men desiring to add so much to their stature is out of the question. But as David says, 'Thou hast made my days an handbreadth,' 'cubit' may likewise be taken as a measure of time, and not of stature. So the word is taken, Jn. 9.23; He. 11.11. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! what a general and powerful evil is pride. Fearfully it spreads into and corrupts men's actions, even those which are good in themselves. But no religious exercise can be truly sincere, and acceptable to God, that does not flow from union to, and regeneration by, Christ. Without sanctified and upright hearts, bodily service will profit nothing, but to procure men's empty applause. And in all our prayers we must view God as our Father in Christ, and prefer the concerns of his glory to our own comforts. Never must we draw our encouragement in prayer from anything but from God himself; and never must we pray under the power of malice, hatred, or envy of our neighbour; nor give our alms, pray, or fast, but with a view to his glory as our chief end. Insignificant, perishing, and uncertain are all the advantages of this world, when compared with the great, the solemn, and eternal realities of the heavenly inheritance. Surely, then, it is highly absurd to be eager in our contrivances and labours, hopes and fears, wishes and cares, about them, while we are so indolent and unmoved about the things of God. If we are interested in Jesus' kingdom and righteousness, it is very unbecoming to distrust our divine Father, and torment ourselves with anxious cares about the necessities of life. Will the God who largely sheds his bounty on fowls and flowers deny what is necessary to his redeemed children, to whom he has given his Son—given himself?

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 1, 2. Never be rash, unmerciful, or severe, in suspecting, judging, or censuring the conduct, designs, and especially the eternal state of others, lest ye provoke them to be as severe against you, and even provoke God to pass judgment without mercy upon you; for in the same manner that ye deal with others in judging them, ye must expect to be dealt with by them, and especially by God in the last judgment. 3-5. And how unreasonable and unrighteous is it for any of you readily to spy every little fault in your neighbour, and aggravate it with severity, while ye take no notice of, or even excuse, extenuate, and indulge much greater crimes in yourselves? or with what face, or to what purpose, would ye offer to condemn, correct, or reprove your brother for lesser sins, while your own heart and life are corrupted, and your judgment blinded, with much more heinous crimes? What is this but the grossest hypocrisy, under a pre-

THE WILD FLOWERS OF JUDEA. [MATTHEW, vi:28.]—No more appropriate place can be found for calling attention to flowers than in Palestine. It must have been in the spring of the year, when the flowers are in their glory in the Holy Land, that Christ, from the Mount of Beatitudes, said: "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin, and yet I say unto you that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." There is a depth of color, a joyousness and gayety of bloom about the flowers of Palestine not to be seen in any other part of the world. They hide the soil and light up the mountains with their multitudinous hues. In the spring time the beauty of the flowers makes one forget the desolation and poverty of the people.

34 Take<sup>t</sup> therefore no thought<sup>2</sup> for the morrow:<sup>3</sup> for the morrow shall take "thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Christ ending his sermon in the mount, reproveth rash judgment, 6 forbiddeth to cast holy things to dogs, 7 exhorteth to prayer, 13 to enter in at the strait gate, 15 to beware of false prophets, 21 not to be hearers, but doers of the word; 24 like houses builded on a rock, 28 and not on the sand. 28 Christ endeth his sermon.

JUDGE not,<sup>a</sup> that ye be not judged.

2 For<sup>b</sup> with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

3 And<sup>c</sup> why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

4 Or<sup>d</sup> how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote<sup>1</sup> out of thine eye; and, behold, a beam<sup>2</sup> is in thine own eye?

5 Thou hypocrite, first cast out the <sup>e</sup>beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.<sup>3</sup>

6 ¶ Give<sup>g</sup> not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

7 ¶ Ask,<sup>h</sup> and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you:

8 For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.<sup>4</sup>

9 Or what man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone?

10 Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent?

11 If ye then, being <sup>i</sup>evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, <sup>j</sup>how much more tence of zeal against sin? If therefore ye would be able with judgment and conscience, with decency, authority, and success, to reprove and reform others, begin with reforming yourselves. 6. And never unseasonably throw away the best counsels and reproofs, any more than the seals of God's word, upon hardened, profane, and incorrigible sinners, who will pour contempt upon them, and outrageously hate and persecute you on account of them. 7, 8. But in order to qualify you for these and all other duties, be much employed in fervent, importunate, and persevering prayer for direction and assistance. Thus shall you receive from God your heavenly Father whatever blessings he has promised. 9-11. For if none of you, however wicked or hard-hearted, would give a needy and importunate child that which is useless or destructive, how is it possible that your infinitely gracious God and Father can withhold what is good and needful from his fervently supplicant children? 12. And if God be so incomparably gracious to you, see that, in all your dealings with men, ye act in the same upright, just, and kind manner, as ye would reasonably wish them to act towards you if they were in your circumstances and you in theirs. 13, 14. And if you would be holy and happy members of my kingdom of grace or glory, ye must enter in at the strait gate of repentance, faith, and regeneration, however self-humbling and self-denying it be; for as the entrance into, or progress in, sin and self-seeking, which leads to everlasting misery, is agreeable to the corrupt inclinations of men, multitudes follow after it to their eternal perdition: but the entrance into my kingdom by the new birth being painful and difficult, and the way of true gospel holiness, which leads to everlasting life, being disagreeable to flesh and sense, and beset with manifold tribulations, there are few that enter into and persevere in it. 15-20. Beware of false teachers, who pretend to lead you by an easy and wide path to everlasting happiness, and who, under a mask of sanctity, meekness, and concern for your welfare, remain under the power of their own lusts, and labour to make a prey of you to their own carnal ends and your everlasting destruction. By the evil tendency and influence of their doctrine, and by the pride, covetousness, or sensuality of their practice, ye may discern them from my faithful servants. For according as men's inward and reigning principles are good or bad, such are, and must be, their designs and actions; and however fair men's professions and appearances be, yet, if their inward principles of action are unsound, their doctrines erroneous, and their lives immoral, they are but plagues to the church, and shall, in the righteous judgment of God, be cut down by death, and cast into everlasting despair. 21-23. It is not even the highest professions of regard to me as their Lord and Master, or a seeming fervency in calling on my name, that can manifest men real subjects in my kingdom of grace, or heirs of my kingdom of glory, but a cordial faith in my person and character, and unfeigned obedience to my heavenly Father's commands. In that awful day in which I will judge the quick and the dead, many who have preached as my ministers, and even wrought miracles in my name, shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?

12 Therefore<sup>k</sup> all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.

13 ¶ Enter<sup>l</sup> ye in at the strait gate: for <sup>m</sup>wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat:

14 Because<sup>5</sup> strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life; and <sup>n</sup>few there be that find it.

15 ¶ Beware<sup>p</sup> of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves.

16 Ye<sup>q</sup> shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?

17 Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

18 A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

19 Every<sup>r</sup> tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

20 Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.

21 ¶ Not every one that saith unto me, <sup>s</sup>Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father<sup>6</sup> which is in heaven.

22 Many<sup>t</sup> will say to me in that day,<sup>7</sup> Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?

23 And <sup>u</sup>then will I profess unto them, I never knew<sup>8</sup> you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

24 ¶ Therefore, <sup>v</sup>whosoever heareth these say-shall have their hypocrisy and wickedness publicly exposed; and shall, as objects of my judgment, be, for their iniquities, banished from my blissful presence into everlasting misery. 24-27. Whoever therefore hears, seriously considers, embraces by faith and love, and acts according to the doctrines which I have been delivering, shall have my unchangeable person and character for his foundation; and whatever temptations and persecutions, doubts, fears, and dangers, may assault him in life or in death, his hope in me shall never make him ashamed. But he that hears them without cordially believing and uprightly practising them, having nothing to support him in a time of temptation, danger, death, or judgment, but his empty hypocritical profession of religion, shall, to his dreadful disappointment, inevitably and miserably perish for ever. 29. He spake with surprising majesty and authority, and with an evidence of truth and importance which could not be contradicted.

Ver. 1. Judge not. The words do not forbid a 'righteous judgment' of men's characters and actions, but a curious and inquisitorial search into men's failings and faults, for the purpose, not of reforming them, or admonishing ourselves, but for the purpose of enabling us to condemn them, and, by the comparison, to magnify ourselves. C.

Ver. 6. This caution is not to encourage either cowardice or reserve in proclaiming the gospel, but that prudence which 'rightly divides the word of truth,' and that godly discipline in the church that distinguishes between the 'clean and the unclean.'—Note. Though things holy may not be given to dogs, nor precious pearls cast before swine, yet mercy will feed the one with crumbs, and the other with husks; and where the faithful church-ruler will not admit the profane to fellowship, he will 'instruct, exhort, rebuke, with all long-suffering and doctrine.'

3 There is a sound principle in this proverbial lesson. The man who himself indulges in any form of sin is not qualified, either intellectually or morally, to reprove or advise others addicted to similar offences. But, on the other hand, the man who has been tempted, and has successfully resisted, or who has been addicted to sin, and has renounced it, is rendered by his own painful experience more capable of instructing others.—P.

CHAPTER VIII.

WHEN he was come down from the mountain, great multitudes followed him.

2 And<sup>a</sup>, behold, there came a leper<sup>1</sup> and worshipped him, saying, Lord, <sup>b</sup>if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

3 And<sup>c</sup> Jesus put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will;<sup>2</sup> be thou clean. And immediately his leprosy was cleansed.

4 And Jesus saith unto him, <sup>a</sup>See thou tell no man;<sup>3</sup> but go thy way, <sup>e</sup>show thyself to the priest, and offer the gift that Moses commanded, for<sup>9</sup> a testimony unto them.

5 ¶ And<sup>b</sup> when Jesus was entered into Caperthat so be, if the Lord will, he may 'save his own soul and them that hear him.' C.

Ver. 15. Who come to you with all the apparent meekness of sheep, seeking an entrance into the fold, but who are historically known to raven and destroy the moment the entrance has been granted and power obtained.—Note, The history of ancient and modern Popery—first, in pursuit, and then in possession, of temporal power and spiritual supremacy—will form the most apt illustration of the necessity of this warning. C.

Ver. 21. The kingdom of heaven does not necessarily signify the kingdom of glory: for though hypocrites may join themselves visibly to the church, none really enter it except such as are 'born of water and the Spirit,' Jn. 3. 5. C.

Ver. 27. The rain, floods, and winds of an eastern monsoon, and the ravages they commit, not merely on humble cottages, but upon the most substantial buildings, seem to have furnished the original from which the picture is so graphically drawn. C.

REFLECTIONS.—All our religion should begin at home; and instead of being uncharitably severe in censuring others, we should carefully look into our own hearts and ways, observe and condemn what is amiss in ourselves, and, through grace, labour to reform it. Let us then take heed not only how, but also to whom, we give good counsels and reproofs. With earnestness, faith, and resignation, let us always address our heavenly Father for every necessary blessing; and let Jesus' law of honesty and kindness be the constant rule of all our conduct. It is a great blessing to the place where Christianity is duly possessed and practised. But there is an indispensable necessity of heart-renewing grace, and of active principles of holiness, before our practice can be really good. The work of conversion is hard, but necessary. And there is need carefully to try those whom we receive as ambassadors of Christ, both with respect to the nature and tendency of their doctrine. What alarming lengths may men go in the church of Christ, and yet, being destitute of real holiness, eternally perish! We should dread the thoughts of following the multitude, lest we follow them to hell; or of building our hopes of happiness upon insufficient grounds, lest they fail us, to our final and aggravated destruction. Let nothing therefore short of an assured faith on the Son of God, attended with gospel holiness in all manner of conversation, satisfy us.

CHAPTER VIII. Ver. 4. Christ often required the Jews, who were healed, to conceal his miracles, that he might manifest that he sought not his own glory; that he might not confound them with too great a blaze of miraculous power; and that he might not provoke his enemies too eagerly to attempt his ruin; but (perhaps as a token of his extending the gospel dispensation to the Gentiles) he never prohibited a Gentile to divulge them. 9. If I, a poor inferior officer, have such power over my soldiers, how much more canst thou, the Almighty Messiah, at thy pleasure, remove this distemper from my servant, where and whensoever thou wilt? 10-12. Publicly declaring the wonderful strength of the Gentile centurion's faith, he intimated that it foreboded the gathering of multitudes of Gentiles from all quarters of the world into the gospel church and spiritual state of grace and glory, as spiritual children of the ancient patriarchs; while their Jewish natural posterity, who had been so long the peculiar people of God, should be cast off into lasting miseries on earth, and eternal loss in hell. 17. His sympathy with the distressed was a part of his suffering; and his removal of the diseases was the fruit of his bearing our sins, and the punishment of them. 20. You must expect no worldly advantage by following me, who have not so much as any abode of my

6 And saying, Lord, 'my servant lieth at home sick of the palsy,<sup>5</sup> grievously tormented.

7 And Jesus saith unto him, I will come and heal him.

8 The centurion answered and said, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldest come under my roof: <sup>k</sup>but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed.

9 For I<sup>6</sup> am a man under authority, having soldiers under me: and I say to this man, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it.

10 When Jesus heard it, <sup>i</sup>he marvelled, and said to them that followed, Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.

11 And I say unto you, <sup>n</sup>That many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down<sup>7</sup> with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven.

12 But<sup>o</sup> the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

13 And Jesus said unto the centurion, <sup>p</sup>Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the self-same hour.

14 ¶ And<sup>q</sup> when Jesus was come into Peter's house, he saw his wife's mother laid, and sick of a fever.

9 The teaching of the scribes was based upon Scripture and tradition. In case of a difficult question they sought an answer from those, the sole sources of their knowledge. Whatever wisdom they possessed was derived, it was not inherent. Christ, on the other hand, gave judgment on all points by inherent right. Both as an independent lawgiver, and as interpreter of the written Word, he claimed infallibility. In this respect he was distinguished from all mere creatures.—P.

own to lodge in. 21. Better the dead should be unburied, or that sinners, dead in trespasses and sins, should hurry them, than that my infinitely more important work should be hindered. 32. By this Jesus gave a sensible proof of the existence of evil spirits against the Sadducees, of the reality of the possession, and of the mercy of the dislodgment; and also punished the Jews for bringing up herds of swine.

Ver. 17. Infirmities. This word, both in Hebrew and Greek, signifies bodily distempers and pains.—Sicknesses. This word refers to troubles and torments of the spirit. By bearing the first, is signified his miraculous healing of bodily diseases; by bearing the second, his sacrifice for our sins. See Magee on the Atonement, vol. i. p. 415.—Note, Bodily and mental diseases are the natural emblems of death and sin; and Christ's power over the emblems is intended to exhibit his power over the originals. C.

Ver. 20. After the lengthened discourse, of which the preceding chapters, according to evangelic custom, present a mere outline; and after all the labours that immediately followed, our Lord (who was touched with the feeling of our infirmities) must have been wearied; and therefore, in his weariness, naturally refers to his want of a place 'where to lay his head,' see ver. 24. What a lesson of resignation to houseless wanderers! what a terrible rebuke to a sensual and inhospitable world! C.

Ver. 24. This description clearly indicates a vessel with a deck—as an open boat 'covered with the waves' must have gone down.—Note, To believers, how instructive are the judgments of God! To unbelievers, how wonderful the downfall of nations! A few years ago, the 'Sea of Galilee' possessed but a single open boat! Last year (1841) that boat had perished, and that sea was unruffled by an oar! C.

Ver. 28. Coming out of the tombs. Eastern tombs were often excavated in the faces of high rocks—such as Origen describes overhanging the town of Gergesa—and still afford habitations for the outcasts of society. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How great is our Redeemer, who could make diseases, storms, and devils obey him at pleasure! But marvellous was his debasement for our sakes, and tender his sympathy and compassion: and he now takes the greatest delight in the strength of unto him many that were possessed with devils: and he cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick:

17 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, "Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses.

18 ¶ Now when Jesus saw "great multitudes about him, he gave commandment to depart unto the other side.<sup>9</sup>

19 And<sup>a</sup> a certain scribe<sup>1</sup> came, and said unto him, Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

20 And Jesus saith unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; <sup>9</sup>but the Son of man<sup>2</sup> hath not where to lay his head.

21 And another of his disciples said unto him, Lord, "suffer me first to go and bury my father.

22 But Jesus said unto him, "Follow me; and let the <sup>b</sup>dead bury their dead.

23 ¶ And<sup>c</sup> when he was entered into a ship, his disciples followed him.

24 And<sup>d</sup> behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, inasmuch that the ship was covered with the waves: but he was <sup>e</sup>asleep.

25 And his disciples came to him, and awoke him, saying, "Lord, save us: we perish.

26 And he saith unto them, <sup>h</sup>Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith? Then he arose, and rebuked<sup>i</sup> the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm.

27 But the men marvelled, saying, "What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him!

28 ¶ And<sup>k</sup> when he was come to the other side, into the country of the Gergesenes, there met him two<sup>3</sup> possessed with devils, coming out of the tombs, exceeding fierce, so that no man might pass by that way.

29 And, behold, they cried out, saying, "What have we to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God? art thou come hither to torment us before the time?

This is the title which our Lord most commonly uses when speaking of himself. It occurs first in Da. 7. 13; and that passage is the key to its import and use in the New Testament. Four great earthly monarchies are symbolized by four beasts, to denote the principles of government which characterize them. Another power then appears, the ruler of which was like a son of man, to denote the principles of reason which should regulate his kingdom. The main point to be noted, as illustrative of the New Testament usage of the title, is the exaltation of the ideal man to universal sovereignty. The title, as used by Daniel, symbolizes that union of the divine and human which was realized in our Lord. It thus expresses very fully the nature and result of Christ's great work—the nature of it as becoming man's surety and substitute; and the result as redeeming man from death, and gaining for Christ, as man's representative, universal sovereignty. It is this last idea which is mainly brought out in the present passage, and which makes the words so forcible.—F.

4 This miraculous permission has been charged against our Lord as an act of injustice. If so, then must every disease causing death in flocks and herds, be charged as injustice against God; for infidels will scarcely affirm that disease and death can occur without God's permission. To the rational believer in Providence, and the divine mission of Jesus, the miracle presents a special proof of that mission—inasmuch as it removed all idea of the possibility of collusion between our Lord and the demoniacs; for though men might be bribed to feign both a disease and a cure, no human motive could reach the swine.—C.

30 And there was a good way off from them "an herd of many swine, feeding.

31 So<sup>o</sup> the devils besought him, saying, If thou cast us out, "suffer us to go away into the herd of swine.

32 And he said unto them, "Go.<sup>4</sup> And when they were come out, they went into the herd of swine: and, behold, the whole herd of swine ran violently down a steep place into the sea, and perished in the waters.

33 And<sup>r</sup> they that kept them fled, and went their ways into the city, and told every thing, and what was befallen to the possessed of the devils.

34 And, behold, the whole city came out to meet Jesus: and when they saw him, they <sup>s</sup>besought him that he would depart out of their coasts.

CHAPTER IX.

2 Christ curing one sick of the palsy, 9 calleth Matthew from the receipt of custom, 10 justifieth himself for eating with publicans and sinners, 14 defendeth his disciples for not fasting, 20 cureth the bloody issue, 23 raiseth from death Jairus' daughter, 27 giveth sight to two blind men, 32 healeth a dumb man possessed of a devil, 36 and hath compassion on the multitudes.

AND he entered into a ship, and <sup>a</sup>passed over, and came into his <sup>b</sup>own city.<sup>1</sup>

2 And, <sup>c</sup>behold, they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed:<sup>2</sup> and Jesus seeing their faith, said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, <sup>d</sup>be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee.

3 And, behold, certain of the scribes said within themselves, "This man blasphemeth.

4 And Jesus <sup>e</sup>knowing their thoughts, said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts?

5 For whether is easier, to say,<sup>3</sup> Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and walk?

6 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power <sup>h</sup>on earth to forgive sins, (then saith he to the sick of the palsy,) <sup>i</sup>Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house.

7 And he arose, and departed to his house.

8 But <sup>j</sup>when the multitude saw it, they mar-faith, and in the gathering of the Gentiles to himself. But (awful thought) our calling is balanced with the tremendous and lasting rejection of the long favourite people of God! Let us then not be high-minded, but fear! Let us never take up with external privileges in the church, nor aim at any secular advantages in our following of Christ. For if such be our temper, we shall be excluded from the joys of heaven, and cast into all the darkness and horrors of hell! Base are their hearts who form excuses to keep them from his service, and who prefer their swine, their sordid gains and traffic, to him. But it is the truest wisdom, in all our sorrows, our fears, and our dangers, to apply to him, as able and willing to save us. And never shall such meet with a disappointment.

CHAPTER IX. Ver. 5. Is it not as easy to remove the sinful cause as to remove the punishment? 12, 13. It is only they who are plagued with the guilt and corruption of sin that need the Physician of souls; and the more sensible they are of their sinfulness and guilt, there is the more hope of doing them good.—God has declared, that acts of compassion to others, and especially to their souls, in turning them from their sins, is more acceptable to him than the most costly observance of his own positive institutions. I am come into the world to reform and save, not righteous persons, but guilty and polluted sinners, even the chief; and that by convincing them of their sinfulness and danger, and their need of righteousness and grace. 15-17. Since, as your master John hath testified, I am the Bridegroom of the church, and consequently my disciples guests of the marriage-feast, who are to rejoice with me, it would be very absurd for them to practise abstemious and mournful severities while I am with them. But when I shall be taken from them by my death and ascension, the hardships and dangers to which they shall be exposed will render fasting and mourning seasonable for them. Such occasional duties must be proportioned to the circumstances of persons and things, otherwise they do more harm than good; and are rather attempts towards a legal and pharisaical righteousness, than any part of real religion.

Ver. 10. Sinners. Most probably, men notoriously guilty of some public sin, and who had neglected or refused to offer the sacrifices of the law. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Quickly Jesus leaves them in wrath who would drive him from them! and readily relieves the wants of those who seek to him. But how manifest is his supreme Godhead: he knows men's secret thoughts, forgives their sins, heals their souls, removes palsies, unstops the ears of the deaf, opens the eyes of the blind, looses the tongue of the dumb, heals all manner of diseases, casts out devils, and raises the dead, with all the power, wisdom and grace, the majesty and authority of a God! Nothing is too hard, and nothing too great or good for him to effect. None that apply to him for relief, whether high or low, whether more or less wicked, are ever cast out. To sanctify and save the most notorious sinners is his peculiar delight. Tenderly he suits the duties of his disciples to their circumstances and strength, and vindicates them when they cannot answer for themselves. The stronger our faith in him is, the more profitable is it to ourselves, as well as honourable to him. And the more of fervent prayer, and the less of carnal contrivances, are employed for a gospel ministry, the more faithful and successful is it likely to prove. Let me therefore, in every distress, however desperate, employ him as my helper and healer. Let me never scoff at his words, never envy him his honours, nor his people the liberties and privileges which he bestows upon them. Let me never imagine that my importunity can trouble him, or my sins debar me from him as a Saviour. Let neither shame nor death keep me from him. And if my poverty be deep, and my case deplorable, let my faith be the stronger; so shall my deliverance be glorious. Let me admire his mighty works, glorify God velled, and glorified God, which had given such power unto men.

9 ¶ And<sup>k</sup> as Jesus passed forth from thence, he saw a man, named Matthew, <sup>l</sup>sitting at the receipt of custom: and he saith unto him, Follow<sup>n</sup> me. And he arose, and followed<sup>4</sup> him.

10 ¶ And it came to pass, as Jesus sat at meat in the house, behold, many <sup>o</sup>publicans and sinners<sup>5</sup> came and sat down with him and his disciples.

11 And when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto his disciples, <sup>p</sup>Why eateth your Master with publicans and sinners?

12 But when Jesus heard that, he said unto them, <sup>q</sup>They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick.

13 But go ye and learn what that meaneth, <sup>r</sup>I will have mercy, and not sacrifice: for I am not come to call the righteous, <sup>s</sup>but sinners to repentance.

14 ¶ Then came to him the disciples of John, saying, <sup>t</sup>Why do we and the Pharisees fast oft, but thy disciples fast not?

15 And Jesus said unto them, Can <sup>u</sup>the children of the bride-chamber mourn, as long as the bridegroom is with them? but the days will come, when the bridegroom <sup>v</sup>shall be taken from them, and then shall they <sup>w</sup>fast.

17 Neither do men put new wine into old bottles,<sup>7</sup> else<sup>z</sup> the bottles break, and the wine runneth out, and the bottles perish: but they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved.<sup>8</sup>

18 ¶ While<sup>a</sup> he spake these things unto them, behold, there came a certain ruler,<sup>9</sup> and worshipped him, saying, My daughter is even now dead: <sup>b</sup>but come and lay thy hand upon her, and she shall live.

19 And <sup>c</sup>Jesus arose, and followed him, and so did his disciples.

20 ¶ And, behold, a woman, which was diseased with an <sup>d</sup>issue of blood twelve years, came behind him, and <sup>e</sup>toucheth the hem<sup>1</sup> of his garment:

21 For she said within herself, If I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole.

22 But Jesus turned him about; and when he saw her, he said, <sup>f</sup>Daughter, be of good comfort; thy faith hath made thee whole.<sup>2</sup> And the<sup>h</sup> woman was made whole from that hour.

27 ¶ And when Jesus departed thence, two blind men followed him, <sup>n</sup>crying, and saying, Thou son of David, have mercy on us.

CHAPTER X.

1 Christ sendeth out his twelve apostles with power to do miracles, 5 giveth them their charge, teacheth them, 16 forewarneth them of persecutions: 40 and promiseth a blessing to those who should receive them.

AND when<sup>a</sup> he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power against<sup>1</sup> unclean spirits, to <sup>b</sup>cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease.

2 Now the names of the twelve apostles are on their account, and obey his calls to work or warfare; but never manifest my emptiness by boasting of my external devotions. And while I follow Jesus myself, let me study to bring all my friends into acquaintance with him, and labour to have the whole earth filled with his glory.

CHAPTER X. Ver. 16. I send you forth as meek, harmless, and unable to defend yourselves, among furious and implacable men. Behave therefore with the utmost prudence, never giving any causeless provocation, nor needlessly exposing yourselves to danger; and be inoffensive, sincere, and meek, that ye may win upon some, and turn away the wrath of others. 17. And, after all, never trust yourselves with wicked men, nor expect from them anything better than persecution. 18. Your sufferings, on account of your professing and preaching my gospel, will be a public testimony to the truth of my doctrines, and of the these: 'The first, Simon,<sup>2</sup> who is called Peter, and Andrew his brother; James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother;

3 Philip,<sup>4</sup> and Bartholomew; Thomas, and Matthew the publican; 'James the son of Alphaeus, and Lebbeus, whose surname was Thaddeus;<sup>3</sup>

4 Simon 'the Canaanite,<sup>5</sup> and 'Judas Iscariot,<sup>6</sup> who also betrayed him.

5 ¶ These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, 'Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not:<sup>7</sup>

6 But<sup>i</sup> go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

7 And, as ye go, 'preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand.

8 Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give.

9 Provide<sup>8</sup> neither gold, nor silver, nor brass, in your purses;

10 Nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves;<sup>9</sup> for<sup>k</sup> the workman is worthy of his meat.

11 And into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, inquire who in it is worthy;<sup>1</sup> and there abide till ye go thence.

12 And when ye come into an house, 'salute it.

13 And if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it:<sup>2</sup> but if it be not worthy, let your peace return<sup>3</sup> to you.

14 And<sup>n</sup> whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet.

15 Verily I say unto you, 'It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah<sup>4</sup> in the day of judgment, than for that city.

16 ¶ Behold,<sup>5</sup> I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless<sup>5</sup> as doves.

17 But<sup>a</sup> beware of men: for they will deliver you up to the councils, and they will scourge you in their synagogues;

18 And ye shall be brought before governors and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them and the Gentiles.

19 But<sup>r</sup> when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak; for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak.

20 For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you.<sup>6</sup>

Since ye must be partakers of my sufferings and glory in due order, never let anything which your adversaries can do terrify you from, or discourage you in, your work: for your whole doctrine, and your integrity in professing and preaching it, shall be openly manifested to your honour as well as mine, in the spread and success of the gospel, and in the last judgment. FLOCKS OF GOATS NEAR JERICO. [MATTHEW, x: 15]—"Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment, than for that city." We give the picture above because it illustrates a region close to the land of Sodom and Gomorrah. The whole plain of the Jordan between Jericho and the Dead Sea is now a desolate and barren waste. The soil is exceedingly rich and fertile, but in order to bring forth abundantly, as in ancient times, it is necessary to irrigate it. In the immediate neighborhood of the Dead Sea, where the cities of the plain are supposed to have stood, there are many and abundant evidences of volcanic activity. The account of the destruction of these cities by fire looks very reasonable to one as he rides over the plain of Jericho to the Dead Sea.

38 And<sup>1</sup> he that taketh not his cross,<sup>8</sup> and followeth after me, is not worthy of me.

39 He that findeth his life, shall lose it: and he that loseth his life for my sake, shall find it.

41 He<sup>o</sup> that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet, shall receive a prophet's reward; and he that receiveth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man, shall receive a righteous man's reward.<sup>9</sup>

42 And<sup>p</sup> whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones<sup>1</sup> a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward.

CHAPTER XI.

2 John sendeth his disciples to Christ. 7 Christ's testimony concerning John. 16 The opinion of the people, both concerning John and Christ. 20 Christ upbraiddeth the unthankfulness and impenitence of Chorazin, Bethsaida, and Capernaum: 25 and praising his Father's wisdom in revealing the gospel to the simple, 28 he calleth to him all such as feel the burden of their sins.

AND it came to pass, when Jesus had made an end of commanding his twelve disciples, <sup>a</sup>he departed thence, to teach and to preach in their cities.

2 ¶ Now<sup>b</sup> when John had heard in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples,

3 And said unto him, Art <sup>c</sup>thou he that should come, or do we look for another?

4 Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and show John again <sup>d</sup>those things which ye do hear and see:

5 The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them.<sup>1</sup>

enjoyments of it, through his conscientious adherence to my truths, shall find real happiness and comfort therein, and be graciously rewarded with everlasting life in the world to come. 40-42. Whatever kind reception your persons and doctrines meet with, shall be accounted as given to me and my Father: and whatever kindness is done to any of my ministers or disciples, as such, from faith in and regard to me, shall be richly and graciously rewarded in the present, and especially in the eternal state.

Ver. 1. He gave them power. This is one of those many instances in which the Deity of Christ is established by a fact, and not by a doctrine. 'He gave them power.'—Who but 'God manifest in the flesh' could give such power as this! C.

Ver. 2. The twelve were evidently chosen and consecrated to their specific apostolic office before this time. The event is not recorded, but it is here taken for granted. Their names, and the work intrusted to them, are now first mentioned. There are four distinct lists of the apostles (Mar. 3. 16; Lu. 6. 14; Ac. 1. 13), and a careful comparison of them will serve to explain a few obscure passages. It will be observed that Peter stands first in all. This does not imply that he held a higher rank, or had any special privileges; but merely that, as in all companies and bodies of men some one is always found to take a more prominent part among his equals, so it was with Peter. In character he was adapted for leading. He was bold, energetic, sometimes even rash. In the list here given he is called 'first,' partly because of the prominent place he took and occupied among his brethren; partly because he was the first called to office. P.

Ver. 5. They were restrained, for the present, from visiting either the Gentiles or Samaritans, that they might not excite the prejudices of the Jews. Neither were the disciples themselves yet prepared to preach the gospel to the world. They were, as yet, but children, and therefore confined to feeding babes. C.

Ver. 9. Provide neither gold, &c. This direction prohibited the apostles themselves from waiting till they had got money, but by no means exonerated others from providing for their support. C.

Ver. 10. Nor scrip for your journey, &c. That is, Let none of you take more than the sandals that he wears, or the staff in his hand, lest you encumber yourselves with unnecessary baggage, and tempt the cupidity of the covetous and the robber. C.

Ver. 16. Wise as serpents—that lie humbly in the grass, and glide away from danger.—Harmless as doves. That never intentionally provoke enmity. Wisdom, to preserve harmlessness from degenerating into folly; harmlessness, to prevent wisdom from degenerating into cunning. C.

Ver. 34. The gospel of Christ is a gospel of peace. Its leading principles may be embodied in one comprehensive word, love. Consequently division, hatred, and strife are not, and cannot be, the direct results of the gospel. Yet, as an historical fact, they have followed the gospel. They spring, however, from man's evil heart, opposing the gospel; from his ignorance, misapprehending it. P.—The earth. Rather, on the land of Judea, which the Jews expected Messiah would render the seat of prosperity and power; but which he came to destroy, because of the unbelief and wickedness of its inhabitants. C.

Ver. 35. Not that Christ came with the design of producing those evils, but that the envy and malice of Satan and of wicked men would be provoked to inflict them upon the people of God. C.

Ver. 39. He that findeth his life, as a treasure, at the expense of his profession of truth, shall lose it.—And he that loseth temporal life, because he would not deny the faith, shall, instead of it, gain life eternal. C.

Ver. 41. He that receiveth a prophet, &c. Instructions, such as a prophet alone can give; and blessings, such as God bestows in honour of godly hospitality. See the history of Elijah and Elisha.—He that receiveth a righteous man, &c. He that receives a believer as one made righteous 'through the righteousness of God,' shall receive, through that intercourse, that 'peace with God' which justified men alone can describe and commend. C.

4 The sense of this verse seems to be this:—Previous to the coming of the Baptist, the kingdom of heaven, or gospel kingdom, could only be viewed in the light of prophecy. It was closed to ordinary eyes. John partially opened it. The consequence was an immediate effort on the part of anxious, earnest souls to rush in to it. They pressed forward with an ardour which resembled violence. They appeared as if they would seize it by actual force. The words are used in a good sense.—P.

5 The sense of the passage is that the Old Testament economy, which is here comprised under the two heads, the prophets and the law, continued in force until the time of John. His time was the connecting link between the Old and the New. The old continued in force until John preached the Kingdom of God—the Gospel. He was the forerunner of the Messiah; consequently the Messiah had already come. Our Lord makes a somewhat similar use of this expression in Lu. 16. 16, rebuking the Jews for adhering to the old dispensation when the new was proclaimed.—P.

8 But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they that wear soft clothing are in kings' houses.

9 But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? yea, I say unto you, and more than a prophet.

10 For this is he of whom it is written, <sup>b</sup>Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

11 Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a <sup>c</sup>greater than John the Baptist: notwithstanding, he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is <sup>d</sup>greater than he.

12 And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven <sup>e</sup>suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.<sup>4</sup>

13 For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John.<sup>5</sup>

14 And if ye will receive it, this is <sup>f</sup>Elias, which was for to come.

15 He<sup>1</sup> that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

16 ¶ But<sup>n</sup> whereunto shall I liken this generation? It is like unto children sitting in the markets, and calling unto their fellows, 17 And saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned unto you, and ye have not lamented.

18 For<sup>o</sup> John came neither eating nor drinking, and they say, He hath a devil.

expected. And it is necessary that such be prepared by fellowship with and instruction from him; that their call should be plainly manifested to themselves and others; and that they should assist one another in their work. But, alas, that in the best of times there should be traitors to Jesus among them! The great design of his gospel is to overthrow the power of Satan in and over men; and in his grace there is an effectual remedy for every evil. But sovereign is his giving or withholding his special favours. Perpetually uniform are his truths, and quickening to diligence the consideration of his approaches in grace or glory.—By no carnal cares, by no greediness of filthy lucre, no peevish moroseness, no intimacy with persons of dishonourable characters, by no infamous reproaches, no fear of men, no dread of persecution, and no regard to carnal relations, ought ministers of the gospel to be ever hindered in their work. But they have great need of a fixed contentment, cautious prudence, and constant dependence on God as their Father. If they be faithful, prudent, and active, Jesus will protect, provide for, and honourably reward them, and every kindness done to them. And it is at the dreadful peril of their hearers if they either neglect their subsistence, condemn their messages, or persecute their persons. Whatever is done to Jesus' brethren, he takes as done to himself and his Father. And if it be honourable to suffer with Christ, what must it be to be glorified together, and reign with him on his throne!

20 ¶ Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not:

21 Woe unto thee, Chorazin!<sup>6</sup> woe unto thee, Bethsaida!<sup>8</sup> for<sup>t</sup> if the mighty works which were done in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes.

22 But I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment, than for you.

23 And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works which have been done in thee had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day.

24 But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment, than for thee.

25 ¶ At<sup>a</sup> that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes.

26 Even so, Father: for so it seemed good in thy sight.

27 All<sup>e</sup> things are delivered unto me of my Father: and no man knoweth the Son,<sup>7</sup> but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him.

28 ¶ Come<sup>e</sup> unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.<sup>8</sup>

CHAPTER XII.

1 Christ reproveth the blindness of the Pharisees concerning the breach of the Sabbath, 3 by scriptures, 10 by reason, 13 and by a miracle. 22 He healeth a man possessed of a devil, who was blind and dumb. 31 Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall never be forgiven. 36 Account shall be made of idle words. 38 He rebuketh the unfaithful, who seek after a sign; 49 and sheweth who is his brother, sister, and mother.

AT that time Jesus went on the sabbath-day through the corn,<sup>1</sup> and his disciples were an hungered, and began to pluck the ears of corn, and to eat.<sup>2</sup>

2 But when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto him, Behold, thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do upon the sabbath-day.

3 But he said unto them, Have ye not read what David did when he was an hungered, and they that were with him;

4 How he entered into the house of God, and did eat the show-bread, which was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them which were with him, but only for the priests?

5 Or have ye not read in the law, how that on the sabbath-days the priests in the temple profane the sabbath,<sup>3</sup> and are blameless?

6 But I say unto you, That in this place is one greater than the temple.

7 But if ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless.

confinement, and the low figure which Christ made in the world, were great trials of John's belief of his being the true Messiah, yet it was probably more for the satisfaction of his disciples than for his own that he now sent them to Christ; and Christ refers them to the works which they saw him do as unanswerable proofs of his true Messiahship. 6. Blessed only is he who, upon the evidence I give, is so well satisfied of my Divinity and Messiahship, that no prejudices nor discouragements can make him reject or disown me. 7-13. John, whom ye heard preach in the wilderness of Judea, was no unstable pleaser of men, no delicate gentleman, but an inspired prophet, and greater than all his predecessors, since he pointed me out as already come in the flesh; and yet every gospel minister will be still more honourable, having much clearer views of my person, obedience, and sufferings, grace and glory, and of the spiritual design of my kingdom.—Since John began to preach, great multitudes have crowded to hear the gospel; and many, even publicans and other notorious sinners, have, with eagerness and vehemence, sought after the gracious and saving blessings of it; and my coming, and blessings, represented by Moses and the prophets as future and distant, are now considered as present. 16-19. The body of the Jews, now living, are so senseless, peevish, and perverse, that they relish no form of instruction, whether mournful or cheerful. John Baptist recommended his doctrine of humiliation and repentance by a severe and solitary life of fasting and self-denial; and they, instead of mourning with him for their sins, reproached him as a sullen unsociable man, possessed by the devil. And when I, the Messiah, recommended my glad tidings of salvation by a more free, friendly, and social conversation, they reproached me as a gluttonous and drunken companion of the vilest miscreants. But let envy and malice suggest what they will, the wisdom of God in these doctrines, and in the manner of manifesting them, and I, as the Messiah, are, and will be, approved, attested, and vindicated in and by every true believer. 20-24.

Christ does not affirm that the extremely wicked inhabitants of Tyre, Sidon, and Sodom would have repented after a godly sort, but so as to prevent the fearful judgments which came upon them. 25, 26. In thy high dignity, and that none may glory in himself, thou hast savingly manifested the doctrines and blessings of the gospel, not to men famous for learning and worldly policy, but to the lowest, plainest, and weakest of men. 27-30. Since my Father, who alone fully knows my nature, character, and work, and whom I fully know, and savingly manifest, has intrusted to my care and management all persons and things relative to the redemption of men, I invite and call every one that labours in or is laden with guilt, corruption, burdensome ceremonies, or attempts after legal righteousness, to receive me and my full salvation by faith, as the only effectual means of rest and relief. And since I am gracious, gentle, and condescending, yield yourselves to my instructions and influence, and follow my example, that ye may find refreshment and satisfaction to your souls. For my service is perfect freedom; my commands, particularly under the gospel dispensation, are not grievous; and I will lay no burdens upon my disciples which I will not enable them to bear.

Ver. 3. Not as if John retracted the testimony he had already given to Jesus as the 'Lamb of God,' or that he doubted the mark of the descending Spirit—but that he might turn the eyes of his disciples from his own light, which he knew to be about to expire, and fix them upon Jesus, the true and inextinguishable Sun.—Note, 'He that should come' was a title of Christ. See Ps. 50. 3; 118. 26. C.

Ver. 5. The poor. A characteristic of Messiah, peculiarly suited to impress John—who was so remarkable for austerity of life and renunciation of the world. C.

Ver. 9. What the prophets saw at a distance John saw nigh at hand; what they saw by faith, he, as the apostles did, 'saw, looked upon, and handled,' of the manifested Word of life, 1 Jn. 1. 1. C.

Ver. 11. Greater. Not greater in dignity or power—for that is inconsistent with the brotherhood of disciples, Mat. 23. 8; not greater in working miracles—for that gift was not universal in the primitive church—but greater in the prophetic office, not in the department of predictions, but in that of exposition. And in that, truly, the weakest believer knows more of Christ than John did. C.

Ver. 19. Wisdom, owing to different circumstances of time, place, rank, society, and health, will dictate different courses, either in the temperate use of, or in total abstinence from, worldly comforts; and hypocritical and worldly men will be sure to condemn, no matter which line is followed. The wisdom of these several courses, when the circumstances and motives are weighed, will be acknowledged by candid and impartial men, and approved by Him who 'sees not as man sees,' and who judges 'righteous judgment.' C.

Ver. 21. Then why did not God thus lead them to repentance? 'Nay, but who art thou, O man, that repliest against God?' That they would have repented is certain—for the Lord has said it; but that their repentance would have been unto life, he has not said, and no man can tell. From ver. 23 it is evident that the repentance contemplated was merely that which, by arresting the progress of luxury and dissipation, would have retarded or averted national judgments and destruction. C.

Ver. 25. Hide these things. As a just judgment on men, who, 'professing themselves wise, had become fools'—and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Graciously God raises up one minister when he has removed another. And all faithful preachers lead their hearers only to Christ and his truths. Yea, Jesus takes delight in honouring them who honour God; and in satisfying a humble though doubting faith, while wilful obstinacy is confounded. It is not outward splendours, but eminent gifts, graces, and faithfulness, that truly commend preachers. And it adds to their honour if by their means poor sinners be cast into the mould of the gospel, or multitudes awakened to an earnest concern about their salvation. But let faithful ministers behave as they will, they must expect reproach and persecution. Nor can the best qualified and most diligent effectually convert their hearers. But, alas! tremendous and infinite is their danger who obstinately rebel against the light and grace of the gospel, stumble at the Redeemer, abuse the means of his grace, and insolently reproach him and his servants! Redoubled sorrow must be their everlasting portion. Let Britain, let my soul, think and tremble! But O how delightful and unbounded are the fitness and fulness of Christ to save sinners, even the chief! And that not by natural qualifications, or by works of righteousness, but according to his own

VIEW OF TYRE. [MATT., xi: 22.]—It must have grieved the Son of God beyond the power of expression when his own people and the cities of his own Galilee did not repent and turn away from their sins while daily witnessing his mighty works. Speaking of Bethsaida and Chorazin He said: "It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment than for you." It is a curious thing that even to-day there are some remains of Tyre and Sidon, but not a single vestige of Chorazin and Bethsaida. Tyre was the great city of the Phoenicians. It was once the capital and center of the world's commerce. Tyre was leveled to the ground by Alexander the Great, but was afterward rebuilt. It is no longer a place of commercial importance. It was here that Jesus wrought a cure and said to the woman: "O woman! Great is thy faith."

8 For the <sup>1</sup>Son of man is Lord<sup>4</sup> even of the sabbath-day.

9 ¶ And<sup>k</sup> when he was departed thence, he went into their synagogue:

10 And, behold, there was a man which had his hand withered. And they asked him, saying, <sup>1</sup>Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath-days? that they might accuse him.

11 And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you that shall have one sheep, and if it <sup>2</sup>fall into a pit on the sabbath-day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out?

12 How much then is a man better than a sheep?<sup>5</sup> wherefore it is lawful to do well on the sabbath-days.

13 Then saith he to the man, <sup>o</sup>Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it forth; and it was restored whole, like as the other.

14 ¶ Then the Pharisees went out, and held a council<sup>6</sup> against him, how they might destroy him.

15 But when <sup>p</sup>Jesus knew it, he withdrew himself from thence: and <sup>q</sup>great multitudes followed him, and he healed them all;

16 And<sup>r</sup> charged them that they should not make him known:<sup>7</sup>

17 That <sup>s</sup>it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, 18 Behold<sup>t</sup> my servant, whom I have chosen; my beloved, in whom my soul is well pleased: I<sup>u</sup> will put my Spirit upon him, and he shall show<sup>v</sup> judgment to the Gentiles.

19 He<sup>w</sup> shall not strive, nor cry; neither shall any man hear his voice in the streets.

20 A<sup>y</sup> bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax<sup>8</sup> shall he not quench, till he send forth judgment unto victory.

21 And<sup>z</sup> in his name shall the Gentiles trust.

22 ¶ Then<sup>a</sup> was brought unto him one possessed with a devil, blind and dumb: and he healed him, inasmuch that the blind and dumb both spake and saw.

23 And all the people were amazed, and said, <sup>b</sup>Is not this the son of David?

* What particular sin constitutes the unpardonable sin against the Holy Ghost, has been the subject of much and anxious inquiry; and by the usual marginal references to 1 John 5.16, which has no relation whatever to the subject, the perplexities of many have been greatly increased. The following suggestions, it is hoped, may serve to obviate the difficulties of the question:—Our Lord declares, 'No man cometh to the Father, but by me,' Jn. 4.16. And again, 'I go unto the Father'; and, 'I am the way,' Jn. 14.12,6; and, 'I am the door,' Jn. 10.9. Now, let it be recollected that all forgiveness of sins lies in Jesus—(see Mat.26.28. Ep.1.7. Ac. 5.31. Re.1.5)—and that the Father dispenses it only for 'his name's sake,' 1 Jn. 2.12. Wherefore, if it shall appear, that no man can come to Jesus but by the Holy Ghost (see Jn.3.5. 1 Co.12.3. 1 Jn. 5.6), 30 He<sup>i</sup> that is not with me, is against me: and he that gathereth not with me, scattereth abroad.

31 Wherefore I say unto you, <sup>j</sup>All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men; but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men.

32 And <sup>k</sup>whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy <sup>5</sup>Ghost, <sup>l</sup>it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come.

33 Either<sup>m</sup> make the tree good, and his fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit corrupt: for the tree is known by his fruit.

34 O<sup>o</sup> generation of vipers! how can ye, being evil, speak good things? for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.

35 A <sup>p</sup>good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things; and an evil man, out of the evil treasure, bringeth forth evil things.

and his Father's rich and heavenly grace. Yettender, extensive, and free are his invitations of self-destroyed and self-deceiving sinners to himself; and full are his assurances of salvation directed to them. Yea, the views of his love, and influences of his Spirit, render their service pleasant, and make his cross easy and light in the way to their glorious crown.

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 26-30. If devils weaken their common cause among men, and work for the confirmation of my doctrines of holiness, which are so directly contrary to all their interests and designs, how can their power in the world stand? And if ye will pretend that I cast out devils by a diabolical influence, by what do your own applauded disciples undertake to cast them out? They shall therefore be witnesses, and give judgment against your partial and unjust accusation of me. And if it be incontrovertibly evident that I cast them out by the almighty influence of God's Spirit, it is then plain that I am come with divine authority to destroy the kingdom of the devil, with power dislodging him from men's bodies and souls, and to set up a spiritual, merciful, and holy kingdom among you: and whoever will not own and join me in my opposition to him, and in gathering sinners out of his kingdom into mine, must be held as an enemy to me and to the conversion of mankind. 31, 32. Whatever blasphemous reproaches ye utter against me in my present debasement, may be pardoned; but if, in this approaching dispensation of the Holy Ghost, ye blaspheme his marvellous gifts and operations as devilish, and contrary to his remarkable convictions, wilfully and maliciously oppose the method of redemption which he comes to apply, it shall never be forgiven you, but the most fearful judgment shall overtake you, both in this world and in the next. 33-37. Nay, your present words manifest the inward wickedness and malice of your heart, and that ye are indeed the children of the devil; for as men's hearts are good or bad, so will be their words and actions. And know, that even your trifling and unprofitable talk, and much more your blasphemous reproaches, must be reckoned for, to your condemnation, in the day of judgment. 41, 42. Christ's divine dignity and authority were manifest; his wisdom was infinite; his preaching frequent, plain, powerful, and long continued; his doctrines were confirmed by miracles unnumbered, and at last by his resurrection and the effusion of the Holy Ghost. 43-45. This parable means, that Satan, being frequently baffled by the miracles of Christ and his apostles, and by the light and power of the gospel among the Jews, should, in great vexation, retire to the Gentile world, hoping to meet with less disturbance among them; but finding himself quickly pursued thither by the still more remarkable influences and success of the gospel, and more abundantly harassed and defeated, he should return to the Jews: and finding most of them destitute of grace, notwithstanding all their pretences to purity and religion, and more ready to resign up themselves to him than before, he would seduce them more powerfully than ever; and by filling them with more obstinate hardness of heart, render their wickedness and ruin altogether remediless.

WALL OF THE SYNAGOGUE AT CAPERNAUM—SCENE OF THE MIRACLE OF THE HEALING OF THE HAND. [MATTHEW, xii: 9-10.]—The site of the ancient city here photographed is covered with a rank growth of bushes and weeds. But lying half covered by the rank vegetation are pillars wrought out of the indigenous limestone, and decorated with beautiful Corinthian capitals, hewn architraves, elaborate friezes and pedestals. In the picture is presented a view of a part of the wall of the ancient synagogue. It was in Capernaum that Christ performed more of His miracles than in any other city, and in this synagogue it is supposed He performed the miracle of healing the man with the withered hand, referred to in Matthew, xii: 9-10. Here, also, Christ is supposed to have appeared to the disciples after He arose from the dead.

37 For <sup>r</sup>by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned.<sup>6</sup>

38 ¶ Then<sup>s</sup> certain of the scribes and of the Pharisees answered, saying, Master, we would see a sign from thee.

39 But he answered and said unto them, An<sup>t</sup> evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas:

40 For<sup>u</sup> as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth.

41 The<sup>v</sup> men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it; because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a <sup>a</sup>greater than Jonas is here.

43 When<sup>a</sup> the unclean<sup>7</sup> spirit is gone out of a man, he <sup>b</sup>walketh through dry places, seeking rest, and findeth none.

44 Then he saith, I will return into my house from whence I came out; and when he is come, he findeth it <sup>c</sup>empty, swept, and garnished.

45 Then<sup>d</sup> goeth he, and taketh with himself seven other spirits more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there: and the last state of that man is worse than the first. Even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation.

46 ¶ While he yet talked to the people, <sup>e</sup>behold, his mother and his brethren stood without, desiring to speak with him.

47 Then one said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee.

48 But he answered and said unto him that

<sup>f</sup> The Evangelists, being Jews, would understand by unclean, whatever defilement of the person the law had condemned—(see, for example, Le. 5. 2, 3; 13. 3, &c.; 14. 40; 22. 5, 6);—consequently, an 'unclean spirit' would convey to them the idea of one tempting to acts, or producing diseases, pronounced unclean. This spirit, be it observed, is described as 'gone out' of his own accord, not 'cast out' by the power of God; and then it is added, 'he (that is, the spirit) walketh through dry places' where is no place of life—(see Ps. 63. 1. Is. 55. 1. Je. 2. 13. Re. 7. 17).—'seeking rest'—endeavouring, it would appear, as wicked men often do, to escape from the sound of the gospel, as come to torment them before the time, Mat. 8. 29. Then, returning, 'he findeth his house (the soul) empty' of the love and fear of God—'swept' from every undignified and unpopular sin, and 'garnished' with many an ornament of literature, science, civilization, and, it may be, religious profession.—Then taketh he seven spirits'—a number equal to every day's occurrences—'more wicked than himself.'

CHAPTER XIII.

1 The parable of the sower and the seed: 18 the exposition of it, 24 The parable of the tares, 31 of the mustard-seed, 33 of the leaven, 44 of the hidden treasure, 45 of the pearl, 47 of the draw-net cast into the sea: 53 and how Christ is contemned of his own countrymen.

THE same<sup>a</sup> day went Jesus out of the house, and <sup>b</sup>sat by the sea-side.

2 And great multitudes were gathered together unto him, so that he went into a <sup>1</sup>ship, and sat; and the whole multitude stood on the shore.

3 And he spake many things unto them <sup>c</sup>in parables, saying, Behold, <sup>d</sup>a sower went forth to sow:

4 And when he sowed, some seeds fell by the way-side, and the fowls came and devoured them up.

5 Some fell upon <sup>e</sup>stony places, where they had not much earth; and forthwith they sprung up, because they had no deepness of earth:

6 And when the sun was up,<sup>2</sup> they were scorched; and because they had no <sup>g</sup>root, they withered away.

7 And some fell among <sup>h</sup>thorns; and the thorns sprung up, and choked them.

8 But other fell into <sup>i</sup>good ground, and brought forth fruit, some an hundred-fold, some sixty-fold, some thirty-fold.

9 Who<sup>j</sup> hath ears to hear, let him hear.

10 ¶ And the disciples came, and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables?

11 He answered and said unto them, <sup>k</sup>Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given.

during all Saturday, and rose early on the Lord's-day; but this, according to Jewish computation of time, was 'three days and three nights.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Be content, my soul, to endure hardships or hunger, and to live on coarse fare, and to put up with ignorant reproaches in following Christ. And in all let me rejoice that he is my advocate and justifier, and the Lord of the Sabbath, who can prescribe the work of it at his pleasure, and has appointed it as his great opportunity of distributing blessings to sinful men. If either diseases or devils plague me, let me cast my burden on the Lord. And if my heart or hand be withered, let me stretch it forth at his power-conveying call. Let me copy his example of constant and humble activity in doing good, or of meekly bearing the vilest reproaches. And let me never check them by passionate returns or by revengeful recrimination, but by unanswerable, and especially practical refutation. Empty professors are very prone to carp at things trifling or lawful, while they indulge an ignorance of the oracles of God. But full of blindness, prejudice, and malignity against Jesus Christ and the gospel, must they be, and fearful is their guilt, and dreadful their danger, who, contrary to strong evidence and deep convictions, blaspheme Jesus Christ and his Spirit. No heathens can sin so heinously, nor be damned so dreadfully! There is an absolute necessity of almighty power and grace to convert men from Satan to God; and to have gracious principles implanted in our hearts, in order to practical holiness. No gracious acts can ever take place till gracious qualities be cultivated by ourselves. But surely we should be very careful to act always as under God's eye, when our final account is to be so strict, and the issues of it so infinitely important! Near relations, or even real saints, are often Satan's instruments to hinder Jesus or his faithful servants in their work. Yet great is his love to, and care for, such as truly believe and obey him: and if I be spiritually related and conformed to him, let the world condemn and reject me as they please. But it is very desirable and honourable that all the lovers of Jesus should be as united in promoting the interests of the gospel, as Satan and his subjects are in their opposition to it.

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 10-15. Our Saviour taught much in parables. (1) That he might fulfil Old Testament predictions, Ps. 78. 1, 2; 49. 3, 4; ver. 34, 35. (2) That, in manifesting the spiritual turn of his own mind, he might set us an example to improve everything as a mean of spiritual instruction, Jn. 3. 12, 13. (3) That he might the more effectually reprove the Jews, without putting them into a rage, ch. 21. 28-46. (4) That he might the more easily instruct the attentive and thoughtful in a manner, much used in the East, delightful to the mind and helpful to the memory, Ho. 12. 10. (5) That he might sadly permit the blindness and ruin of such as hated instruction, ver. 13. 3-9, 18-23. The parable of the soils or sower represents the different issues of the gospel ministrations on different sorts of hearers, and the causes of them. The sower is Jesus Christ, by himself and his ministers, painfully, carefully, and faithfully preaching gospel truths, which, like good seed, are precious, uncorrupted, and calculated to produce fruits of faith and holiness, glory to God, and eternal happiness to men. The wayside denotes careless hearers, who never seriously regard or think about those divine truths which they hear; while the devil and his agents divert their mind with other thoughts, to make them entirely forget them. The stony ground denotes them who hear the gospel with some delightful conceptions of its glories, sudden flashes of joy in their affections, and some slight purposes and desires towards that which is good; but, their hearts never being savingly renewed, they do not receive it by faith and love, as an abiding and governing principle of action; and hence, whenever they meet with violent and lasting temptations or persecutions for the

THE SEA OF GALILEE. [MATTHEW, xiii: 1, 2.]—The Sea of Galilee is about six miles wide and about fifteen miles long. There are only a few little boats found upon its waters to-day. In the time of our Savior, however, there were upon it great fleets. When the forces of Titus, the Roman general, besieged the City of Tiberias, large numbers of the people flocked into the boats; and at this time an engagement took place, in which as many people perished in the sea as on the land. According to Josephus, six thousand five hundred thus perished. There are a great many fish in this sea, but they are caught from the shore alone. The above picture was photographed from a point on the shore where the walls of Tiberias stand. On the shore of this sea was a favorite place with our Savior for teaching the people.

12 For<sup>1</sup> whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath.

13 Therefore<sup>n</sup> speak I to them in parables: because they seeing, see not; and hearing, they hear not, neither do they understand.

14 And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Esaias, which saith, °By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and shall not perceive:

15 For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.<sup>3</sup>

16 But<sup>p</sup> blessed are your eyes, for they see: and your ears, for they hear.

17 For verily I say unto you, °That many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

18 ¶ Hear ye °therefore the parable of the sower.

19 When any one heareth °the word of the kingdom, and °understandeth it not, then cometh the °wicked one, and catcheth away that which was °sown in his heart. °This is he which received seed by the way-side.

20 But he that received the seed into stony places, the same is he that heareth the word, and anon °with joy receiveth it:

21 Yet hath he not °root in himself, but dureth for a while; °for when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended.

22 He<sup>b</sup> also that received seed among the

Besides, to any earnest inquirer he was ever ready to explain whatever was not fully comprehended. To the thoughtless and hostile, however, who had neither the patience to attend, nor the wish to learn, Christ's parables were worse than useless.—P.

* The wheat and tares when growing bear a close resemblance to each other. Ordinary labourers could not distinguish them. When ripe they may be easily distinguished; but they are so closely joined in the soil that the removal of the one might, and often would, seriously injure the other. Hence they are permitted to grow together till the harvest. So is it in the visible church. True worshippers and hypocrites cannot be distinguished by human eye. Even when a fuller develop-thorns, is he that heareth the word; and the care of this world, and the °deceitfulness of riches choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful.

6 The ordinary mustard of Europe cannot be the plant here intended. Linnaeus mentions a species whose branches become real wood, which he names Sinapis crucioides. Frost, however, thinks this cannot be the plant intended; for though it becomes a mustard tree, its seeds are of considerable size. He thinks that our Lord referred to the Phytolacca dodecandra, which grows abundantly in Palestine. Has really 'the least of all (tree) seeds,' yet rises to as great an altitude as any other tree in the country of which it is a native. The little seed represents our Lord and his apostles—the umbrageous tree, the present attainments and future spread of Christianity.—C.

23 But<sup>d</sup> he that received seed into the good ground,<sup>4</sup> is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it; which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth, some an hundred-fold, some sixty, some thirty.

24 ¶ Another<sup>e</sup> parable put he forth unto them, saying, °The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed °good seed in his field:

25 But while men °slept, his °enemy came and sowed °tares among the wheat, and went his way.

26 But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also.

27 So the °servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares?

28 He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, °Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up?

29 But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them.

30 Let both °grow together until the harvest: and in the °time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles °to burn them; but gather the °wheat into my barn.<sup>5</sup>

31 ¶ Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, °The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard-seed,<sup>6</sup> which a man took, and sowed in his field:

32 Which indeed is the least of all seeds; but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and °becometh a tree, so that the birds sake of religion, they apostatize from it. The thorny ground denotes them who hear the gospel with remarkable attention; and are so affected by it that, for a considerable time, they appear to make progress in the knowledge, profession, and practice of religion; but at last their cares about worldly things, and expectations and desires of happiness in them, and their eager pursuits after riches and pleasures, so entangle, deceive, and overset them, that they never attain to any true holiness of heart or life. The good ground denotes those hearers who receive the truths of the gospel into their hearts, renewed by the Spirit of God, and, through the daily influences of his grace, improve them to their spiritual fruitfulness in holy dispositions, thoughts, words, and actions, in different degrees. 24-30, 36-43. The sowing of the good seed represents Christ as planting his grace in the hearts of men by the ministry of the gospel, to render them true members of his church; these, in due time, discover themselves by their open profession of their faith, and by their holy practice. The tares denote hypocritical professors or ministers; these Satan, especially in a time of prosperity, and when ministers and people are unwatchful, secretly raises up in the church, and causes gradually to discover themselves. It is a grief to the faithful servants and people of Christ to see the gospel so perverted and abused by any of its preachers or professors, to the introducing of errors and immoralities into the church or world; and yet, till the harvest of the last judgment, such can never be wholly separated from the godly and faithful. 31, 32. The marvellous growth of the grain of mustard-seed represents Christ's gospel and church in the world, and his grace in the soul; extremely small and obscure in their beginnings, but gradually increasing, till they fill the heart, and even the earth; so that both Jews and Gentiles find refreshment and rest in them. 33. The hidden leaven, affecting three measures of meal, represents Christ's gospel and grace implanted in the hearts of men, and secretly working with such divine efficacy as to sanctify all the faculties of the soul and members of the body, and gradually spreading themselves through all nations, to captivate them to the obedience of faith. 44. The TREASURE hid in the field, &c., represents Christ and the rich blessings of the gospel as lying hid in the oracles of God from carnal men; but when manifested by the Spirit, eagerly apprehended, and joyfully received into the heart, and an interest in them esteemed so valuable that a man is ready to part with all things in the world to enjoy fellowship therein through the Word. 45, 46. The PEARL of great price denotes Christ and his inestimable blessings, which, being once discovered by earnest seekers after true happiness, renders them willing to part with all the riches and enjoyments of this world rather than not obtain a property therein. 47-50. The NET cast into the sea, &c., represents the gospel as laboriously and faithfully preached in this confused, wicked, and unquiet world, and as being the mean of gathering multitudes, some saints and some hypocrites, into a visible church state, in which they shall remain connected till the angels make an awful separation between them in the last judgment. 52. The HOUSEHOLDER represents preachers treasuring up divine truths in their minds and hearts, that, out of the Old and New Testaments, and out of their new and old instructions, observations, and experiences, they may seasonably and profitably bring forth doctrines suited to all persons and cases.

Ver. 3. The parables of our Lord are short descriptions of natural objects or events; the several parts of which are employed to illustrate some corresponding spiritual truth. With one single exception—that of the rich man and Lazarus—all are confined within the limits of this world. Our Lord commenced his preaching by plain exposition of the Word, and unsparing correction and reproof of the Pharisaic perversions of Scripture. This method gave offence; wherefore he, who 'knew what was in man,' changes his mode of address, by which prejudice was less excited, attention secured, and truth insinuated by the aid of curiosity. C.

Ver. 11. Mysteries are not truths beyond the reach of the understanding, but something hidden or withheld and therefore unknown in whole or in part. Here, and elsewhere, 'a mystery' denotes something disclosed to certain persons prepared to comprehend and receive it, but withheld from the multitude, whose prejudices would have been excited by a plainer exposition, and would consequently have been driven from the means of instruction. C.

Ver. 19. Catcheth away, &c. The simplest illustration of this satanic robbery may be seen in the attempts to seduce our Lord, ch. iv.: (1) By appetite. (2) By false quotation and perversion of Scripture. (3) By ambition. And as water poured into a vessel of oil will soon expel it and occupy its room, so any of these infused into the mind will soon expel the word of truth from the attention, the memory, the understanding, and the affections. C.

Ver. 27. Tares. The word zizania, erroneously translated tares, does not occur elsewhere in Scripture, nor in any ancient Greek writer. The most probable interpretation is 'darnel,' the Lolium temulentum of Linnaeus. Forskal says it grows abundantly at Aleppo; and that if the seed remain mixed with the wheat, the bread causes dizziness and sickness. The darnel is of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof.

33 ¶ Another<sup>a</sup> parable spake he unto them: The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three<sup>7</sup> measures<sup>8</sup> of meal, till the whole was leavened.

34 All<sup>b</sup> these things spake Jesus unto the multitude in parables; and without a parable spake he not unto them;

35 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, "I will open my mouth in parables; I will utter things which have been kept secret from the foundation of the world.

36 ¶ Then Jesus sent the multitude away, and went into the house: and his disciples came unto him, saying, "Declare<sup>9</sup> unto us the parable of the tares of the field.

37 He answered and said unto them, "He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man:

39 The<sup>d</sup> enemy that sowed them is the devil: the<sup>e</sup> harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels.

40 As <sup>9</sup>therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world.

41 The<sup>h</sup> Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend,<sup>2</sup> and<sup>i</sup> them which do iniquity;

42 And<sup>j</sup> shall cast them into a furnace of fire:<sup>3</sup> there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

43 Then<sup>k</sup> shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. "Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

44 ¶ Again,<sup>n</sup> the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field;<sup>4</sup> the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof

/ l No state can be imagined without a place; therefore hell implies both state and place. That both as a state and place it implies torment of conscience is unquestioned; and that it implies torment of sense must equally follow, both from the words, 'fire,' 'wailing, gnashing of teeth,' &c., employed by Scripture as descriptive of hell, and the fact of a resurrection in the body to damnation—which bodily condition being inseparable from sense, is as necessarily inseparable from torment of sense.—C.

/ v We observe, says Alford, 'how naturally these parables are evolved from the subjects and associations surrounding our Lord at the time. He sat in a boat in the sea. His eye wandered over the rich plain of Gennesareth—the field-paths, the stony places, the neglected spots choked with wild vegetation, the plots of rich deep soil, were all before him. The same imagery prevails in the parable of the tares of the field and in that of the mustard-seed; and the result of the tilling of the land is associated with the leaven in the lump. Then he quits the sea-shore and enters the house. From the working of the land for seed to finding a treasure in the field the transition is easy—from the finding without seeking to seeking earnestly and finding, easy again; from the seed to the buried treasure, from the treasure to the pearl—the treasure of the deep—again simple and natural. The pearl recalls the sea, the sea the fishermen with their nets—the mixed throng lying on the beach, the great day of separation on the further bank of time.'—P.

goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field.

45 ¶ Again,<sup>o</sup> the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant-man, seeking goodly pearls;

46 Who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it.

47 ¶ Again,<sup>p</sup> the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net,<sup>5</sup> that was east into the sea, and gathered of every kind:

48 Which,<sup>q</sup> when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but east the bad away.

49 So shall it be at the end of the world: the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just;

50 And shall cast them into the furnace of fire:<sup>6</sup> there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

51 Jesus saith unto them, "Have ye understood all these things? They say unto him, Yea, Lord.

52 Then said he unto them, "Therefore every scribe which is instructed unto the kingdom of heaven, is like unto a man that is an householder, which bringeth forth out of his treasure things new and old.<sup>7</sup>

53 ¶ And it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these parables, he departed thence.

common in light soils throughout Europe, and possesses the same deleterious properties ascribed to it by Forskal. C.

Ver. 39. The enemy . . . is the devil. To deny the individuality of the devil, and to represent him, not as a spirit, but as a mere abstract principle of evil, is not uncommon. But the contrast here between the devil and the angels must either reduce the angels to 'abstract principles,' or declare the devil to be an actual 'evil spirit.' But as the personal character of angels is, to all but Sadducees, beyond dispute, so must the personal character of the devil be equally evident to all, except those, his servants, who question his existence, that they may best, because most covertly, promote his power. C.

Ver. 46. The pearl is a round substance found in a species of oyster; and is supposed by some naturalists to be always the product of disease. It is also found in a species of fresh-water mussel. The pearls commonly seen in Europe are of a peculiar white; but the pearls most highly valued in the East are said to be of a reddish tinge. As a specimen of their 'great price' about the time of our Lord, it is recorded that Cleopatra of Egypt dissolved in vinegar and swallowed a pearl at supper valued at £50,000. C.

Ver. 55, 56. The words 'brethren and sisters' do not, in Hebrew usage, necessarily imply that the persons so called were the children of Joseph and Mary; but the silence of the speakers about any other relation naturally leads to the conclusion that they were literally our Lord's brethren and sisters. Jerome and others, however, think they were merely his cousins, the children of his mother's sister, the wife of Cleophas. It matters not. Be it as it may, Rome gains no advantage. Mary, a creature, though 'ALWAYS VIRGIN,' may not be worshipped instead of the Creator. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Astonishing was the care, the condescension, the labours of our Redeemer, to instruct men in the important truths of the gospel. And inestimably valuable and useful is his gospel, especially in its New Testament dispensation. As seed, it produces saints and good works; as leaven, it happily impregnates and captivates our hearts; as a treasure and a pearl, its blessings enrich and deck us for time and eternity; and as a net, it draws us to him, his church, and his throne. It is openly preached to all sorts of sinful men. But, through the want of inward principles of grace, the temptations of Satan, and influence of the world, how diversified is its success! While God, in his wisdom, bestows his tender and blessed grace, it is to some, through their obstinacy and perverseness, the occasion of blindness and the savour of death, and to others the mean of light and the savour of life. Nor can men expect true blessedness unless they really understand it. But, alas! many, by their careless hearing, tempt Satan to carry away gospel truths from their memories, understandings, or consciences. And many, though better than others, rest short of the one thing needful. Never in this world will Satan and indwelling lusts suffer either hearts or churches to be perfectly pure. And never are either more ready to be fearfully infected than in a time of sloth, unwatchfulness, and outward prosperity. But dreadful is their destruction who, after a profession and some experience of gospel truth, die in their sins. Let me therefore take heed how I have received and heard; and think, as a member of the church, what I am. If grace be really found in my heart, it may continue and grow notwithstanding all opposition. And if Jesus Christ be my roof, my righteousness, my riches, my ornament, great, inexpressibly great, shall be my everlasting happiness and honour! While millions are connected together in their additional misery, and are sorrowing in hell, I, with the ransomed of the Lord, shall triumph in the praises of his glorious grace!—But, alas! how many, by their unbelieving prejudices against the Redeemer, obstruct their own salvation! And none are more ready to do so than they who have long, without effect, enjoyed distinguished means of grace.

CHAPTER XIV. Ver. 1. How Herod did not sooner hear of 'the fame of Jesus' will not seem strange to those who consider his principles, as a Sadducee, which would lead him to despise religious men, and his constant engagements as an intriguing and ambitious politician, or as a general, either preparing for or actually at war, in which his army was totally overthrown. By the Roman emperor Caius he was finally deprived of his government—first banished to Lyons, and then to Spain, where he died. C.

Ver. 22. Constrained. This translation has led some to conclude the disciples were unwilling to go, ambitiously hoping to see Jesus made a king; or, what is more natural, affectionately honour, save in his own country, and in his own house.

58 And<sup>y</sup> he did not many mighty works there, because of their unbelief.<sup>9</sup>

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Herod's opinion of Christ. 3 Wherefore John Baptist was beheaded. 13 Jesus departeth into a desert place: 15 where he feedeth five thousand men with five loaves and two fishes: 22 he walketh on the sea to his disciples: 34 and landing at Gennesaret, healeth the sick who touched but the hem of his garment.

AT that time <sup>a</sup>Herod<sup>1</sup> the tetrarch heard of the fame of Jesus;

2 And said unto his servants, This is John the Baptist: he is risen from the dead; and therefore mighty works do show forth themselves in him.<sup>2</sup>

3 ¶ For<sup>b</sup> Herod had laid hold on John, and bound him, and put him in prison for Herodias<sup>3</sup> sake, his brother Philip's wife.

4 For John said unto him, <sup>c</sup>It is not lawful for thee to have her.

5 And when he would have put him to death, he feared the multitude, <sup>d</sup>because they counted him as a prophet.

6 But when <sup>e</sup>Herod's birthday was kept,<sup>4</sup> the daughter of Herodias danced before them,<sup>5</sup> and pleased Herod.

7 Whereupon <sup>f</sup>he promised with an oath to give her whatsoever she would ask.

8 And she, being before instructed of her mother, said, <sup>g</sup>Give me here John Baptist's head in a charger.

9 And the king was <sup>h</sup>sorry: nevertheless, for the oath's sake, and them which sat with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her.

10 And he sent, and <sup>i</sup>beheaded John in the prison.

11 And his head was brought in a charger, and given to the damsel: and she brought it to her mother.<sup>6</sup>

12 And<sup>l</sup> his disciples came and took up the body, and buried it, and went and told Jesus.

13 ¶ When<sup>n</sup> Jesus heard of it, he departed<sup>7</sup> thence by ship into a desert place apart: and when the people had heard thereof, they followed him on foot out of the cities.<sup>8</sup>

14 And<sup>o</sup> Jesus went forth, and saw a great multitude, and was moved with compassion toward them, and he healed their sick.

western shore of the Sea of Galilee. Christ took a boat there and crossed the lake to the north-eastern shore. The northern shore of the lake sweeps round in the form of a semicircle. 15 And<sup>p</sup> when it was evening,<sup>9</sup> his disciples came to him, saying, This is a desert place, and the time is now past; send the multitude away, that they may go into the villages, and buy themselves victuals.

16 But Jesus said unto them, <sup>q</sup>They need not depart; give ye them to eat.

17 And they say unto him, We have here but five loaves, and two fishes.

18 He said, Bring them hither to me.

19 And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the grass; and took the five loaves and the two fishes, and looking up to <sup>r</sup>heaven, he blessed,<sup>2</sup> and brake; and gave the loaves to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude.

20 And they <sup>r</sup>did all eat, and were filled: and they took up of the fragments that remained twelve baskets<sup>3</sup> full.

21 And they that had eaten were about five thousand men, beside women and children.

22 ¶ And<sup>s</sup> straightway Jesus constrained his disciples to get into a ship, and to go before him unto the other side, while he sent the multitudes away.

23 And when he had sent the multitudes away, he went up <sup>t</sup>into a mountain apart to pray: and when the evening<sup>4</sup> was come, he was there alone.

24 But the ship was now in the midst of the sea, tossed with waves: for the wind was contrary.

25 And in <sup>u</sup>'the fourth watch<sup>5</sup> of the night Jesus went unto them, walking on the sea.

26 And when the disciples saw him walking on the sea, they <sup>v</sup>were troubled, saying, It is a spirit; and they cried out for fear.

29 And he said, Come. And when Peter was come down out of the ship, he walked on the water, to go to Jesus.

30 But <sup>z</sup>'when he saw the wind <sup>7</sup>'boisterous, he was afraid; and beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me!

31 And <sup>a</sup>'immediately Jesus stretched forth unwilling to part from their Lord, or timorously shrinking from going to sea without him. Bloomfield, however, has shown that the original may well be translated 'caused,' which would intimate no reluctance in the disciples, but merely a direction on the part of Jesus, the more readily to induce the multitude to disperse, by the sight of the previous departure of the disciples. C. Ver. 26. A spirit. Rather, 'an apparition.' The idea of the spirits of the dead, or rather unembodied spirits, appearing by night, seems to have been, and to be, common to all nations. The idea of such apparitions is said to be exceedingly prevalent among sailors, who look upon them as ominous of shipwreck, which feeling may have produced such terror in the disciples. And though such dread may be largely the effect of misdirected education and superstition, the prevalence of the opinion proves, either that the belief of a spiritual world and immortality is natural to man, or that it proceeds from some original fact or doctrine communicated at the very fountain-head of human life. C.

REFLECTIONS.—God's faithful ministers are great tormentors to them who, like devils, continue impenitent under awful convictions. Faithful reproofs, especially of great men, often procure the most inveterate resentment; in the prosecution of which, all bonds of humanity, honour, justice, or gratitude are trampled under foot; and profane swearing, cruelty, and murder are combined to resent the distinguished kindness. Never are the lusts of sinners more ready to rage than when intoxicated with carnal mirth; and none are more cruel and bloody monsters than abandoned women. But if friends die, and enemies rage, let us go to Jesus, and pour out our complaints to him; and if he withdraw, let us follow him the more eagerly. In so doing we may be reduced to straits, but never to ruin. His compassion is as unbounded as his power. And none need ever depart from him to seek happiness or subsistence from the creature. It is his to feed the hungry, to save the drowning, and to heal the diseased, when brought to the utmost extremity. Let me, then, cast all my care upon him, rest contented with my lot, and readily distribute to others. None ever lost, but gained, by prudently giving to the Lord and the poor. His blessing multiplies provision, but never allows to make waste. Yea, the truly liberal will be the best economists. After sermons and miracles, as well as before, let me give myself to solemn prayer. Let me never be stumbled if I meet with terrible storms in the way of my duty; never dread Christ's hatred of or unconcern about me; nor ever start back from my mercy, as if I took my Saviour for Satan. If he comfort me, cheerfully should I trust in and cry to him; but never tempt his providence, even through desire to be with him. My staggering though unfailing faith will quickly bewray my rashness, and draw out his sharp but kind rebuke. Thrice happy are they who live near to Jesus, and employ him in

CHURCH OF ST. JOHN, SAMARIA—WHERE JOHN THE BAPTIST WAS BEHEADED.
 [MATTHEW, xiv : 2.]—Samaria is the capital built by Omri, the King of Israel, which suffered like Shechem, both being pillaged by John Hyrcanus. It was restored by Gabinius, but nothing remains of the ancient city now. There are many pillars and columns forming a colonnade around the brow of the hill upon which the ancient city was built, but these date from the time of Herod, and are a part of the remains of the temple he built in honor of Augustus. The Church of St. John, it is claimed, was built over the place where John the Baptist was beheaded. For a long time, it is contended, John was a prisoner here. The weight of historic opinion sustains the claim that this is the identical place where he was beheaded.

THE SEA OF GALILEE FROM THE WALL OF TIBERIAS. [MATTHEW, XV: 29.]—The Sea of Galilee has a charm for people above any body of water on earth. It is well known that nearly all the wonderful works of our Savior were performed in sight of this sea. Wherever he journeyed into the surrounding country the Sea of Galilee was the place to which he returned. He was upon every side of it, and doubtless looked into its blue depths from the top of every hill that stands above and around it. So much do people love the waters of this sea that they gather the shells and the pebbles from its shores to distribute as souvenirs all over the world. The waters are perfectly clear and are always in motion. Storms sudden and terrific arise, falling rather from the surrounding mountains, but they are soon over.

35 And when the men of that place had knowledge of him, <sup>9</sup>they sent out into all that country round about, and brought unto him all that were diseased:

36 And besought him that they might <sup>h</sup>only touch the hem of his garment: and as many as touched were made perfectly whole.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Christ reproveth the scribes and Pharisees for transgressing God's commandments through their own traditions: 10 teacheth how that which goeth into the mouth doth not defile a man. 21 He healeth the daughter of a woman of Canaan, 30 and other great multitudes: 32 and with seven loaves and a few little fishes feedeth four thousand men, beside women and children.

THEN came<sup>a</sup> to Jesus scribes and Pharisees, which were of Jerusalem, saying,

2 Why<sup>b</sup> do thy disciples transgress the tradition of the elders? for they wash not their hands when they eat bread.

3 But he answered and said unto them, Why do ye also transgress the commandment of God by your tradition?

4 For God commanded, saying, <sup>c</sup>Honour thy father and mother: and, He that curseth father or mother, let him die the death.

5 But ye say, Whosoever<sup>1</sup> shall say to his father or his mother, It is a gift,<sup>2</sup> by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me;

6 And honour not his father or his mother, he shall be free. <sup>d</sup>Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition.<sup>3</sup>

7 Ye <sup>e</sup>hypocrites! well did Esaias prophesy of you, saying,

8 This<sup>9</sup> people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips: but their heart is far from me.

9 But<sup>h</sup> in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines, the commandments of men.<sup>4</sup>

10 ¶ And<sup>i</sup> he called the multitude, and said unto them, Hear, and understand:

<sup>3</sup> The cabala, or unwritten law, was counted by the Pharisees not only of equal authority with the law of Moses, but sufficient, occasionally, to supersede it; and the modern Jews have many traditions which they also exalt far above the Scriptures. Here, in doing they accord most exactly with the Church of Rome, which, contrary to Scripture authority and example, denies the communion cup to the laity; and, on the authority of asserted tradition, worships the Virgin Mary, saints, angels, relics, pictures, and images, in open defiance of the second commandment, and the confirming comment of our Lord, Mat. 4.10.—C.

<sup>8</sup> Most recent commentators interpret δωρον, not as 'a gift,' or thing dedicated to the service of God, but as denoting a thing which the owner had vowed not to use or give to a particular person—so that even were the father of the vower to ask it, he was, by his vow, prohibited from giving it. The ancient fathers, and also some moderns, understand by it, however, a thing which the vower had formerly dedicated to God, or which he dedicated at the moment the request was made—whereby he was exonerated, nay prevented, from granting it for relief, and enabled afterwards to compound with the priest for a trifling per centage on its value. him, Knowest thou that the Pharisees <sup>k</sup>were offended, after they heard this saying?

13 But he answered and said, <sup>l</sup>Every <sup>5</sup>plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up.

14 Let<sup>n</sup> them alone:<sup>6</sup> they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch.

15 Then<sup>o</sup> answered Peter, and said unto him, Declare unto us this parable.

16 And Jesus said, <sup>p</sup>Are ye also yet without understanding?

17 Do not ye yet understand, <sup>q</sup>that whatsoever entereth in at the mouth goeth into the belly, and is cast out into the draught?

18 But<sup>r</sup> those things which proceed out of the mouth come forth from the heart; and they defile the man.

19 For<sup>s</sup> out of the heart proceed evil <sup>7</sup>thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies:

20 These are the things which defile a man: but to eat with unwashed hands defileth not a man.

21 ¶ Then Jesus went thence, and departed into the coasts<sup>8</sup> of Tyre and Sidon.

23 But <sup>w</sup>he answered her not a word. And his disciples came, and besought him, saying, Send her away; for she crieth after us.

24 But he answered and said, <sup>x</sup>I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

25 Then<sup>z</sup> came she, and worshipped him, saying, Lord, help me!

26 But he answered and said, <sup>y</sup>It is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it to dogs.<sup>2</sup>

27 And she said, <sup>z</sup>Truth, Lord: <sup>e</sup>yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their masters' table.

28 Then<sup>a</sup> Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, great is thy faith: <sup>e</sup>be it unto thee even as thou wilt. <sup>9</sup>And her daughter was made whole from that very hour.

29 ¶ And<sup>b</sup> Jesus departed from thence, and came nigh unto the sea of Galilee;<sup>3</sup> and went up into a mountain, and sat down there.

Every ordinance in the church not instituted by my heavenly Father, and every officer not authorized by him, shall be rooted up and cast out. Nor need ye regard whether the Pharisees be pleased or not; for they are but self-conceited and obstinately ignorant leaders of poor ignorant hearers, who blindly and implicitly follow whatever they dictate; and, in the nature of things, and the just punishment of God, both deceivers and deceived, if they continue in their errors, must perish together in the bottomless pit. 18-20. Out of the corrupt lusts of the heart proceed carnal imaginations, contrivances, and designs; hatred, malice, and murder; wanton desires, words, and actions; adultery, fornication, and every other form of uncleanness; covetousness, injuries, cheats, and thefts; lies, falsehood in bearing witness, all evil-speaking, or calumny against men; and blasphemies and profaneness against God and religion. These are the abominable things which render a man unclean and odious before God, unfit for his service, and for communion

30 And<sup>i</sup> great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed,<sup>4</sup> and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet; and he healed them:

31 Inasmuch that the multitude wondered, when they saw the dumb to speak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to see: and <sup>j</sup>they glorified the God of Israel.

32 ¶ Then<sup>k</sup> Jesus called his disciples unto him, and said, I have compassion on the multitude, because they continue with me now three days,<sup>5</sup> and have nothing to eat:<sup>6</sup> and I will not send them away fasting, lest they faint in the way.

33 And his disciples say unto him, <sup>l</sup>Whence should we have so much bread in the wilderness, as to fill so great a multitude?

34 And Jesus saith unto them, <sup>m</sup>How many loaves have ye? And they said, Seven, and a few little fishes.

35 And he commanded the multitude <sup>n</sup>to sit down on the ground.

36 And he took the seven loaves and the fishes, and <sup>o</sup>gave thanks, and brake them, and gave to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude.

37 And<sup>a</sup> they did all eat, and were filled: and they took up of the broken meat that was left seven baskets full.

38 And they that did eat were four thousand men, beside women and children.

39 And he sent away the multitude, and took ship, and came into the coasts of <sup>p</sup>Magdala.<sup>8</sup>

<sup>8</sup> This city was anciently called Panæas because it contained a sanctuary and temple dedicated to Pan. It was probably the site of the Canaanite Baal-gad, Jos. 11. 17. Herod the Great rebuilt the city, and erected a temple which he dedicated to Cæsar. At a later period the city was included in the territory of Philip, 'tetrarch of Iturea' (Lu. 3. 1), who enlarged it, and gave it the name Cæsarea, in honour of Tiberias Cæsar, adding Philippi ('of Philip') to distinguish it from another city of the same name on the coast. The Greek name is now forgotten, and the ancient appellation has been revived under the Arabic form Banâs. Its site is magnificent, on a wooded terrace on the south declivity of the ridge of Hermon, overlooking the fertile plain of Dan, and having beside it, gushing from a cliff, the upper fountain of the Jordan. —P.

5 ¶ And <sup>e</sup>when his disciples were come to the other side, they had forgotten to take bread.

6 Then Jesus said unto them, <sup>f</sup>Take heed, and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees.

7 And they reasoned among themselves, saying, <sup>h</sup>It is because we have taken no bread.

14 And they said, <sup>o</sup>Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets.

15 He saith unto them, <sup>p</sup>But whom say ye that I am?

16 And Simon Peter answered and said, <sup>q</sup>Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.

17 And Jesus answered and said unto him, <sup>r</sup>Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona: for <sup>s</sup>flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, <sup>t</sup>but my Father which is in heaven.

18 And I say also unto thee, That <sup>u</sup>thou art Peter;<sup>7</sup> and <sup>v</sup>upon this rock<sup>8</sup> I will build my church; and the <sup>w</sup>gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

19 And<sup>z</sup> I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and with or enjoyment of him. 24-26. My commission to exercise my personal ministry and perform my miracles was not designed for the immediate benefit of the Gentiles, but of God's covenant people the Jews, who are gone astray and in perishing circumstances; my special blessings belong to this peculiar people; and therefore it is not proper to grant such favours to the Gentiles, who are without the pale of the covenant, and deserve to be treated with neglect and disdain for their impurity and wickedness. 27. I am indeed vile, worthless, and undeserving; yet, as there are blessings enough for the Jews, and to spare for us Gentiles, let me have this one so necessary mercy.

REFLECTIONS.—The contemners of God's laws are ordinarily mad with zeal for the traditions and ceremonies of men.—A certain mark of detestable hypocrisy! All human inventions in religion invade the authority and pollute the worship of God, and mislead the hearts and corrupt the practices of men. May God root them out of his church and out of our heart, that we ourselves may not, on their account, be excluded from his kingdom! How certainly sinners shall be lost and false teachers push themselves and followers hastily into the depths of hell! Yea, none are farther from the light of God's truth than implicit votaries of profane ministers, and especially preachers who are puffed up with a conceit of their own wisdom. How dull, how slow of heart, to conceive the things of practical religion are even real saints! And, alas! what a sink, what a source of abominations, is the human heart! Dreadful and extensive is the defilement which it spreads abroad into the life! And infinitely important and necessary is the purification from it, by the Word, the Spirit, and the blood of Christ!

Kind and honourable are those parents who bring their children to Jesus, and will not be denied his blessings. Graciously he travels to meet distressed sinners; and yet he often tries those most for whom he has the strongest affection, and for whom he intends the most speedy deliverances and most distinguished honours. Strong is the power of faith when he animates and strengthens it under trials. It breaks through every discouragement, and lays hold on the most indirect hints of mercy. And great is the honour it gains in thus honouring Christ. His repeated apparent disregards do but usher in the most advantageous fulfilment of all its requests. And since this world is so full of miseries and wants, let us bring all to Christ, that, to his own glory, he may heal the former and supply the latter.

ENTRANCE TO CAESAREA PHILIPPI. [MATTHEW, xvi: 13.]—Caesarea Philippi has a population now, perhaps, of a thousand people. These are mostly Turks and Arabs, but there are a few Greeks and Druses. This city is upon the declivity of Mount Hermon. The region here is very fruitful, as well as the plain which lies before it. There is a dense growth of trees. The whole district which is so fertile extends for about two miles west of the town, and is thickly dotted with ruins, stone walls, pillars, capitals and pedestals—these all, perhaps, coming down from the time of the Romans. On the northeastern side of the present village there is one of the streams which goes to make the River Jordan. In the picture we see a part of this stream passing under the stone bridge we cross in going into Caesarea Philippi.

whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.

20 Then<sup>a</sup> charged he his disciples, that they should tell no man<sup>9</sup> that he was Jesus the Christ.

21 ¶ From that time forth began Jesus<sup>b</sup> to show unto his disciples, how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day.

22 Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke<sup>1</sup> him, saying, Be it far from thee,<sup>2</sup> Lord: this shall not be unto thee.

23 But he turned, and said unto Peter, °Get thee behind me, Satan;<sup>3</sup> thou art an offence<sup>4</sup> unto me; for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men.

24 ¶ Then<sup>d</sup> said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

25 For<sup>e</sup> whosoever will save his life shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it.

26 For<sup>g</sup> what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

27 For<sup>h</sup> the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, and then

1 The whole scope of the narrative shows that the 'Mount of Transfiguration' was one of the lofty peaks of Hermon, near Casarea. - Philippi. No place could be imagined better suited to such a scene;—the magnificent scenery, the profound solitude, the sacred associations of Hermon itself.—P.

2 There are some points worthy of special note in the persons present at the transfiguration. They were representative men. Moses represented the law; Elias the prophets; Peter, James, and John the apostles, and every section of the Christian church. The two first were typical: both fasted forty days: both had visions of glory in the holy mount; both were removed from earth in a way different from ordinary mortals. Here type and antitype appeared side by side, 'holding converse on that sublime event which had been the great central subject of the teaching of the lawgiver and the prophets, and which was also to be the sun and substance of apostolic teaching.'—P.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 The transfiguration of Christ. 14 He healeth the lunatic, 22 foretelleth his own passion, 24 and payeth tribute.

AND after<sup>a</sup> six days Jesus taketh<sup>b</sup> Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart,<sup>1</sup>

2 And<sup>c</sup> was transfigured before them: and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light.

3 And,<sup>d</sup> behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias, talking with him.<sup>2</sup>

4 Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.

5 While<sup>e</sup> he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them: and, behold, a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is <sup>g</sup>my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; <sup>h</sup>hear ye him.

6 And when the disciples heard <sup>i</sup>it, they fell on their face, and were sore afraid.

7 And Jesus came and <sup>j</sup>toucheth them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid.

ness and obstinacy hinders your discerning, from the ancient prophecies fulfilled in me, and from my numerous miracles, that the Messiah is now come to set up his kingdom among you, and that your ruin is hastening apace for rejecting him! 18, 19. Upon this my person, and the truth which you have confessed concerning it, will I establish my gospel church, in all its ordinances, and believing members, as upon a sure, immovable, and everlasting foundation; and neither the policy nor force of devils or men, nor the power of death, can remove them from it, nor root my interest out of the world. And I will authorize you and your fellow-disciples, and other faithful ministers, in my name, to declare what practices are lawful and what not; and so to charge men with, or acquit them from, guilt in your preaching; and to inflict censures on the scandalous, and absolve the penitent. And whatever is done agreeably to my laws shall be ratified in heaven and confirmed in the last judgment. 20. He prohibited them from declaring that he was the Messiah, lest his enemies should be too early provoked to destroy him; lest his carnal admirers should tumultuously attempt to make him a king; and lest the Jews should beforehand be prejudiced against the testimony of the disciples. 23. In this, actuated by Satan, and serving his interest, you act the part of an adversary to me, from a regard to carnal honour, ease, or pleasure, attempting to rob me and my Father of our intended honour in the salvation of sinners. 24-26. And as I must be perfected by sufferings, every one that heartily resolves to be my disciple must deny his own carnal interests, wisdom, and will, and with faith and patience, and resignation to God's will, readily submit to whatever losses and persecution he may meet with in following my example and obeying my commands; for he that attempts to preserve his temporal enjoyments or life by sinful compliances and apostasy, shall thereby plunge himself into endless destruction; and he that, on account of his faith in or obedience to me, readily parts with his temporal life, shall obtain everlasting life in heaven as his gracious reward; for what could all the riches, honours, and pleasures which this world affords avail a man if, through his inordinate affection to them, he should lose the welfare, peace, and happiness of his immortal soul? or by what could he redeem his soul from the damnation of hell? 27, 28.

For I, who am now attended with all the mean circumstances and sinless infirmities of human nature, will, in the last day, gloriously appear, and adjudge men to eternal life or death, according as their works shall manifest them righteous or wicked; as an earnest of which some of you present shall, before you die, see me appear gloriously transfigured, and powerfully erecting my gospel church in the abolition of ceremonial ordinances, and awfully destroying the city, temple, and nation of the Jews, for their obstinacy and unbelief.

Ver. 4. No sign. That is, such as they demanded; and which, after attributing his heavenly miracles to diabolical agency, they would, with equal infidel effrontery, have certainly rejected.—Note. Rational evidence every man has a right to demand; but he who rejects one rational evidence has no right to require more. C.

Ver. 18. Gates of hell. That councils were often held, and laws administered, in the gates of cities, is unquestionable. The phrase 'gates of hell' has therefore been generally interpreted of the malice and plots of Satan and his agents against our Lord and his church. It seems, however, more natural to understand by it literally the gates of death—of the grave—which, though they should apparently conquer and inclose our Lord first, and afterwards all his members, would yet be utterly unable to prevail against his resurrection, and afterwards that of his mystical body the church, Ep. 1. 22. C.

Ver. 19. I will give unto thee the keys. This was a personal promise to Peter, and not extending to the other apostles. He received keys, and not simply a key; because there were two gates to be opened—the Jewish and the Gentile. And the word of our Lord was literally fulfilled when Peter applied the key to the Jewish gate, Ac. 2. 14-41; and afterwards when he applied it to the Gentile gate, Ac. 10. 1-18; 11. 1-18; which opening being once completed, Peter's personal commission to that work necessarily ceased; see Re. 3. 7. The remaining part of the commission was common to Peter and the other apostles. See ch. 18. 18, where the address is not to Peter alone, but to all the apostles. C.

Ver. 28. The difficulty in this verse will be greatly removed by considering that our Lord does not say 'they will see the Son of man come,' but 'coming in his kingdom;' that is, beginning to 'reward every man according to his works;' which work commenced at the siege and destruction of Jerusalem, his first signal act of visible retribution, when some of his disciples were still alive to witness. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Wicked men of every sort heartily unite against Jesus, his interests, and people. And men who condemn sufficient evidence of divine truth generally insist upon more. The wisest with respect to temporal concerns are often quite blind and stupid with respect to what is plain, but spiritual. And it is just that Christ should quickly abandon men who remain obstinate in their unbelief. It is very absurd for the children of God to indulge carnal fears about the necessaries of this life, when his remarkable former interpositions have outdone every expectation or wish. Alas! what diversified and ignorant conceptions of Christ prevail with many church members! But happy are they who are divinely enlightened, united to, and built on him as their sure foundation. No plots, no attempts of hell or earth, can ruin them. All the powers, all the ordinances or officers, which he has granted to his church, concur to their establishment and happiness. His sufferings secured it, and his glories secure it. God lifts up his people and casts them down again. And never are they more ready to stumble than after they have been highly honoured by God. Left but a moment to themselves, they bend under the power of the devil. Maxims of carnal policy, and desires of temporal ease and honour, strongly tempt them to shun hardships in religion. But self-denial and obedient submission to crosses are principal articles in the following of Christ. If we hope to live and reign with him in his kingdom of glory, we must be ready to endure tribulation and death for his sake. To ruin our soul in denying our Redeemer is infinitely criminal and foolish; nor can created enjoyments ever balance or retrieve our loss. Let me then never barter my soul for a few trifles! for if it be once lost, it is lost—it is ruined—for ever! And even the glories of a Saviour will but secure and aggravate my eternal misery.

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 17. He here rebukes the father and his disciples for their weakness of faith, and the audience for their obstinate unbelief and readiness to reflect upon him in the weakness of his disciples. 20, 21. By a sincere faith in my power and promise, and through my assistance, ye shall be able to discharge and approve your office in doing things seemingly impossible. But such kind of faith must be exercised in the use of much fervent prayer and humiliation, without which you cannot expect to dislodge devils of so powerful and obstinate a kind as this is.

Ver. 1. Tabor, in the south of Galilee, has been regarded from an early period as the mount of the transfiguration. But it is more probable that it took place in the north of Galilee, as the narrative (comp. ch. 16. 13; 17. 20) evidently seems to refer to some mountain not far from Casarea Philippi, which lay towards the range of Hermon (comp. ch. 16. 13; 17. 20); and, after the transfiguration, it is said (Mar. 9. 30, 33) that 'they departed and passed

MOUNT HERMON—WHERE JESUS TOOK JAMES, PETER AND JOHN AND WAS TRANSFIGURED BEFORE THEM. [MATT., xvii: 1.]—Banias Castle is about two miles from Caesarea Philippi. We are looking toward the north in the photograph and the mountain we see is Hermon, where Jesus took James, Peter and John, and was transfigured before them. The castle seen has stood there from the days of the Phoenicians. Its situation is remarkable. From its broken walls one may look away across the plains of Lake Huleh to the hills of Galilee. The castle is nearly one thousand feet long by about three hundred feet wide, and the walls in some places are one hundred feet high. This is in many respects the most remarkable castle in the world, and has been called the Gibraltar of Palestine. It is now totally abandoned.

8 And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man,<sup>3</sup> save Jesus only.

9 And as they came down from the mountain, Jesus<sup>k</sup> charged them, saying, Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of man be risen again from the dead.<sup>4</sup>

10 ¶ And his disciples asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes that 'Elias must first come?<sup>2</sup>

11 And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias<sup>n</sup> truly shall first come, and restore<sup>5</sup> all things.

12 But I say unto you, that Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed. °Likewise shall also the Son of man suffer of them.

13 Then the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist.

14 ¶ And<sup>p</sup> when they were come to the multitude, there came to him a certain man, kneeling down to him, and saying,

15 Lord,<sup>a</sup> have mercy on my son; for he is lunatic, and sore vexed: for oftentimes he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water.

16 And 'I brought him to thy disciples,<sup>6</sup> and they could not cure him.

17 Then Jesus answered and said, °O faithless and perverse<sup>7</sup> generation! how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him hither to me.

18 And<sup>t</sup> Jesus rebuked the devil, and he departed out of him: and the child was cured from that very hour.

19 Then<sup>u</sup> came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said, Why could not we cast him out?

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Christ warneth his disciples to be humble and harmless: 7 to avoid offences, and not to despise the little ones: 15 teacheth how we are to deal with our brethren, when they offend us: 21 and how oft to forgive them: 23 which he setteth forth by a parable of a king, that took account of his servants, 32 and punished him who showed no mercy to his fellow.

AT the<sup>a</sup> same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?<sup>1</sup> through Galilee, and then came to Capernaum, on the north of the Sea of Galilee. Had the mountain of transfiguration been in Galilee, would the evangelist have said 'they departed and passed through' it? Would he not have said 'they departed and went to Capernaum'? Besides, it is said, they went up to a mountain apart; whereas Tabor was certainly at the period an inhabited town and fortress, and therefore peculiarly unfitted for retirement. C.

Ver. 3. This appearance gives evidence the most decided to the most comfortable doctrine of recognition of Christian friends in a future state. For if Moses and Elias, who had been utter strangers to them, were yet made known to the disciples, why should the identity of any dear child of God be lost in the multitude of the redeemed? C.

Ver. 15. He is lunatic. That the moon exercises a powerful influence upon some nervous disorders is unquestionable. This effect is generally attributed to her attraction, which is seen to be so powerful as to influence the tides. It is, however, rather more probable that her influence upon disease is merely that of her brilliancy during the night, which irritates the nervous system, produces sleeplessness, and thereby aggravates the symptoms. The symptoms mentioned, Lu. 9. 39, indicate a disease resembling epilepsy; but both there and in ver. 18 the disease is declared to be under the control of a malignant spirit. At this infidels and sceptics may scoff; but what pretensions have they to know anything of the invisible world? When they can cure the disease with a word of rebuke, they may question the Scripture account of its origin. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How mixed was the lot of our Redeemer in this world! How quickly lifted up and cast down again! Now he shines in glory; anon he is plunged into sufferings and death. Now devils and distempers flee before his infinite power and grace; anon he is discredited, or ill understood, by weak disciples, and despised by faithless and perverse Jews. Possessed of all the fulness of Godhead—of all the riches of heaven and earth—he humbly, but miraculously, borrows his tribute-money from a fish, to avoid giving offence. But his resurrection from the dead wiped away all his reproach, and rendered illustrious his deepest debasement. If Moses and Elias have, in solemn manner, resigned to him all their powers and honours, let me hear him as my great, my only divine prophet! Let me rejoice in his dearness to God, and exalted dominion over men! Let me lift up my heart, and retire from the world, to hold fellowship with him, and prolong his visits to the utmost! Let no danger, no guilt, terrify my heart, while I enjoy the great Propitiation and Saviour! If the choicest saints forsake me, it is enough that Jesus remains to comfort me. Ravishing discoveries of him on earth are indeed but short-lived; and suffering is the certain fate of all his followers. I must return to depths of temptation, desertion, and trouble, in which my fellow-Christians have often laboriously struggled with stubborn devils and indwelling lusts. But if I or my friends experience their uncommon cruelty, let me, with fervour and humility, supplicate Jesus for relief. And let want or weakness of faith, which mar my duty and obstruct my mercies, be the grief, the burden, the detestation of my heart. And while through manifold tribulations I follow him to his kingdom and glory, let me carefully avoid whatever could prejudice others against him, his doctrines, or ways. It is better to waive my right and open my purse than dishonour my Redeemer.

CHAPTER XVIII. Ver. 1-6. His disciples having contended which of them should be preferred to the highest places of honour and trust in the temporal kingdom, which they imagined he would quickly set up, Jesus presented a little child before them, and told them that unless their minds were graciously weaned from such carnal ambition, and rendered truly humble, after the appearance of that child, they could neither be members nor honoured officers in his gospel kingdom, nor be admitted into the glories of the heavenly state; and that whoever of them affectionately regarded any of his humble, however mean, disciples, as such, should be esteemed as honouring himself; and that whoever should dishearten such weak but humble believers, and cause them to stumble into sin, should be exposed to the most certain and fearful punishments. 7-9. Dreadful hurt shall the world sustain through the corrupt opinions and practices by which Satan and his instruments will attempt to discourage, injure, and ensnare weak believers; but most dreadful shall be the punishment of that man whose sinful and mischievous behaviour perverts and draws others into evil. If therefore anything, however useful or dear to you, tend to make you injure the cause of truth, peace, and holiness, to the grieving or tempting of my people, it would be much better for you to part with it, by the most self-denying and painful mortification, than, by indulging it, to hazard your own eternal damnation. 10-14. It is infinitely criminal and dangerous to condemn or discourage weak believers, whom the angels of God, on all occasions, watch over and minister unto; whom the Son of God came to save from the depths of ruin, and takes an especial pleasure in preserving and recovering when they have gone astray; and whom the Father, with all means of grace, seeks to make eternally happy. 15-17. If any of your fellow-professors of the true religion, by any sinful conduct, grieve or tempt you to sin, deal freely with him in a secret manner, in order to render him duly sensible of and penitent for it; and if he appear so, with joy renew your affection, and conceal his transgressions from others. If he appear obstinate, take one or two pru-

MILL NEAR THE WATERS OF MEROM. [MATT., 18.]—As Jesus returned from Cæsarea Philippi He would come down on the western shore of the Jordan, and thus would pass the scene we give in the above photograph. An old mill is always picturesque, and when we take this in connection with the water, the cattle standing in it, coupled with its great historic significance, the effect is greatly heightened. And then, when in addition to the elements which go to make a good picture, we remember that it is a spot our Savior witnessed and in the historic country where He lived, the interest is increased. In the region where this mill is situated the Bedouins live, and these cattle belong to them. The Bedouins are the wild children of nature and are often kind and hospitable to strangers. Many of them are rich.

2 And Jesus called <sup>a</sup>a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them,

3 And said, Verily I say unto you, <sup>c</sup>Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.

4 Whosoever<sup>d</sup> therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven.

5 And <sup>e</sup>whoso shall receive one such little child<sup>2</sup> in my name, receiveth me.

6 But<sup>g</sup> whoso shall offend<sup>3</sup> one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone<sup>4</sup> were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea.

7 ¶ Woe<sup>h</sup> unto the world because of offences! for it must needs be that offences come:<sup>5</sup> but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh!

8 Wherefore,<sup>6</sup> if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than, having two hands or two feet, to be cast into everlasting fire.

9 And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enter<sup>i</sup> into life with one eye, rather than, having two <sup>j</sup>eyes, to be cast into hell-fire.

10 ¶ Take<sup>k</sup> heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, That in heaven <sup>l</sup>their angels do always behold the <sup>m</sup>face of my Father which is in heaven.<sup>7</sup>

11 For<sup>o</sup> the Son of man is come to save that which was lost.

12 How<sup>p</sup> think ye? if a man have an hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray?

13 And if so be that he find it, verily I say unto you, he <sup>q</sup>rejoiceth more of that sheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not astray.

14 Even <sup>r</sup>so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones<sup>8</sup> should perish.

15 ¶ Moreover, <sup>s</sup>if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother.

16 But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in <sup>t</sup>the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established.

17 And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell

<sup>y</sup> The doctrine of the 'ministry of angels' is met with in various parts of Scripture. The abuses of the doctrine in some sections of the Christian church have had the tendency of leading other and purer sections altogether to ignore it. It is nevertheless true. Many incidental statements, both in Old and New Testament history, prove that the angels are 'ministering spirits, sent forth to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation.' From this passage it is clear that children are included, and that in some way or other, for some purpose or other, certain angels are allotted as their especial attendants.—P.

<sup>aa</sup> This is an evident allusion to the constitution and discipline of the Jewish synagogue, as is testified by the Talmud. This discipline was specially applied in cases where the law made no direct provision—of which, amongst other cases, Mammonides gives the following:—'If any refuse to feed his children, they reprove, they shame, they urge him—they make proclamation against him in the synagogue:—'A. B. is a cruel man, and will not feed his children—more cruel than the unclean birds, for they nourish their young ones.'—C.

<sup>ac</sup> Verses 18 and 19 show that there is a wider reference here than the Jewish synagogue. Our Lord looks forward to the Christian assemblies which were modelled upon the Jewish. The church—the regularly constituted assembly of believers—was to be consulted in such cases, and its decision, solemnly and prayerfully come to, was to be considered final.—P.

19 Again I say unto you, <sup>ay</sup>That if two of you shall agree on earth as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven.

20 For where two or three are gathered together in my name, <sup>az</sup>there am I<sup>2</sup> in the midst of them.

21 ¶ Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I <sup>ba</sup>forgive him? till seven times?

22 Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times; but, Until seventy times seven.<sup>3</sup>

23 Therefore is the kingdom of <sup>bb</sup>heaven likened unto a <sup>bc</sup>certain king, which would take account of his servants.

24 And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him, which owed him <sup>bd</sup>ten thousand talents:<sup>5</sup>

25 But forasmuch as he had not to pay, <sup>be</sup>his lord commanded him to be sold, and his <sup>bf</sup>wife, and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made.

26 The servant therefore fell down, and worshipped him,<sup>7</sup> saying, Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

27 Then the lord of that servant <sup>bg</sup>was moved with compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt.

28 But the same servant went out, and found one of his fellow-servants which owed him an hundred pence;<sup>8</sup> and he laid hands on him, and took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest.

29 And his fellow-servant fell down at his feet, and besought him, saying, <sup>bh</sup>Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

30 And he would not: but went and cast him into prison, till he should pay the debt.

31 So when his fellow-servants saw what was done, they were very sorry,<sup>9</sup> and came and told unto their lord all that was done.

32 Then his lord, after that he had called him, said unto him, <sup>bi</sup>O thou wicked servant, I forgave thee all that debt, because thou desiredst me:

dent Christians along with you, and deal earnestly and plainly with his conscience, to render him penitent. If he still continue obstinate in his sin, lay his case before that church judicatory to which he is immediately subjected; and if, notwithstanding all they can do to convince and reclaim him, he still continue obstinate, let him be solemnly cast out of the church by excommunication; and let all her members avoid all unnecessary fellowship with him, even in civil things, that he may be ashamed, and made to consider his conduct. 18-20. And that the censures may be confirmed and ratified by me and my Father, it is necessary that they be regularly passed in my name, and carried on with much fervent prayer. 23-35. The scope of this parable is to represent that nothing is more base, criminal, and dangerous than for such as profess to believe God's remission of all their high crimes against him to resent the petty injuries done to themselves; and that, though the revengefulness of believers shall not be punished with eternal damnation, it will expose them to fearful chastisements in this life.

33 Shouldest<sup>i</sup> not thou also have had compassion on thy fellow-servant, even as I had pity on thee?

34 And his lord was wroth, and delivered him to the tormentors, till he should pay all that was due unto him.

35 So<sup>k</sup> likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses.<sup>1</sup>

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Christ healeth the sick: 3 answereth the question of the Pharisees concerning divorce: 10 sheweth when marriage is necessary: 13 receiveth little children: 16 instructeth a young man how to attain eternal life, 20 and how to be perfect: 23 telleth his disciples how hard it is for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God, 27 and promiseth great rewards to those that forsake anything to follow him.

AND it came to pass, <sup>a</sup>that when Jesus had finished these sayings, he departed from Galilee, and came into the coasts of Judea beyond Jordan.<sup>1</sup>

2 And<sup>b</sup> great multitudes followed him; and he healed them there.

3 ¶ The<sup>c</sup> Pharisees also came unto him, tempting him, and saying unto him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause?

4 And he answered and said unto them, Have ye not read, <sup>d</sup>that he which made them at the beginning, made them male and female,

5 And said, <sup>e</sup>For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife; and <sup>f</sup>they twain shall be one flesh?

6 Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put <sup>g</sup>asunder.<sup>3</sup> east of the Jordan; such was not the case. Some have thought our Lord went from Galilee to Judea by a route which took him down the east side of the Jordan. The Greek will not bear such an interpretation. The word 'coasts' might be better rendered 'borders.' The Jordan was the eastern border of Judea. Christ then came to that portion of Perea which was separated from Judea by the Jordan—he came to the very bank of the river, probably to the village of Bethany, where he was baptized.—P.

command to give a writing of divorcement, and to put her away?

8 He saith unto them, Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts, suffered<sup>4</sup> you to put away your wives: <sup>5</sup>but from the beginning it was not so.

9 And<sup>k</sup> I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery: and whoso marrieth her which is put away doth commit adultery.

tions of the mind by those parts of the body that were most affected by them; see Ro. 6.13; 7.23. Hence 'the bowels' denoted compassion; 'the heart,' love; 'an evil eye,' envy (Mat. 20.15), covetousness, or other unlawful desire, 1 Jn. 2.16. Hence 'the hand' and 'the foot' were used to signify all the powers of walking and of movement. 'To cut off,' or 'pluck out,' is, therefore, to 'mortify, through the Spirit,' those several 'deeds of the body,' that we may live to God. C.

Ver. 25. There does not appear in Scripture any instance of a man sold for payment of his debts. A man, however, might sell himself, Ex. 21.2, 6; Le. 25.47; and if a debtor could not pay, the creditor might appropriate his service, but could not sell him. The sale authorized (Ex. 22.2) is not of a debtor, but a thief who could not pay the legal fine. Unless, therefore, the law imply that the right which a creditor acquired over the person and services of his debtor he might transfer to another, as he might his other properties, this case must be understood not as an illustration taken from the law of Moses, but from the practice of eastern monarchs, whose will is the only law. And this last supposition is rendered probable, if not confirmed, by our Lord's reference to 'the kings of the earth,' ch. 17.25. C.

REFLECTIONS.—An eager ambition after worldly honour is very unlike the disciples and kingdom of Christ. And there is great need of a daily conversion to God from the errors of our way. What tender care Jesus takes of his saints, especially if weak and humble! His angels watch over, protect, and minister to them. At his Father's commandment he died for them, and seeks them out when they wander. He hears their prayers, and attends their societies. It is inexpressibly dangerous to grieve their hearts or to make them stumble into sin, or for them to indulge any darling corruption. But it is very base and criminal for Christians to pay so little regard to their God and their Saviour's rules for removing of scandals; and to be more careful to render an offender infamous than to bring him to repentance. Thrice happy are the churches where these rules are attended to without passion or prejudice, and with a readiness to forgive. Awful are church censures when regularly passed; and heinous is their guilt, and infinite their danger, who dare wilfully incur, or profanely despise, what is ratified in heaven. How inconceivably great and many are our offences against God! He keeps an exact account of them all, in every circumstance of them! And infinite is the mercy of a reprieve, and especially of a redemption, from their awful consequences in hell. But detestable both to God and men is a revengeful temper or conduct in a professed Christian; and such may expect great plagues and sorrow because of sin in eternity.

CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 17. Why do ye call me good in this emphatic manner when you conceive me to be a mere man? There is none good in and from himself but God alone. But if you desire to work righteousness in order to procure a title to eternal life, you must perfectly keep all the commandments of God. 21. To mark your perfect love to your neighbour, and that your affections are weaned from earthly enjoyments, go sell your whole estate, and give it to the poor in these distressing times, and come and follow me in my poverty and sufferings. 22-30. Ye who, through the regenerating influences of my Spirit, have attended and assisted me in my attempts to reform the nation, and introduce the gospel dispensation, shall, upon my ascension to heaven, be honoured with the distinguished effusion of the Holy Ghost, to render you leading officers in founding the gospel church; and in my appearing to destroy Jerusalem your predictions shall be fulfilled and your characters vindicated. In the latter days your Jewish brethren shall be converted by your doctrines; and in the last judgment ye shall be most honoured approvers of the sentence which I shall pass according to my gospel dispensed by you. And all they who conscientiously suffer losses in their temporal interests or enjoyments for my sake, shall in this life have their losses graciously compensated, to their unspeakable advantage, in inward contentment and divine consolations and hopes, if not in other external comforts, and in eternal glories in the future state. And yet, to manifest the glory of redeeming grace in all this, many Jews who are first called, and apparently more fitted to receive me, shall be rejected for their unbelief; while the Gentile strangers to the covenants of promise shall, through faith, be admitted to all the blessings of my kingdom of grace and glory. And even some Jews, more early converted, shall have less honour or usefulness in my church than some Gentiles who shall be afterwards influenced to believe.

Ver. 3. About the time of our Saviour there arose two famous schools of the law at Jerusalem—those of Hillel and Shammai. That of Shammai taught that divorce was unlawful except for adultery; while the more popular school of Hillel authorized divorce for any cause, even the mere will of the husband. C.

Ver. 8. Moses, in the law, did not command a dissatisfied husband to divorce and put away a wife, as the Pharisees insinuate, but merely suffered it to be done, saying, 'let him'—not as an authoritative sanction and indulgence to caprice or passion, neither as an approval of the act or pardon of the sin, but as a mere temporary reprieve or stay of judgment, that happily might eventuate, through grace, in softening the hardened heart. C.

Ver. 9. As Moses (De. 24.1) suffered the dissatisfied husband to put away the wife, so (De. 24.2) he suffered the divorced wife to marry again, saying, 'she may.' Our Lord, however, having denied expressly the existence of any command in favour of the husband, equally denies it in favour of the wife, and pronounces both equally guilty in the sight of God; while to the wife is extended neither approval of the act nor pardon of the sin, but the mere temporary reprieve and stay of judgment previously conceded to the hard-hearted husband. C.

Ver. 17. Why callest thou me good? You call me 'Master,' thereby showing you believe me a mere man. Why then call me good, a title that legitimately belongs to God alone? If, therefore, I be really good, I must be 'God manifest in the flesh.' But Jesus calls himself 'good,' Jn. 10.14, therefore, by his own argument, he must be God. C.

Ver. 21. If thou wilt be perfect in character, renounce the world which you love, and your legal righteousness wherein you trust, and 'follow me'—the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth.' C.

Ver. 24. Some, for camel, read camel, the Greek words differing but in one letter; but this change is without any sufficient authority. The meaning is simply this: The matter is naturally impossible while the camel lives. To effect it by artificial means were the camel dead would not, to the chemist, be a task of difficulty. Even so while the rich man lives in the love of the world his entrance into the kingdom of heaven is a natural impossibility.

him, Good Master, 'what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?

17 And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God: 'but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments.

18 He saith unto him, Which? Jesus said, Thou<sup>v</sup> shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness;

19 Honour thy father and thy mother; and, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

20 The young man saith unto him, 'All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?'<sup>1</sup>

21 Jesus said unto him, 'If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come and follow me.'

22 But when the young man heard that saying, 'he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions.

23 ¶ Then said Jesus unto his disciples, Verily I say unto you, <sup>b</sup>That a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven.

24 And again I say unto you, 'It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

25 When his disciples heard it, they were exceedingly amazed, saying, Who then can be saved?

26 But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, With<sup>d</sup> men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible.<sup>2</sup>

1 Here is the spirit of formalism which prevailed so largely among the Jews fully developed. By conformity to the outward requirements of the law the young man had almost succeeded in deceiving himself; yet conscience was not satisfied. He felt he lacked something more; hence his question: 'What good thing shall I do?' Our Lord's first object was to convince him of the inherent sinfulness of his heart; and in this he succeeded.—P.

2 The grand fundamental doctrine, salvation by grace, is here declared by our Lord. By man's power the corrupt heart cannot be renewed, the worldly disposition cannot be overcome, the dead soul cannot be revived; 'but with God all things are possible;' 'You hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins.'—P.

and suffered much for Christ; yet they must not be over-confident. Presumption is to be carefully avoided. Perhaps Judas was in our Lord's mind. Great privileges entail great responsibilities. Except therefore the disciples should fully use their privileges, though the first to follow Christ, they might be last in receiving their reward.—P.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Christ, by the similitude of the labourers in the vineyard, sheweth that God is debtor unto no man: 17 foretelleth his passion: 20 by answering the mother of Zebedee's children teacheth his disciples to be lovely: 29 and giveth two blind men their sight.

FOR the<sup>a</sup> kingdom of heaven is like unto <sup>ba</sup> a man that is an householder, which went out <sup>early</sup> in the morning to hire <sup>a</sup>labourers into his vineyard.

2 And when <sup>e</sup>he had agreed with the labourers for a penny<sup>1</sup> a day, he sent them into his vineyard.

3 And he went out about the third <sup>2</sup>hour, and saw others standing idle<sup>3</sup> in the market-place,

4 And said unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard, and <sup>9</sup>whatsoever is right, I will give you. And they went their way.

5 Again he went out about the sixth and ninth hour,<sup>4</sup> and did likewise.

But as soon as 'by the cross of Christ he is crucified (and thereby dead) to the world,' his entrance into that kingdom is not only possible but secure. See ver. 26. C.

Ver. 28. A change in the punctuation, which the original warrants, and the sense seems to demand, would render the passage thus: 'Ye who have followed me, in the regeneration (the time of final restoration to glory) when the Son of man shall sit on the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit on twelve thrones,' &c. That some eminent expositors understand by 'the regeneration' the present gospel state, is not to be forgotten; but that it refers to a state still future seems certain from the fact that, in 'the regeneration' described, the apostles are, in some sense, to be changed from witnesses to judges, and, as such, to sit on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes—a circumstance that has never been hitherto fulfilled, and for the accomplishment of which we must therefore look to futurity. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Indefatigable was the gracious Redeemer in doing good wherever he came; prudent in avoiding the snares of his malicious enemies; careful to honour, regulate, and perpetuate every divine institution which related to the raising up of a holy seed in his church; and delighted with the early and earnest dedication of children to himself. It is cruel, then, to deprive young subjects of his kingdom of the seal of his covenant; and criminal to pretend that his incarnation, labours, and glory abridge the privileges of his people. Very important and necessary is a deep concern about the true way to everlasting life; nor can it be obtained but by a perfect righteousness, answerable to the whole law of God; and where can this be found but in Christ? Alas! that multitudes should hope to find it in their own works! and yet those who highly extol and heartily trust in their good works very seldom remarkably abound in them. And their defect quickly appears if they be tried in what lies opposite to their carnal inclinations and interests. The riches and love of this world are most powerful hinderances to our care about or progress towards heaven; and only almighty grace can conquer the heart and remove the difficulty.—In faithfully following Christ, we must expect manifold losses and troubles in this world. But if we undergo them from love to him, his truths and ways, his blessings here and glory hereafter will inexpressibly more than compensate. And whether we be first or last in time or in dignity, all must be regulated by the exceeding riches of his grace.

CHAPTER XX. Ver. 1-16. The vineyard here is the church, formed by infinite wisdom, power, and grace, from the world that lieth in wickedness, and furnished with divine oracles, ordinances, and officers; hedged about by God's special protection, government, and discipline, and cultivated by his Spirit, ministers, and people. The 3d, 6th, 9th, and 11th hours, may represent the patriarchal, Mosaic, apostolic, and millennial periods of the church; or the periods of human life, childhood, youth, middle, and old age, in which different persons are called and converted to Christ, that they may serve him in his church. But as the kingdom of heaven chiefly denotes the gospel church, the 3d, 6th, and 9th hours chiefly denote those periods in which the Jews were called and converted by the ministry of John and Christ, or of his apostles for some years after his ascension. The 11th hour may denote that period in which the Gentiles have, or shall be, converted to Christ by the apostles and other gospel ministers, after they had been for many ages abandoned to idolatries, and destitute of the ordinances and calls of the gospel. The penny of reward denotes all the privileges of the gospel church, and all the blessings of grace and glory. At God's giving these to the Gentiles equally as to themselves, who had been long the peculiar people of God, and who had long served him in burdensome ceremonies, the Jews, and even the real converts among them, exceedingly murmured—not considering that all the favours of God spring entirely from his own free grace; and that many are outwardly called by the ministry of the gospel, and made members of the visible church, who fall short, through their self-conceit and unbelief, while few are chosen of God to eternal life, because few continue faithful to the end. 21-23. Let my sons, who are now thy constant favourites, be next in honour and authority to thyself in that kingdom which thou art about to erect. Jesus replied that they appeared quite ignorant of the nature and honours of his kingdom, and that they must expect terrible persecutions, reproaches, and distresses, as he himself had or should suffer; but that all the honours of his kingdom would be conferred by him upon those who were faithful in life and work. 24-28. The other ten apostles being filled with envy and resentment against the two brothers for attempting to procure a pre-eminence above themselves, Jesus meekly reproved them altogether, and told them that a carnal and heathenish ambition for lordly dominion over others was very contrary to the nature and design of his spiritual kingdom; and that their only proper way to become truly great and honourable in his church was to be most humble, self-denied, and active in doing even the meanest services for the benefit of others; even as he himself, notwithstanding his infinite glory, had come into this world to submit to the meanest services, and even an ignominious death, for the redemption of the race of poor sinners.

Ver. 20. The mother of Zebedee's children. Her name was Salome, as appears from Mat. 27.56; comp. with Mar. 15.40. She is not called Zebedee's wife; he was therefore most probably dead. Her sons were James and John, Mar. 10.35. She presents the character of an ambitious but affectionate mother, who seems to have trained her sons to her own high aspirations; for they evidently join with her (ver. 22) and assert their ability to fulfil the conditions of their elevation, though as yet totally ignorant of their nature, and, as their own experience demonstrated (Mat. 26.56), sadly unfitted for the task.—Note, Men of ardent and aspiring minds, when subdued by grace, do not altogether lose

FOUNTAIN OF THE APOSTLES, WHERE CHRIST PASSED, RESTED AND DRANK. [MATT., xx: 17.]—"And Jesus going up to Jerusalem took the twelve disciples apart in the way and said to them, Behold we go up to Jerusalem," etc. When Jesus uttered these words He was on his way to Jerusalem. He was beyond the Jordan and was to come through Jericho. The Fountain of the Apostles is between Jericho and Jerusalem, and about four miles from the Holy City. It is one of the places that we may be absolutely sure Jesus passed, for the road from Jerusalem to Jericho has not changed, and this fountain is so necessary as a place to get water in the Judean mountains that we may know that Christ not only passed here but often rested and drank water here. Here the sheik furnishes a guide to conduct travelers to Jericho.

8 And about the eleventh hour<sup>5</sup> he went out, and found others standing idle, and saith unto them, <sup>b</sup>Why stand ye here all the day idle?

7 They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He saith unto them, <sup>c</sup>Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive.

8 So when <sup>d</sup>even was come, the lord of the vineyard saith unto his steward, Call the labourers, and give them their hire, beginning from the last unto the first.

9 And when they came that were hired about the <sup>e</sup>eleventh hour, they received every man a penny.

10 But when the first came, they supposed that they should have received more: and they likewise received every man a penny.

11 And when they had received it, they <sup>f</sup>murmured<sup>6</sup> against the goodman of the house, 12 Saying, These last <sup>g</sup>have wrought but one hour,<sup>8</sup> and thou hast made them equal unto us, <sup>h</sup>which have borne the burden and heat of the day.

13 But he answered one of them, and said, Friend,<sup>9</sup> I do thee no wrong: didst not thou agree with me for a penny?

14 Take that thine is, and <sup>i</sup>go thy way: I will give unto this last even as unto thee.

15 Is<sup>p</sup> it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? <sup>j</sup>Is thine eye evil, because I am good?<sup>1</sup>

16 So<sup>r</sup> the last shall be first, and the first last: for many be called, but few chosen.<sup>2</sup>

17 ¶ And<sup>s</sup> Jesus going up to Jerusalem, <sup>k</sup>took the twelve disciples apart in the way, and said unto them,

18 Behold, <sup>l</sup>we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be betrayed unto the chief priests and unto the scribes, and they shall condemn him to death, 19 And shall <sup>m</sup>deliver him to the Gentiles, to mock, and to scourge, and to crucify him: and the third day he shall rise again.

20 ¶ Then<sup>n</sup> came to him the mother<sup>3</sup> of Zebedee's children, with her sons, worshipping him, and desiring a certain thing of him.

21 And he said unto her, What wilt thou?

VIEW OF JERICO, WHERE OUR SAVIOR HEALED THE TWO BLIND MEN.
[MATT., xx:30.]—No place on earth has had more changes than Jericho. Here the Israelites first came under Joshua when they crossed the Jordan from their wanderings. Under Pompey Jericho was destroyed. At the time of Herod and Cleopatra it was rebuilt as a magnificent city of palaces, castles and theatres. It was again destroyed by Vespasian, and subsequently rebuilt as a garrison city for the tenth legion. Here resided the Byzantine bishops and here were churches and convents under the reign of the Emperor Justinian. Here the Christian Crusaders came, causing the gardens to bloom and again become fertile. Here our Savior healed the two blind men that were sitting by the way as He passed, and here John the Baptist lived.

THE GOLDEN GATE — THROUGH WHICH OUR SAVIOR PASSED. [MATT., xxi: i.]
—The Golden Gate is in the eastern wall of Jerusalem. It looks toward the Mount of Olives. In the first verse of the 21st chapter of Matthew, we have an account of the triumphant entry of our Savior from the Mount of Olives through this gate. It is now closed up. The Mahometans have a tradition to the effect that foreigners will some day capture Jerusalem and enter the city through this gate. Two columns of this gate are said by Moslems to have been brought on her shoulders by the Queen of Sheba as a present to King Solomon. Through this gate the Moslems think the good at the last day will pass on their way to the hours of Paradise after having safely crossed the Kedron on that bridge which is sharper than the sharpest sword.

CHAPTER XXI.

AND when<sup>a</sup> they drew nigh unto Jerusalem, and were come to Bethphage,<sup>1</sup> unto the mount of Olives, then sent Jesus two disciples,

<sup>10</sup> And<sup>i</sup> when he was come into Jerusalem, all the city was moved, saying, Who is this?

<sup>12</sup> ¶ And Jesus went into the temple of God, and <sup>12</sup> east out all them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money-changers, and the seats of them that sold doves;

<sup>14</sup> And<sup>o</sup> the blind and the lame came to him in the temple; and he healed them.

<sup>15</sup> ¶ And<sup>p</sup> when the chief priests and scribes saw the wonderful things that he did, and the in it, and encourage them to it; but all of these they persecuted and murdered one after another. After a long interval he sent his Son, as the last expedient for rendering them penitent and fruitful. But when they saw him speaking and acting with divine power and authority, and extolled by the people as the Messiah, their rulers in church and state resolved to establish their own authority by excommunicating, persecuting, and murdering him: on account of which God, about forty years after his death, deprived them of all their privileges in church and state, and by sword, famine, pestilence, and captivity, rendered them dreadfully miserable; and admitted the Gentiles into the gospel church in their stead. 42, 44. Notwithstanding all the abuse and persecution which Christ suffered from the Jewish rulers till he was put to death upon the cross, yet was he exalted to glory, and made Head over all things to his church. They who, through ignorance and prejudice, undervalued him in his state of humiliation, endangered their souls: but they who obstinately reject him in his exalted state after the wonderful effusion of the Spirit, draw down upon themselves fearful and inevitable misery.

Ver. 12. Jesus went into the temple. Not into the 'house of the Lord'—(for in that case the word employed would have been ναός;)—but into some of the courts, which, together, were called ἱερόν—and most probably the outer, called the court of the Gentiles.—All that sold and bought—oil, flour, wine, frankincense, animals, &c., for sacrifice.—Money-changers, who furnished Jewish money for the Roman and other heathen coins, which, being impressed with the images of emperors and idols, could not be admitted into the treasury of the temple—or occasionally fur-

<sup>a</sup> Mar. 11. 1-15. Lu. 19. 29-44. Jn. 12. 12-16. <sup>1</sup> The narratives of the evangelists when carefully compared show that Bethphage and Bethany must have stood close together; in fact, it seems probable that they were names for different quarters of the same village—the one called Bethany, 'house of dates,' from its palm-trees; the other Bethphage, 'house of figs,' from its fig orchards. Comp. Mar. 11. 1. Lu. 19. 29.—<sup>2</sup> Bethany is about a mile and a half from Jerusalem by the main road round the shoulder of Olivet. Soon after leaving the village, the road meets a deep ravine, round the top of which it winds to avoid the precipitous descent. Just opposite the point where the road strikes the ravine, on the brow of the opposite bank, is the site of a very ancient village—this is doubtless the place here referred to where the ass was found.—<sup>3</sup> Ps. 24. 1; 50. 10, 11. It is not unusual in the East to place the loose flowing robe generally worn by men on the back of an animal, and to use it as a saddle. The spreading of their garments on the way before him was a tribute to royalty similar to that accorded to Jehu when he was declared king, 2 Ki. 9. 13.—<sup>10</sup> Ps. 118. 24-26. ch. 23. 39; ver. 15. with them foreign money, which it was unlawful to present for the atonement (Ex. 30. 13); they were also obliged to buy at Jerusalem the animals and other things required for offerings. It appears from the words of this passage that resident Jews took advantage of these things to practise fraud and extortion.—<sup>15</sup> I.e. Save now, ver. 9. <sup>16</sup> The Messiah, Is. 11. 1. While men frequented the temple of God, and professed to perform sacred duties there, they made those duties the occasion of fraud. Our Lord drove the dishonest dealers out of the temple. He wished to show that such acts could not be tolerated; and to impress more deeply the same solemn lesson on the minds of the disciples and of mankind, he cursed the fig-tree which had leaves but no fruit. <sup>16</sup> And said unto him, Hearest thou what these say? And Jesus saith unto them, Yea: have ye never read, <sup>16</sup> Out of the month of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise?<sup>9</sup>

<sup>21</sup> Jesus answered and said unto them, Verily I say unto you, <sup>21</sup> If ye have faith, and doubt not, ye shall not only do this which is done to the fig-tree, but also if ye shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou east into the sea, it shall be done.

<sup>23</sup> ¶ And<sup>u</sup> when he was come into the temple, <sup>23</sup> the chief priests and the elders of the people came unto him as he was teaching, and said, <sup>23</sup> By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority?

<sup>24</sup> And<sup>v</sup> Jesus answered and said unto them, I also will ask you one thing, which if ye tell me, I in likewise will tell you by what authority I do these things.

<sup>26</sup> But if we shall say, Of men; we fear the people; <sup>26</sup> for all hold John as a prophet.

nished local coin for such foreign money as was not current at Jerusalem.—Doves, the offerings, which the poor were authorized to offer in place of more expensive sacrifices. C.

Ver. 22. Believing—in the Word of God, which has instructed you to ask them—in the truth of God, which has promised to grant them—and in the power of God, which is able to accomplish them—'ye shall receive.' The promise cannot be strained to any other sense—especially to any sense that puts any presumptuous confidence of men into the place of the authority and promise of God. C.

Ver. 27. Our Lord was not evading the question, but demonstrating, out of their own mouths, how unworthy his questioners were of an answer—unworthy in any case upon their own showing. For they were either so unintelligent that they could not judge of John's credentials, or so dishonest that they would not declare their conviction. C.

Ver. 28. Two sons. By comparing ver. 28, 31, and 45, it will be evident that the 'two sons' represent two classes—the first, the 'publicans and harlots,' who, in their youth, had refused to

of Omar is the most interesting spot in the world. Here Melchizedek offered sacrifice; here Abraham was about to offer Isaac; here Jacob saw the ladder leading up to heaven; here was the threshing floor of Araunah, the Jeb site; here was the site of an "Altar for the burnt offering of Israel" upon which David sacrificed, and here was the altar of the temples of Solomon, Zerubbabel and Herod.

29 He<sup>j</sup> answered and said, I will not; <sup>k</sup>but afterward he repented, and went.

30 And <sup>l</sup>he came to the second, and said likewise. And he answered and said, I go, sir; and went not.

31 Whether of them twain did the will of <sup>m</sup>his father? <sup>n</sup>They say unto him, The first. Jesus saith unto them, Verily I say unto you, <sup>o</sup>That the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you.

32 For <sup>p</sup>John came unto you in the way of righteousness, <sup>q</sup>and ye believed him not; but the publicans and the harlots believed him: and ye, <sup>r</sup>when ye had seen <sup>s</sup>it, repented not afterward, <sup>t</sup>that ye might believe him.

33 ¶ Hear another parable: There was a certain householder, <sup>u</sup>which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a winepress in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, <sup>v</sup>and went into a far country:

34 And when the time of the fruit drew near, he <sup>w</sup>sent his servants to the husbandmen, that <sup>x</sup>they might receive the fruits <sup>y</sup>of it.

35 And <sup>z</sup>the husbandmen took his servants, and beat one, <sup>aa</sup>and killed another, and stoned another.

36 Again, he sent other servants more <sup>ab</sup>than the first: and they did unto them likewise.

37 But, last of all, he <sup>ac</sup>sent unto them his son, saying, They will reverence my son.

38 But <sup>ad</sup>when the husbandmen saw the son, they said among themselves, This is the heir: come, let us kill him, and let us seize on his inheritance.

39 And <sup>ae</sup>they caught him, and cast <sup>af</sup>him out of the vineyard, and slew <sup>ag</sup>him.

40 When the lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen?

41 They say unto him, <sup>ah</sup>He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and <sup>ai</sup>will let out <sup>aj</sup>his vineyard unto other husbandmen, which shall render him the fruits in their seasons.

42 Jesus saith unto them, <sup>ak</sup>Did ye never <sup>g</sup> Two classes are represented: 1. Those who simply neglected the truth. They were occupied with the world. They preferred business to religion. Whatever their occupations were, whether merchants, politicians, soldiers, literary men—they deemed them more important than the service of God. 2. Those who opposed the truth. The truth did not accord with their prejudices; it condemned their vicious habits; it tended to overthrow their tyranny; they therefore met it as open enemies, and tried to crush it by open force. #### CHAPTER XXII.

1 The parable of the marriage of the king's son. 9 The vocation of the Gentiles. 12 The punishment of him that wanted the wedding-garment. 15 Tribute ought to be paid to Caesar. 23 Christ confute the Sadducees, who questioned him touching the resurrection: 34 answereth the lawyer, which is the first and great commandment: 41 and proposeth to the Pharisees a knotty question concerning Christ.

AND Jesus answered <sup>ar</sup>and spake unto them again by parables, and said,

2 The <sup>as</sup>kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son,

3 And sent forth <sup>at</sup>his servants to call them that were bidden to the wedding: and they would not come.

7 But <sup>bd</sup>when the king heard <sup>be</sup>thereof, he was wroth: and he sent forth his armies, and destroyed those murderers, and burned up their city.

8 Then saith he to his servants, The wedding serve God—but who repented at the preaching of John, and believed in our Lord for salvation. The second, the 'chief priests and elders,' ver. 23, who, from their youth, had been professors of religion, but who, 'counting themselves righteous,' rejected 'the righteousness of God,' and denied and crucified the Lord of life and glory. C.

Ver. 44. Whosoever shall fall upon this stone (as the Jews stumbled at the humiliated condition of Christ, and so rejected him) shall be broken (rather, bruised): but on whomsoever it shall fall when the long-suffering of God comes to an end, and he rises terribly to judgment, it will grind him to powder—rather, 'he shall be driven away as chaff from a winnowing-fan.' See Ps. 1, 4). All which things were fulfilled on the Jewish nation, who were first bruised in their own land, then utterly dispersed throughout the earth. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Let me at once behold in Jesus the omniscient, the all-commanding, the temple-purifying, the miracle-working God; and the weak man, pinched with poverty and hunger! Yea, the true Messiah riding on an ass, attended with shouts of salvation in order to die for the people! But what ignorant and diversified views men have of him! And how is the church of God often corrupted, and her ordinances profaned, while they, who ought to reform others, hate to be reformed, or to hear of others more devout than themselves, or to see God perform his promises to, and glorify his Son! Yea, careless clergymen are apt to oppose every faithful administration of the truth, unless shame or fear restrain them. And the most ignorant and notorious sinners are frequently turned to the Lord and his ways, when forward professors draw back unto their everlasting perdition. But if God bestow his means of salvation upon men, he will demand their careful improvement of them. And if his ministers be contemned and persecuted, he will unchurch the persecutors at last, and put others in their room. Yea, let men trample the Redeemer under foot as they may, God will cause him to be highly exalted, and made the Connector and glory of his church. If men will not bow to the outstretched sceptre of his grace, they must, self-condemned, fearfully perish under the weight of his wrath. And awful is the prospect when faithful reproofs do but exasperate the reprov'd: and when God must make the awe of inferiors restrain the rage of persecuting superiors.

CHAPTER XXII. Ver. 1-14. The marriage-feast denotes the gospel dispensation, in which Jesus Christ, as the Bridegroom of souls, and all the rich fulness of God in him, are offered by God to sinful men. The servants are John Baptist, Christ, and his apostles and ministers, who invite and encourage men to receive the same. All things were ready when Christ had suffered, risen again, and ascended to glory, and the Holy Ghost was poured out in a plentiful and miraculous manner. The refusers and contemners of the feast, and murderers of the messengers, are the Jews, who not only rejected the offers of the gospel, but persecuted and murdered the preachers of it; and on that account their cities and temple were soon afterwards burned, themselves murdered in multitudes, their land desolated, and their constitution, in both church and state, miserably broken to pieces. Those called from the highways are the sinful Gentiles of every rank and condition, or greater and lesser sinners, who, by the preaching of the gospel, are invited and converted to Christ and his church. The man without the wedding-garment denotes hypocritical professors, who take their place as members of the church without receiving Christ and his righteousness, or being renewed in holiness after his image; and whose end will be redoubled and everlasting destruction. 20, 21. Since, by your using the Roman em-is ready, but 'they which were bidden were not worthy.

9 Go<sup>y</sup> ye therefore into the highways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage.

10 So<sup>k</sup> those servants went out into the highways, and gathered together all, as many as they found, both bad and good: and the wedding was furnished with guests.

11 And when the king 'came in to see the guests, he saw there a man which had not on a<sup>n</sup> wedding-garment:

12 And he saith unto him, 'Friend, 'how camest thou in hither, not having a wedding-garment? And he was 'speechless.

13 Then said the king to the servants, 'Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

14 For<sup>r</sup> many are called, but few are chosen.<sup>3</sup>

15 ¶ Then<sup>s</sup> went the Pharisees, and took counsel how they might entangle him in his talk.

16 And they sent out unto him their disciples, with the 'Herodians, saying, 'Master, we know that thou art true, and 'teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest thou for any man; for thou regardest not the person of men.

17 Tell<sup>r</sup> us therefore, What thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute unto Cæsar, or not?

18 But 'Jesus perceived their wickedness, and said, Why 'tempt ye me, ye hypocrites?<sup>4</sup>

19 Show me the tribute-money. And they brought unto him a penny.<sup>5</sup>

20 And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription?<sup>6</sup>

21 They say unto him, Cæsar's. Then saith he unto them, 'Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, 'and unto God the things that are God's.

22 When they had heard these words, they marvelled,<sup>c</sup> and left him, and went their way.

23 ¶ The<sup>d</sup> same day came to him the Sadducees, which say that there is no resurrection, and asked him, 24 Saying, Master, 'Moses said, If a man die, having no children, his brother shall marry his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

25 Now there were with us seven brethren:

4 Our Lord 'knew what was in man,' and, therefore, in calling the Pharisees and Herodians, who had attempted to flatter him, hypocrites, he could not fall into any mistake, nor be guilty of any rash or uncharitable judgment. Therefore, while we follow his example, in denouncing errors condemned by the Word of God, we may not always follow it in judging of hearts, which we cannot see. When, however, 'by their fruits,' we have sufficient evidence of the hypocrisy of pretenders, we are authorized by his example to denounce them by their proper names.—C.

Jesus Christ,' by others, as 'the believer's robe of personal righteousness,' while others 'see no reason for excluding either.' Now that it must include 'the righteousness of God,' which is unto and upon all them that believe,' is certain; but before it can be understood of the personal righteousness of any believer, it is necessary to inquire what 'personal righteousness,' as distinct from 'the righteousness of God,' can possibly mean. In truth, it has neither meaning nor existence. The only righteousness of a believer is the righteousness of God. The personal righteousness of a sinner, like the personal riches of a pauper, is an absolute contradiction in terms.—C.

and the first, when he had married a wife, deceased, and, having no issue, left his wife unto his brother:

26 Likewise the second also, and the third, unto the seventh.

27 And last of all the woman died also.

28 Therefore, in the resurrection, whose wife shall she be of the seven? for they all had her.

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, Ye do err, 'not knowing the scriptures, 'nor the power of God.

30 For 'in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven.

31 But as touching the resurrection of the dead, have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, saying, 32 I<sup>j</sup> am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? God is not the God of the dead, but of the living.

33 And <sup>k</sup>when the multitude heard this, they were astonished at his doctrine.

34 ¶ But<sup>l</sup> when the Pharisees had heard that he had put the Sadducees to silence, they were gathered together.

35 Then one of them, which was a lawyer, asked him a question, tempting him, and saying, 36 Master,<sup>n</sup> which is the great commandment in the law?

37 Jesus said unto him, 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart,<sup>7</sup> and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

38 This is the first and great commandment.

39 And the second is like unto it, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

40 On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.<sup>8</sup>

41 ¶ While<sup>q</sup> the Pharisees were gathered together, Jesus asked them, 42 Saying, What think ye of Christ? whose son is he? They say unto him, 'The son of David.

peror's money, ye have acknowledged yourselves his subjects, therefore ye ought, in civil concerns, to return him the tribute of that which, by the authority and protection of his government, ye receive from him; as well as in religious concerns to render unto God the homage and acknowledgments which are due to him as Lord of all. 31, 32. God's calling himself the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, after they had been long dead, plainly imported that they continued still the sons of God, waiting for the redemption of their bodies; and that their bodies, which still remained in covenant with him, as well as their souls, could not be suffered always to abide in a state of death. 40. These two commandments include the substance of the whole moral law, which is fundamental to all true religion. They include the whole natural law, which was originally written in the heart of man;

the obligation of which can never be dissolved, and which all the revelations of God are founded on, and designed to enforce. 46. The scribes and Pharisees were either ignorant or unwilling to acknowledge that the Messiah, who, in his human nature, was a descendant of David, in his divine nature was God over all.

Ver. 3. 'The carnal mind,' in its 'enmity against God,' is here represented (ver. 3, 5, 6) under four aspects:—1. They would not the human will being set up against the will of God. 2. In levity and neglect, they made light of it, ver. 5. 3. In preference of earthly to heavenly things, ver. 5, they went 'one to his farm,' &c. 4. In rebellious persecution of God's servants, ver. 6. All which things were not only exemplified by the Jews, but have continued among the Gentiles till this day. C.

Ver. 16. The Herodians were certain political partisans of Herod, to whom, as an Idumean and Sadducee, the Pharisees were directly opposed. But in opposition to Christ these extremes are made to coalesce.—Note. Thus in these very days Popery and infidelity—implicit faith and no faith—are seen to unite in determined opposition to evangelical truth! C.

Ver. 28. The object of the Sadducees is to show the absurdity of a future state, by producing what they conceive an insuperable difficulty—a difficulty which our Lord solves with a readiness that humbles their pride of intellect, though it does not soften the hardness of their heart. C.

Ver. 32. Our Lord's argument is this: You admit the being of a God—a living God—the God of living men. But God called himself the God of Abraham, &c., long after Abraham's body was dead, therefore the soul of Abraham must have been still alive, since the living God continues to acknowledge him for his servant and friend. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Infinite is the mercy of God in making a new covenant and New Testament dispensation of his grace for sinners of mankind; and that his invitations to partake of it are so unlimited, earnest, and so often repeated! Fearful then is their guilt, and dreadful their punishment, who decline his offers, persecute his ministers, or presume to be Christians without the saving power of Jesus and his grace 46 And<sup>u</sup> no man was able to answer him a word; neither durst any man, from that day forth, ask him any more questions.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Christ exhorteth the people to follow the good doctrine, not the evil examples, of the scribes and Pharisees. 5 His disciples must beware of their ambition. 13 He denounceth divers woes against their hypocrisy and blindness: 34 and prophesieth the destruction of Jerusalem.

THEN spake Jesus to the multitude, and to his disciples,

2 Saying, <sup>1</sup>The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat:<sup>2</sup>

3 All<sup>a</sup> therefore whatsoever they bid you<sup>3</sup> observe, that observe and do; <sup>b</sup>but do not ye after their works: for they say, and do not.

4 For<sup>4</sup> they bind heavy burdens, and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men's shoulders; but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers.

5 But<sup>e</sup> all their works they do for to be seen of men: <sup>d</sup>they make broad their phylacteries,<sup>5</sup> and enlarge the borders of their garments,

6 And<sup>e</sup> love the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues,

7 And greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi.<sup>6</sup>

8 But<sup>g</sup> be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren.

9 And call no man your father<sup>7</sup> upon the earth: <sup>h</sup>for one is your Father, which is in heaven.

10 Neither be ye called masters:<sup>8</sup> for one is your Master, even Christ.

11 But<sup>i</sup> he that is greatest among you, shall be your servant.

12 And<sup>j</sup> whosoever shall exalt himself, shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself, shall be exalted.

13 ¶ But woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for<sup>9</sup> ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men: for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in.

14 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye devour widows' houses,<sup>1</sup> and for a pretence make long prayer:<sup>2</sup> therefore ye shall receive the <sup>k</sup>greater damnation.

15 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, implanted in their souls. Why should we dissemble before the all-seeing Redeemer? Rather let us tremble to reflect, that all men are called to salvation, yet so few heed the call—that many, instead of believing the gospel, should occupy themselves in disputes against the truth, or endeavour to entangle its preachers. And all, but especially ministers, have great need to answer captious questions with caution; and duly to connect our duty to magistrates with that which we owe to God. And it is no wonder that men are embarrassed who are ignorant of God's power and Word.—Happy is that spiritual relation to God, which secures blessedness here and to eternity, when all the fashions and connections of this world shall be no more! But how extensive is our duty to God and to men—and how delightful to a renewed heart! Love to my God and my neighbour is the fulfilling of the law. Great is the mystery of godliness—God made manifest in the flesh! What think I of this Christ? Is he my Saviour and my ALL IN ALL? Let me then in holy diligence, in cautious prudence, and in readiness to render a reason of the hope that is in me, follow him while I live: and endeavour to turn every perplexing question into important and useful hints and inquiries for my real instruction.

CHAPTER XXIII. Ver. 32–37. Go on then in your fathers' wicked courses, persecuting and murdering me and the apostles and other ministers whom I will send to preach the gospel among you, till, by your malicious wickedness, ye have rendered the approaching ruin of your nation inevitable; and have, by your approbation of it, rendered yourselves chargeable with all the blood of righteous men shed from the founda-

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 Christ foretelleth the destruction of the temple: 3 what and how great calamities shall be before it: 29 the signs of his coming to judgment. 36 And because that day and hour is unknown, 42 we ought to watch like good servants, expecting every moment our Master's coming.

AND Jesus<sup>a</sup> went out, and departed from the temple: and his disciples came to him for to show him the buildings of the temple.

a Greek word signifying to keep or guard) are said to have originated from the literal understanding of Ex. 13. 9. They were little rolls of parchment, on which were written certain portions of the law, and were worn on the forehead or wrist of the left arm. The passages written on them were Ex. 13. 2-10, 11-16; De. 6. 4-9; 11. 13-21.—Borders. The fringes required by the law. See note on Nu. 15. 38. C.

Ver. 7. Rabbi is derived from a word first signifying great, and, by consequence, superior, master. The Jews have its origin as a personal title, no farther back than the time of the famous Hillel, or rather of his son Simeon, supposed to be the same who took the child Jesus in his arms in the temple, Lu. 2. 25-32. There were three gradations of the title—Rab, Rabbi, and Rabban—which latter title was bestowed upon no more than seven, all the descendants of Hillel—among whom were this Simeon, and Gamaliel, the instructor of Paul. C.

Ver. 23. Mint. A well-known plant, both of the field and garden, of various species, generally possessing an agreeable aromatic odour—upon account of which it was strewed on the floors of the synagogues, besides being used for culinary and medicinal purposes.—Anise. This should not have been translated anise, but dill, an umbelliferous plant, the seeds of which are used both for culinary purposes, as are the seeds of the caraway, and also as an agreeable addition to several medicines.—Cumin. Another umbelliferous plant, resembling fennel, but smaller. Its seeds have a bitterish pungent taste, accompanied with an aromatic flavour. The title of these plants was not mentioned by Moses; but the Pharisees, in proof of their righteousness by the law (see ver. 28; Ro. 10. 3, 5), insisted much upon these trifles, while the weightier matters of justice, humanity, and fidelity they frequently overlooked or violated. p These words are rendered more solemn and emphatic by the circumstances under which they were uttered. Our Lord had frequently, especially of late, taught in the temple. He had set forth the truth; he had besought, warned, and threatened. It was all in vain. The infatuated people, assembled in the temple courts professedly to worship God, would not hear God's Son. Now he turns away from the temple for ever. He would enter it no more. In words of deepest tenderness he pronounces judgment on an impenitent and infatuated people.—P.

* The most commanding view of the temple and its courts was obtained from the side of the Mount of Olives, where Jesus sat when he uttered the words of this terrible prophecy. He saw across the narrow glen of the Kidron the colossal supporting wall of the artificial platform on which the temple stood, at this point about 150 feet high. Along its summit ran the stately columns of Solomon's porch. The naos, or shrine itself, with its encircling chambers, was raised on an inner platform so as to overtop the porches, and it seems all the buildings of the city. With such a magnificent structure before their eyes, the words of Jesus must have fallen with painful force upon the ears and hearts of the disciples.—P.

2 And Jesus said unto them, See ye not all these things? verily I say unto you, There shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

3 ¶ And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?

4 And Jesus answered and said unto them, Take heed that no man deceive you.

5 For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many.

6 And ye shall hear of wars, and rumours of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet.

7 For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places.

8 All these are the beginning of sorrows.

9 Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake.

10 And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another.

11 And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many.

12 And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold.

13 But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

14 And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations: and then shall the end come.

But as there is no record of any violence having been offered to Zachariah the prophet, it seems more natural to understand the reference of Zachariah the priest, whose violent death was inflicted by a wicked king and idolatrous people, on account of his faithfulness to the worship of Jehovah. His being called the son of Barachias, instead of Jehoiada, is easily accounted for, as Barachias may have been a second name of Jehoiada. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The highest offices, in both church and state, are often filled up with the worst of men, who are apt to make others stumble at the ordinances or truths of God for their sake. Yea, they who make the greatest noise about morality and virtue, and its influence, to recommend us to God, are in general extremely destitute of it. Rigid imposers of human invention are rarely strict in their own lives. Let then the servants of Jesus Christ always endeavour to manifest their utmost humility, uprightness, and contempt of this world. Let them practise the doctrines they preach, and never attempt to lord it over their hearers or brethren in office. With what pitiful pretences do men varnish over their neglect of real godliness, their dishonesty, persecution, and murder! And fearful are the discoveries which shall be made in the last judgment! Aggravated will be their damnation who oppose the gospel and hinder others from believing it; and who pervert the oracles of God, seduce their neighbours into wickedness, neglect their hearts, varnish over their wickedness with pretences of devotion and zeal, profane the most solemn worship of God, and conduct all their religion by selfish and secular designs! Infinite is the patience of our Redeemer in long bearing with such; and great his mercy in giving them plain, timely, and frequently repeated warnings of their danger. But dreadful is the case when whole nations are at last punished for their unbelief and persecution: when Jesus' kind offers and entreaties issue in his depriving them of his ordinances, abandoning them to their own lusts, and casting them into the depths of hell! Yet such must be the end of all despisers of his grace. Let Britain hear and tremble!

CHAPTER XXIV.—Before the destruction of Jerusalem many false teachers and pretended Messiahs appeared, ver. 2, 4, 5, 11, 23-26. There were many wars, commotions, famines, pestilences, and earthquakes, ver. 6, 7. Ministers and other Christians were terribly persecuted; and much apostasy from and decay of religion ensued in many places, ver. 9-13. The gospel was preached through the Roman empire and the 20 But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the sabbath-day:<sup>1</sup>

21 For<sup>u</sup> then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be.

22 And<sup>v</sup> except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened.

23 Then<sup>r</sup> if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not.

24 For<sup>y</sup> there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it <sup>were</sup> possible, they shall deceive the very elect.

28 For<sup>d</sup> wheresoever the earease is, there will the eagles be gathered together.

<sup>8</sup> Alford's view of the meaning of this passage is worthy of note. He supposes that Matthew and Mark, writing mainly for Jews, give the inner or domestic sign of the approaching calamity—a sign which would appear within the temple; while Luke, writing for Gentiles, gives the outward state of things (Lu. 21. 20). Alford thinks, the inner sign may have been some abomination, definite and well-marked, committed in the temple by the party of the Zealots. On seeing nations adjacent, ver. 14. The Roman army invaded and laid siege to Jerusalem, and the Christians fled with the utmost haste to the mountains around Judea, ver. 15-20. That destruction was terrible, ver. 21; especially to mothers, ver. 19; threatened ruin to the whole Jewish nation, ver. 22; and was universal through the whole country, ver. 27, 28. It was foreboded by signs in the heavens, and quite dissolved the constitution of the Jewish church and state, and it occasioned terrible anguish to the carnal Jews to be thus punished by the Messiah, ver. 27-30. It took place while that very generation among whom Christ taught partly survived, ver. 32-35; and was followed by a remarkable spread of the gospel and conversion of lost sinners to Christ, ver. 30, 31. Many of the wicked Jews were preserved for the sake of children who were in their loins, and who were to descend from them after many generations, ver. 22. Ver. 27, 28 may denote the spread of the gospel among the Gentiles, and the gathering of multitudes to Jesus to feed on his flesh and blood; but rather that the Roman army, beginning at the north-east, would, with fire and sword, desolate the whole country of the Jews, and hunt out and destroy them, be where they would; 29, 30 represent the terrible appearances of Jesus' power, in destroying the Jewish church and state, while his ministers should, by the gospel trumpet, gather multitudes of sinners to him; and also his terrible appearance to judgment, while his angels shall gather together his people, and bring them to their honourable seat on his right hand. 37-41. The destruction of Jerusalem, as well as the last judgment, will take place while most men are indulging themselves in sensuality and carnal cares, and are no way provided for it; and of persons in seemingly equal danger, some will be miserably destroyed, and others graciously preserved. 42-51. Since therefore you are so uncertain of the time of this destruction and the last judgment, ye need always to be watching over your hearts and lives that ye may be ready for it, especially as great shall be the gracious and honorary reward of such as are then found faithful and diligent in their proper work; whereas, if any one become carnally secure, and indulge himself in persecuting his fellow-ministers and professors, and in immorality and profaneness, Jesus will surprise him by death or judgment, and he shall be most miserably wretched forever in hell, in company with the most detestable sinners.

Ver. 2. While Titus was besieging Jerusalem he was most anxious to preserve the temple. But when it was consumed, and the city taken, he ordered the foundations both of temple and city to be utterly razed. And the Jews themselves acknowledge that Terentius Rufus actually ploughed over the place where they stood—hereby fulfilling Mi. 3. 12. C.

not, as now, confined to Judea.—For a witness to all nations, both that Jesus was the Christ, and that the cup of Jewish iniquity was now full.—Then shall the end (of the Jewish polity) come. C.

Ver. 15. The holy place. Bloomfield understands it to mean the temple—citing, for the use of the phrase, Ac. 6. 13; 21. 38, the parallel passage, Mar. 13. 14. But the parallel passage in Lu. 21. 20 seems clearly to point to the investment of Jerusalem, and not to the time when the temple had been taken; wherefore 'the holy place' must mean 'the holy city.' See Ps. 46. 4. C.

Ver. 21. The sufferings of the Jews during the siege of Jerusalem, as detailed by Josephus, an eye-witness, are certainly without parallel in human history. A cruel enemy without—more cruel factions within—gnawing famine, and wasting pestilence! And all this horror of darkness without one gleam of relieving light, beyond the desperate, the ferocious courage with which the factions assailed one another, and defended their devoted city against their irresistible enemies. C.

Ver. 22. Shortened—by the conquest of the city, before pestilence had acquired more malignity, and the Romans had been provoked to exterminate rather than to enslave. 1,100,000 Jews perished miserably in the siege, besides the uncounted multitudes destroyed in other cities.—For the elect's sake. That 'remnant,' according to the election of grace, Ro. 11. 5, for whose sake the sparing mercy of God is extended to a rebellious generation. C.

Ver. 30. Coming in the clouds. The import of this coming may be gathered from Is. 26. 21; 35. 4; 66. 15, 16; Mal. 3. 1, 2, 3, in all which it is a coming by national judgments upon them that forget God. C.

Ver. 31. Angels. Literally, messengers, whether human or spiritual. These angels are, in the commencement of the prophetic series, his ministers, with the gospel trumpet warning men to flee from the wrath to come, Eze. 33. 7, gathering the elect into one in Christ Jesus, Ep. 1. 10. But that they and their work may be also typical of other angels, and another gathering to another and greater judgment, is not to be denied. C.

46 Blessed<sup>a</sup> is that servant, whom his lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing.

47 Verily<sup>t</sup> I say unto you, that he shall make him ruler over all his goods.

48 But<sup>u</sup> and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming;

49 And shall begin<sup>v</sup> to smite his fellow-servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken:

50 The<sup>w</sup> lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of,

51 And shall cut him asunder,<sup>7</sup> and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 The parable of the ten virgins, 14 and of the talents. 31 Also the description of the last judgment.

THEN shall<sup>a</sup> the<sup>b</sup> kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten<sup>c</sup> virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth<sup>d</sup> to meet the bridegroom.

2 And<sup>e</sup> five of them were wise, and five<sup>f</sup> were foolish.

3 They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them:

4 But<sup>h</sup> the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps.

5 While<sup>i</sup> the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered<sup>2</sup> and slept.

6 And<sup>j</sup> at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh; <sup>k</sup>go ye out to meet him.<sup>3</sup>

7 Then<sup>l</sup> all those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps.

8 And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil; for<sup>m</sup> our lamps are gone out.<sup>4</sup>

9 But the wise answered, saying, Not so; lest there be not enough for us and you: but go ye rather to<sup>n</sup> them that sell, and buy for yourselves.

10 And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage: and the door was shut.

Ver. 34. This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled. The subjunction of this statement immediately after the prophecy by three evangelists (see Mar. 13. 30; Lu. 21. 25) puts the idea of any dislocation of the narrative totally out of the question. Nor is it possible, upon any Scripture authority, to interpret 'this generation' of the Jewish nation, or the Christian church, in continuance. Wherefore the conclusion seems inevitable that the previous prophecy describes directly the destruction of Jerusalem and the Jewish state, even should that be considered typical of other and greater events. C.

Ver. 36. Knoweth no man, &c. Consequently, not even 'the Son of man' as such; for being truly man, He. 1. 14, 16, 17, he was as such ignorant of all future events but such as the Father was pleased to reveal to him; see Ac. 1. 7. Our Lord, having 'two distinct natures in one person,' could truly speak of himself under the character of either, or of both, as united in one person, just as, with perfect truth, we can speak of ourselves and say, in respect of one nature (the body), 'we shall die,' and, in respect of another nature (the soul), 'we shall never die;' yet, in all this, each man so constituted is one person. C.

Ver. 40, 41. From comparing ver. 40 and 41 with 43, it will be evident that the coming foretold in ver. 39 is a coming to national judgment. May not the meaning therefore of ver. 40 and 41 be elicited thus:—1. The judgment, sudden and unexpected as the flood of Noe, will sweep over the fields, or rural districts, which had escaped in former judgments, as well as over the cities, which had hitherto been the principal scenes of destruction; see 2 Ki. 24. 10–14; 25. 11, 12. 2. It will extend to the female as well as to the male population, which is not generally the case even in the most sanguinary wars. 3. It will not be confined to the rich, the political, and military classes, but will extend to the poor in the pursuit of the most peaceful avocations. 4. The two descriptions it seems impossible to refer, as some do, to the final judgment, in which 'all nations' are to be gathered before the Son of man; whereas in these descriptions 'one is taken and another left,' which will not accord with ch. 25. 46, in which all are alike judged according to their works. 5. The general use of παραλαμβάνω in Matthew is to 'take along with' the taker; see Mat. 4. 5, 8; 12. 45; 17. 1. Does not the prophecy therefore foretell that fully one-half of the most peaceable male and female population will be taken away captive by their invaders, while the remainder shall be left friendless and destitute, the victims of poverty and pestilence? C.

REFLECTIONS.—Even real saints are often puffed up with the external and quickly fading glories of religion. But how manifest is the omniscience of our Redeemer, who could so circumstantially foretell the events which befell the Jews and the nations around! And wonderfully has God proved him the Messiah by fulfilling his predictions upon his opposers. Yea, for the confirmation of our faith, Josephus, one of them, was almost miraculously saved, and inclined to give us the history of the fulfilment. Novelty in religion are always to be suspected; and inconceivable are the arts by which Satan and his instruments labour to deceive men, pervert the gospel, and dishonour Christ. But great is the mercy that leads God to watch over and guide his people. What an awful scene of misery hath sin made our earth! Even men, more savage than ravenous

were generally conducted as follows:—
After the marriage had been solemnized, the bridegroom, in a procession as brilliant as his circumstances permitted, conducted the bride to his dwelling, where all his young female friends were assembled, and waited with lamps, prepared to go out and receive her. After which the whole train entered the house together.
When the train had entered the bridegroom's house, the doors were shut to exclude strangers.
The marriage customs of the modern identical with those above described, and 7 The principle or moral of this parable is identical with that of the preceding—the necessity for continuous watchfulness and activity on the part of the Christian. In the former the neglect arose from thoughtlessness

—Christian duty was considered so easy that the future was not cared for. In this parable the sin sprang from another cause—discontent.
Christian duty was considered too hard,
and was abandoned,
as something beyond the reach of ordinary effort.—P.

11 Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us.

12 But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not.<sup>5</sup>

13 Watch<sup>t</sup> therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh.

14 ¶ For<sup>u</sup> the kingdom of heaven<sup>6</sup> is as a man travelling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods.<sup>7</sup>

15 And unto one he gave five<sup>8</sup> talents,<sup>9</sup> to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability; and straightway took his journey.

16 Then he that had received the five talents went and traded with the same, and made them other five talents.

17 And likewise he that had received two, he also gained other two.

18 But he that had received one, went and digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money.

19 After<sup>v</sup> a long time, the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them.

20 And so he that had received five talents, came and brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents; behold, I have gained beside them five talents more.

21 His lord said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

22 He also that had received two talents, came, and said, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents: behold, I have gained two other talents beside them.

23 His lord said unto him, Well done, good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

31 ¶ When<sup>o</sup> the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory:<sup>5</sup>

32 And before him <sup>r</sup>shall be gathered all nations;<sup>6</sup> and he shall separate them one from another,<sup>7</sup> as a <sup>s</sup>shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats:

36 Naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me.

37 Then shall the righteous answer him,

sequent parable, may have some relation to the time of Christ's coming to destroy the Jewish nation, but especially to his coming to the last judgment. As the Jews had ordinarily their weddings at night, and seldom fewer than ten bridesmaids, that custom is here alluded to. Christ, who betroths and unites sinners to himself in the day of his power, is the glorious bridegroom. His tarrying denotes his deferring the Jewish destruction, and death, and the last judgment till the due season. His coming at midnight, and with a great cry, denotes how unexpected and alarming his coming is, in common calamities, at death or judgment. The ten virgins denote multitudes of professing and apparently real Christians. Their slumbering and sleeping denote their common sloth and security while Christ withdraws his presence. The foolish virgins, who had only lamps, but no oil in them, represent nominal Christians, who have a profession of gospel truth, but no real grace; and who, when awakened by death or judgment, shall find their profession come to nothing: gladly then would they be in the condition of sincere Christians, and derive help from them; but their cares of salvation will be then too late, and they themselves shall be eternally excluded from fellowship with Christ. The wise virgins are true believers, whose external profession of Christ arises from real grace in their hearts, and who are, notwithstanding occasional sloth and slumberings, in a habitual readiness to meet with Christ, in death or judgment, upon his call; these, though they have no grace or good works to be imparted to others, shall be graciously admitted to eternal fellowship with him in the heavenly mansions. 14-30. The Master is Christ, who, in his ascension, travelled into a far country, who bestows gifts and graces on ministers and people, and will return at the last day to require an account of their improvement of them. The servants are ministers and people. The talents are offices, gifts, and opportunities, given by Christ to men in different degrees, for the good of the church, to be improved for his glory, and to be accounted for at the last day. Such as improve what they have received, whether more or less, in a faithful and diligent manner, shall be graciously rewarded. But such as, through unbelief of God's kindness and mercy, neglect to improve their gifts, shall at last be deprived of them, and undone for their abuse of them. 32, 33. He will fully and exactly separate the righteous from the wicked, never more to be mixed. The former, or those who accepted Christ as their Savior and throughout all their lives walked in him as they received him, he will honourably set at his right hand in the air; but the latter will be forever cast out, dishonoured and disgraced as filthy and abominable creatures, who loved, lived, and died in their sins. 34-40. They are called to receive the kingdom, not as any proper reward of their works, but as the inheritance to which they are entitled as faithful children of a gracious God through faith. Their works are not mentioned as grounds of the sentence, but as proofs that they are God's children, who love the brethren. Their objection denotes their viewing whatever they did as unworthy of so honourable a reward. 41-45. They, in sinning, departed from God and followed the devil. Now their punishment is answerable. Their want of charity to the saints is at once a mark of their being full of unbelief and haters of Christ and his people, and also a ground of their fearful sentence.

Ver. 29. For unto every one that hath (valued his privileges and employed his means) shall be given: but from him that hath not (employed nor valued them) shall be taken away that which he (now) hath.—Note, Do these talents represent grace? and, if so, then may not a believer fall from grace? The answer is scriptural:—the believer is 'born again, not of corruptible, but of incorruptible seed,' 1 Pe. 1. 23. Of his sheep, Jesus says, 'I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish,' Jn. 10. 28. Therefore these talents represent not inward grace, but the outward means of grace, the various privileges and ordinances of the Christian church. C.

Ver. 35, 36. Our Lord here enumerates six heads, under some one of which every possible form of human misery may be found. Hunger—thirst—a stranger—nakedness—sickness—imprisonment: one, as it were, for each day of the labour and sorrow introduced by the first transgression; and for which the knowledge of Christ crucified, risen, reigning, interceding, and coming again, can afford the only remedy.—Note, The introductory for, ver. 35, cannot be tortured, contrary to the uniform testimony of Scripture, into any proof that the entrance into 'the kingdom prepared' was purchased or deserved by the merit of the 'good works' enumerated. See De. 9. 4-6; Mat. 1. 21; 26. 28; Ro. 3. 20, 23, 28; Ep. 2. 8, 9; 2 Ti. 1. 9, &c., in which every stream of good, whether temporal or spiritual, is traced to the fountain of sovereign mercy alone. But the great purpose of final judgment being first to exhibit Christ in glory, and secondly to explain and vindicate the equity of the divine government, the 'fruit of the Spirit' is displayed in all its beauty and variety, as the evidence that the Judge decides not upon any principle of favouritism, but in righteousness; and bestows his rewards upon none but such as have been 'made meet for the inheritance of the saints in light.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is absurd to esteem any as Christians who have not the appearance of real saintship. And inestimable is the worth of real grace exercised in the heart by a new creation in Christ. It makes a wide difference between true believers and mere nominal professors. Safe is their meeting with Christ, and certain their admission to glory, who have it: but dreadful their exclusion from Christ, and deep their sorrow in hell, who die without it! No intercession of saints, no mercy, can save them. In diversified forms and degrees Jesus bestows gifts, offices, and opportunities on men for the service of his church. And he will take an exact account of the improvement. Happy are they who, with diligence, use whatever they receive to his glory; inexpressibly great shall be their honour and their reward: but miserable are they who, through unbelieving hard thoughts of God, take up with a mere hypocritical profession. Every plea of innocence, prudence, or of wonted assistances, will issue in their confusion.—How certain—how sudden—how awful—how glorious—will be the appearance of Jesus to judgment: exact and final shall be his separation of the righteous and wicked; and impartial his trial of human works. Gracious and heart-ravishing will be his last invitation to saints: high his regard to them, and every kindness showed to them! But awful indeed his dismissal of sinners from him, whom they now so hate and condemn. And how fixed—how important—how lasting—is men's future state! May these awful, these eternal realities, sink deep into my heart!

CHAPTER XXVI. Ver. 26-28. Christ conjoined the passover and supper to intimate that the former, having been long a type, should now be fulfilled in his death; and that the other should succeed as a memorial of his finished sufferings till the end of the world. The bread represents him as God-man, chosen, appointed, and furnished by his Father, and suffering unto death for the redemption of his people. The wine represents his fulfilling all righteousness for the securing and bestowing all promised spiritual blessings, particularly the full remission of sins to his faithful followers. 29. I will never more feast with you in this manner, never more so indulge you with my bodily presence; but instead thereof, will hold fellowship with you in a far more spiritual and comfortable manner in the gospel dispensation, and especially in the heavenly state.

Ver. 2. Betrayed. Rather, 'Is to be betrayed.' Bloomfield. —More literally, 'delivered up.' C.

Ver. 7. Whether this woman was Mary the sister of Lazarus, mentioned Jn. 12. 3, and whether there were two anointings, one of the head, and another of the feet, has been matter of deep question. Lightfoot, Doddridge, Gill, Guyse, &c., may be consulted for the different views and arguments. The more probable opinion seems that of one anointing—the different circumstances being related by different historians, each, as moved by the Holy Spirit, filling up some circumstance omitted by the other. C.

Ver. 11. But me ye have not always. Therefore the Popish figment of transubstantiation cannot be true; for the wafer which it asserts to be the very body, and blood, and soul, and divinity of Christ, the Romanists have always with them. C.

Ver. 14. Then—or rather, 'about that time' The cupidity of Judas being probably excited by what he considered the useless waste of so much valuable ointment.—Note, Evil feelings are often stirred up by the sight of what is good. Let believers watch and pray that they enter not into this temptation. C.

Ver. 15. Thirty pieces of silver. Most probably thirty shekels—about £3, 15s.—the price of a slave accidentally torn by a beast, see Ex. 21. 32. 'A goodly price at which they valued him!' But, alas! alas! how often is he sold again, and 'crucified afresh' for a far inferior price! 'Be not high-minded, but fear;' and 'let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall.' C.

Ver. 21. As they did eat. Whether our Lord did eat the passover has been matter of serious debate. The course of the narrative in this chapter is clearly in favour of his eating it (see also Lu. 22. 14). But then, in Jn. 18. 28, when our Lord was already a prisoner, the Jews, it appears, had yet to eat the passover. The solution of this difficulty arises from recollecting that the passover was to commence with first full moon of the month Nisan. But as this day was settled, not by astronomical calculation, but by the actual appearance of the new moon, a difference might readily arise with regard to the exact day on which the feast should commence. And as the Pharisees and Sadducees differed on almost every other point, it is most probable they would differ upon this likewise. And thus our Lord might eat saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink?

38 When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee?

39 Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee?

40 And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.

41 Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels:

42 For<sup>e</sup> I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink:

43 I was a stranger, and ye took me not in: naked, and ye clothed me not: sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not.

44 Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee?

45 Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me.

46 And<sup>z</sup> these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal.<sup>8</sup>

CHAPTER XXVI.

3 The rulers conspire against Christ. 6 The woman anointeth his feet. 14 Judas selleth him. 17 Christ eateth the passover: 26 instituteth his holy supper: 36 prayeth in the garden: 47 and being betrayed with a kiss, 57 is carried to Caiaphas, 69 and denied of Peter.

AND it<sup>a</sup> came to pass, when Jesus had finished all these sayings, he said unto his disciples,

2 Ye<sup>b</sup> know that after two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of man is betrayed to be crucified.

3 ¶ Then<sup>c</sup> assembled together the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders of the people, unto the palace of the high-priest, who was called Caiaphas,

4 And consulted that they might take Jesus by subtilty, and kill him.

5 But they said, "Not on the feast-day,<sup>1</sup> lest there be an uproar among the people.

7 There came unto him a woman having an alabaster-box of very precious ointment, and poured it on his head, as he sat at meat.

8 But when his disciples saw it, they had indignation,<sup>2</sup> saying, To what purpose is this waste?

9 For this ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor.

<sup>8</sup> The Greek word which indicates the duration both of the curse and the reward is the same; though in the first clause it is rendered 'everlasting,' and in the second 'eternal.' This difference in the English version is unfortunate. It would seem to favour the idea that while the reward is eternal, the punishment may not be so. The Greek favours no such idea. If the reward be eternal, so must the punishment be.—P.

See Ex. 12. 6. Le. 23. 5. Nothing can be clearer than that our Lord and his disciples sat down to eat the passover; and the following verse proceeds to describe what occurred 'as they did eat.' However the apparently discordant statements of the evangelists are to be reconciled, the plain narrative of Matthew cannot be twisted into conformity with any theory that our Lord did not eat the passover. For a solution of the difficulty see notes on Jn. 13. 29 and 18. 28.—P.

† These words are very suggestive, they carry forward the joys and blessings of this solemn ordinance from earth to heaven. 'The Lord's Supper,' Thiersch says, 'points not only to the past, but to the future also. It has not only a commemorative, but also a prophetic meaning. In it we have not only to show forth the Lord's death until he come, but we have also to think of the time when he shall come to celebrate his holy supper with his own, new, in his kingdom of glory. Every celebration of the Lord's Supper is a foretaste and prophetic anticipation of the great marriage supper which is prepared for the church at the second appearing of Christ. This import of the sacrament is declared in the words, "I <sup>n</sup> 'The first of unleavened bread' was Thursday, the 14th of Nisan. On that day the Jews put away all leaven out of their houses, and killed the paschal lamb. The lamb was not eaten till after sunset, when, according to the Jewish mode of reckoning, the 15th day began. Their day (of 24 hours) began at sunset; but as the 24 hours was divided into two parts, the one called night, the other day, we often find the word day applied to the latter alone. It was on this 14th the disciples prepared for the passover.—P.

<sup>7</sup> The parallel passage in Mar. 14. 20 is substantially the same; but John (13. 26), whose narrative is much more minute, thus writes: 'He it is to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped.' I can see no contradiction, no real discrepancy in the two accounts. Jesus may have used both expressions, following up the more general recorded by Matthew, with the more specific recorded by John. He may have said, 'He that dippeth his hand with me in the dish—he to whom I shall give a sop when I have dipped—the same shall betray me.' Jesus and Judas dipped together; Jesus on dipping presented his morsel to Judas, a thing of common occurrence at an eastern banquet. John, who was close to Jesus, heard and saw all.—P.

literal body. But if so, surely 'the cup' becomes 'the new testament,' see 1 Co. 11. 25, for both are equally asserted. But such conversion of the cup the Romanist denies; therefore, with equally valid reason, such conversion of the bread the Protestant rejects.

THE MOUNT OF OFFENSE—WHERE CHRIST WAS BETRAYED. [MATTHEW, xxvi: 1, 4.]—The Mount of Offense is south of the Mount of Olives, and east of the hill of Evil Counsel. It bears witness of the perfidy of Judas Iscariot. It is wonderful how every event connected with the trial and death and resurrection of our Lord has found in the neighborhood of Jerusalem some spot, or hill or monument to commemorate it. The chief interest about Jerusalem to-day is the fact that it forms a kind of monument or concrete expression of the awful tragedy which ended in the crucifixion of Jesus Christ. When one goes to Paris now, it is of Napoleon he is reminded,<sup>4</sup> when he goes to Edinburgh it is of Sir Walter Scott, but in Jerusalem everything speaks of Christ. Every valley, every mountain reminds us of Him.

day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom.

30 ¶ And when they had sung an hymn,<sup>2</sup> they<sup>c</sup> went out into the mount of Olives.

31 Then saith Jesus unto them, <sup>d</sup>All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, <sup>e</sup>I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad.

32 But after I am risen again, <sup>f</sup>I will go before you into Galilee.

33 Peter<sup>h</sup> answered and said unto him, Though all men shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended.

34 Jesus said unto him, <sup>i</sup>Verily I say unto thee, That this night, before the cock crow,<sup>3</sup> thou shalt deny me thrice.

35 Peter said unto him, <sup>j</sup>Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee. <sup>k</sup>Like-wise also said all the disciples.

36 ¶ Then<sup>l</sup> cometh Jesus with them unto a place called Gethsemane,<sup>4</sup> and saith unto the disciples, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder.

37 And<sup>n</sup> he took with him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee, and began to be <sup>o</sup>sorrowful and very heavy.<sup>5</sup>

38 Then saith he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and <sup>p</sup>watch with me.

39 And he went a little further, and <sup>q</sup>fell on his face, and prayed, saying, <sup>r</sup>O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me! nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt.

40 And he cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, What! could ye not watch with me one hour?

41 Watch,<sup>s</sup> and pray, that ye enter not into temptation; <sup>t</sup>the spirit indeed is willing,<sup>6</sup> but the flesh is weak.

42 He<sup>u</sup> went away again the second time, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done.

43 And he came and found them asleep again: for their eyes were heavy.

Jerusalem. The tor-about 200 yards from the city-wall. Immediately beyond it rises the steep side of Olivet; and on the lower slope of that hill, the garden of 'the oil-press' (such is the meaning of Gethsemane) must

It had been a fa-

<sup>ak</sup> It is remarkable to find our Lord under such circumstances speaking of angels. His own power as God was supreme. He frequently pressed this truth on his disciples. Why then speak of angels at all, and not simply declare his own omnipotence? The reason seems to be, that in the mystery of the divine government of this world angels are the regularly constituted ministers for executing God's plans in relation to the whole church.

Angels announced the Messiah's advent, counselled the flight into Egypt, ministered to him in the wilderness; in Gethsemane an angel strengthened him; angels were present at his resurrection and ascension.—P.

44 And he left them, and went away again, and <sup>v</sup>prayed the third time, saying the same words.

45 Then cometh he to his disciples, and saith unto them, <sup>w</sup>Sleep on now, and take your rest; <sup>x</sup>behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

46 Rise, let us be going: behold, he is at hand that doth betray me.

47 ¶ And <sup>y</sup>while he yet spake, lo, Judas, one of the twelve, came, and with him a great multitude, with swords and staves, from the chief priests and elders of the people.

48 Now<sup>a</sup> he that betrayed him gave them a sign, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he: hold him fast.

49 And forthwith he came to Jesus, and said, Hail, Master; and kissed him.

50 And Jesus said unto him, Friend,<sup>7</sup> wherefore art thou come? Then came they and <sup>z</sup>laid hands on Jesus, and took him.

51 ¶ And, behold, <sup>aa</sup>one of them which were with Jesus stretched out his hand, and drew his sword, and struck a servant of the high-priest's, and smote off his ear.

52 Then said Jesus unto him, <sup>ab</sup>Put up again thy sword into his place: <sup>ac</sup>for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword.

53 Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and <sup>ad</sup>he shall presently give me more than twelve legions<sup>8</sup> of angels?<sup>9</sup>

54 But how then <sup>ae</sup>shall the scriptures be fulfilled, that thus it must be?

55 In that same hour said Jesus to the multitudes, Are ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and staves for to take me? I sat daily with you teaching in the temple, and ye laid no hold on me.

56 But all this was done, <sup>af</sup>that the scriptures of the prophets might be <sup>ag</sup>fulfilled. <sup>ah</sup>Then all the disciples forsook him, and fled.

57 ¶ And<sup>k</sup> they that had laid hold on Jesus led him away to Caiaphas the high-priest, where the scribes and the elders were assembled.

And in this he agrees with the apostle Paul, who thrice declares that what the communicant eats is simply bread, 1 Co. 11. 26-28. Besides, as our Lord says, Jn. 15. 5, 'I am the vine, ye are the branches'—and yet cannot mean that he was changed into a vine, or his disciples into branches, but merely that he was like the vine, while they were like the branches—so, when he says of bread, 'This is my body,' he means, as in the case of the vine, 'this is (like) my body.' For the use of the verb to be, in which it is put for 'to be like, represent, or signify, or answer to,' see Da. 7. 23; 1 Co. 10. 4; Ga. 4. 24, 25. But if the Romanist still repeat, 'This is my body,' the Protestant replies, 'And so indeed it is—it is his body to faith;' for while sense perceives and uses bread, faith discerns and partakes of 'his body and blood, with all their benefits, to spiritual nourishment and growth in grace.' C.

Ver. 45. Sleep on now. This has been termed 'an ironical reproof;' but surely such a figure is totally unbecoming the unequalled solemnity of the occasion. Is not the meaning this? I left you to watch, but the necessity of it being now past, sleep on, and forget both my sorrows and your own, for the few moments of my time that are yet unexpired. C.

Ver. 50. Friend. Rather, Companion; though as a title, the word Friend, that is, one that has been so named, might still be justly applied to the ungrateful and faithless traitor. C.

Ver. 52. This statement, if taken in a literal and unlimited sense, is not strictly accurate—for many take the sword who do not perish by it. The meaning must therefore be sought thus: 1. The sword is a general name for all weapons and means of warfare. 2. The warfare in the case is a private opposition to public authority. 3. It is a warfare undertaken rashly, and re-vengefully, in defence of or for propagation of religion. Now all who thus take, and continue to hold the sword, shall finally perish by it, either literally, as the Jews soon after did; or spiritually, by making shipwreck of their holy faith. C.

Ver. 61. To speak against the temple was a capital offence, Je. 26. 11, 12, 15, 24, according to the Jewish common law—which, as is evident, both from the case of Jeremiah and of our Lord, meant little else than any decision that pleased the rulers, or any ebullition of the popular will. C.

Ver. 74. To curse. 'To anathematize himself,' to imprecate judgments upon himself, if his denial were untrue.—To swear. To swear by the name of God. So deep, alas! was the fall of Peter! But, oh! what a scale does it furnish whereon poor back-sliding sinners may measure out the mercy and love of God!—Cock. The rabbinical writers assert that, 'on account of the holy things,' no cocks were kept in Jerusalem; and therefore it has been asserted that the narrative is untrue, as Peter could not hear what the city did not contain. Let the rabbinical account be admitted for true, so far as Jewish authority extended, and will it follow that no Roman soldier kept a cock for his own pleasure or profit? or will it follow that Peter, from the house of Caiaphas, adjoining the city wall, could not hear one from a distance in the country, where no one has questioned the bird's existence? C.

REFLECTIONS.—Unbounded was the foreknowledge of our Redeemer, and astonishing his delight in the view of his sufferings for the world. Great is his care to vindicate all good conduct, to honour all that honour him, and to direct all to opportunities of doing good to their brethren; and infinite his regard to his Father's oracles and ordinances and the salvation of the world. In view of death—a dreadful death—he joins believers in the seals of the promise, and appoints them a permanent feast for spiritual nourishment: representing all his labours of love, and sealing and applying his person and righteousness to their soul! And faithful and reasonable were his warnings against temptation.—How heavy the weight of our sins lay on him! How fearful his agonies! how fervent his prayers! Yet great was his submission to his Father's will: marvellous his readiness to suffer, and kind his rebukes even to the worst!—But, alas! how was he hated by men—plotted against without cause—envied of his honours—betrayed for a trifle—shamefully discredited and contradicted, even by his saints—presumptuously apprehended—despitefully abused—and basely denied, after the most solemn warning! Let me learn to watch and pray against temptation. I know not whether Satan may drag or my corruption drive me. Let me always honour Jesus whatever be the expense; be liberal to his poor, and always given

ROCK UPON WHICH JESUS LEANED. [MATT., xxvi : 36.]—"Then cometh Jesus with them unto a place called Gethsemane, and saith unto the disciples, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder."—Matt., xxvi : 36. After rising from this last prayer tired and heart-broken it is thought that Jesus leaned upon the rock illustrated in the above picture for a moment's rest. Standing here in the month of April, 1894, and seeing hundreds of Russian pilgrims, nothing I had ever witnessed before was so deeply pathetic as to see those poor people bend and kiss this rock. The truth is that the rock is actually being kissed away by the lips of devoted saints. The greatest wonder of all the ages is the depth of affection in the heart of the human race for Jesus Christ. A wonder great as His divinity is the fact that people worship Him, and love Him.

58 But Peter followed him afar off, unto the high-priest's palace, and went in, and sat with the servants, to see the end.

59 Now the chief priests, and elders, and all the council, sought false witness against Jesus, to put him to death;

60 But<sup>o</sup> found none: yea, though many false witnesses came, yet found they none.<sup>2</sup> At the last came two false witnesses, 61 And said, This fellow said, I am able to destroy the temple of God, and to build it in three days.

62 And the high-priest arose, and said unto him, Answerest thou nothing? What is it which these witness against thee?

63 But Jesus held his peace. And the high-priest answered and said unto him, I adjure<sup>r</sup> thee by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be<sup>s</sup> the Christ, the Son of God.

64 Jesus saith unto him, Thou<sup>3</sup> hast said:<sup>4</sup> nevertheless<sup>5</sup> I say unto you, Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

65 Then<sup>u</sup> the high-priest rent his clothes, saying, He hath spoken blasphemy; what further need have we of witnesses? behold, now ye have heard his blasphemy.

66 What think ye? They answered and said, He<sup>v</sup> is guilty of death.

67 Then<sup>x</sup> did they spit in his face, and buffeted<sup>6</sup> him; and others smote him with the palms of their hands,<sup>7</sup>

68 Saying,<sup>y</sup> Prophecy unto us, thou Christ, who is he that smote thee?

69 ¶ Now<sup>z</sup> Peter sat without in the palace: and a damsel came unto him, saying, Thou also wast with Jesus<sup>a</sup> of Galilee.

70 But he denied before them all, saying, I know not what thou sayest.

71 And when he was gone out into the porch, another maid saw him, and said unto them that were there, This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth.

72 And again he denied with an oath, I do not know the man.

73 And after a while came unto him they that stood by, and said to Peter, Surely thou also art one of them; for thy speech bewrayeth thee.

74 Then<sup>d</sup> began he to curse and to swear, saying, I know not the man. And immediately the cock crew.

75 And Peter remembered the word of Jesus,

* The first difficulty connected with this passage is that the quotation is ascribed to Jeremiah, while it is only found in Zechariah. The following facts will, I think, account for this. Zechariah (ch. 11, 12, 13) evidently refers to the potter of Jeremiah (ch. xviii. xix.), and the predictions illustrated by the potter's vessel. Zechariah's meaning is, Let these pieces of silver become, like the potter's vessel of Jeremiah, the symbols of the people's doom. They are the price of innocent blood—blood that must yet draw down vengeance more terrible than that shed of old in the valley of Tophet; let them therefore be identified with the potter's field, the place polluted by crime, as a warning that punishment is yet to come. Such was the import of the prediction, and it affords an explanation of the evangelist's reference to Jeremiah. He saw the connection between the prediction in Zechariah and the earlier one in Jeremiah; and he regarded the former as a more specific application of the latter. A second difficulty is in the words of the quotation. They differ considerably from those in the original Hebrew. In the Hebrew the whole assumes the form of a transaction between the Lord and the prophet, who per-sonates the Messiah; in the Greek the people are represented as doing all. The change is made to adapt the words to the historical fulfilment—the same leading ideas being developed in both.—P.

A.M. cir. 4037.
A.D. cir. 33.

4 On comparing this narrative with the parallel passages in Mar. 14. 66-72; Lu. 22. 55-62; and Jn. 18. 17-27, we find considerable verbal differences. The difficulties hence arising may be satisfactorily solved by considering, 1st. That Peter disputed at some considerable length with those who charged him with being a follower of Jesus. 2d. That one of the evangelists would record one part of the conversation, and another another. Alford rightly remarks: 'I do not see that we are obliged to limit the narrative to three sentences from Peter's mouth, each expressing a denial, and no more. On three occasions during the night he was recognized; on three occasions he was a denier of his Lord. Such a statement may well embrace reiterated expressions of recognition, and reiterated and importunate denials on each occasion.'—P.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Christ is delivered bound to Pilate. 3 Judas hangeth himself. 19 Pilate, admonished of his wife, 24 washeth his hands: 26 and looseth Barabbas. 29 Christ is crowned with thorns, 34 crucified, 40 reviled, 50 dieth, and is buried: 66 his sepulchre is sealed, and a watch set over it.

WHEN the morning was come,<sup>1</sup> all<sup>a</sup> the chief priests and elders of the people took counsel against Jesus to put him to death.

2 And when they had bound him, they led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor.<sup>2</sup>

3 ¶ Then<sup>c</sup> Judas, which had betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, repented himself,<sup>3</sup> and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders,

4 Saying, I have sinned, in that I have betrayed the innocent blood. And they said, What is that to us? see thou to that.

5 And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed, and went and hanged himself.

6 And the chief priests took the silver pieces, and said, It is not lawful for to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood.

7 And they took counsel, and bought with them the potter's field, to bury strangers in.

8 Wherefore that field was called, The field of blood, unto this day.

9 Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, And they took the thirty pieces of silver, the price of him that was valued, whom they of the children of Israel did value;<sup>4</sup>

10 And gave them for the potter's field, as the Lord appointed me.<sup>5</sup>

11 ¶ And<sup>j</sup> Jesus stood before the governor: and the governor asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And Jesus said unto him, Thou sayest.<sup>6</sup>

12 And<sup>k</sup> when he was accused of the chief priests and elders, he answered nothing.

13 Then said Pilate unto him, Hearest thou not how many things they witness against thee?

14 And he answered him to never a word; inasmuch that the governor marvelled greatly.

15 ¶ Now<sup>n</sup> at that feast the governor was wont to release unto the people a prisoner, whom they would.

16 And<sup>o</sup> they had then a notable prisoner, called Barabbas.

to embrace his preached gospel. And, on his demand, gladly let me receive him into my house and heart. A deep sense of my sinfulness should make me always ready to suspect the worst of myself. If I indulge self-confidence, if I disregard a Saviour's warning, I shall quickly fall, fearfully fall, before the slightest temptations. If I indulge one sin, it will quickly plunge me into a worse. If then I have been overtaken in a fault, let me quickly and bitterly repent. It is not the greatness or number of my sins that can ruin me, but my obstinate impenitence and unbelief.

CHAPTER XXVII.—Crucifixion was the most cruel, shameful, and cursed death that could be devised: was not at all used by the Jews; and by the Romans inflicted only upon slaves, and the basest of the people, who were capital offenders. The person was nailed to the cross as it lay upon the ground, through each hand, extended to its utmost stretch, and through both the feet together; then the cross was erected, and the foot of it, with a violent thrust which disjoined the whole body of the sufferer, placed into a hole in the ground prepared to receive it. The whole weight of the body thus hung upon the nails, which went through the hands and feet till the person expired by mere dint of terrible pain.

Ver. 9. By Jeremy. This prophecy is not found in Jeremiah,

THE FIELD OF BLOOD—NOW A PLACE OF TOMBS AND A RESORT FOR LEPERS.
[MATT., xxvii: 6, 7, 8.]—"And the chief priest took the silver pieces and said, it is not lawful for to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood, and they took counsel and bought with them the potter's field to bury strangers in. Wherefore that field was called the field of blood unto this day."—Matt., xxvii: 6, 7, 8.

And so we have with us still the same field a little way outside the walls of Jerusalem. At the bottom of this field, or hill, is the Valley of Hinnom, where children in ancient times were sacrificed to Moloch. It was called the place of fire, and sometimes Gehenna. It is now a place of tombs and a resort for lepers. The earliest mention of the Valley of Hinnom is in Josh., 15-8.

17 Therefore, when they were gathered together, Pilate said unto them, "Whom will ye that I release unto you? Barabbas, or Jesus which is called Christ?"

18 For he knew that for envy they had delivered him.

19 ¶ When he was set down on the judgment-seat, his wife sent unto him, saying, Have thou nothing to do with that just man; for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him.

20 ¶ But the chief priests and elders persuaded the multitude that they should ask Barabbas, and destroy Jesus.

21 The governor answered and said unto them, Whether of the twain will ye that I release unto you? They said, Barabbas.

22 Pilate saith unto them, What shall I do then with Jesus, which is called Christ? "They all say unto him, Let him be crucified."

23 And the governor said, Why, what evil hath he done? But they cried out the more, saying, "Let him be crucified."

24 When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person: see ye to it.

25 Then answered all the people, and said, His blood be on us, and on our children.<sup>8</sup>

26 Then released he Barabbas unto them: and when he had scourged Jesus, he delivered him to be crucified.

27 ¶ Then the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the common hall,<sup>9</sup> and gathered unto him the whole band of soldiers.

28 And they stripped him, and put on him a scarlet robe.

29 And when they had platted a crown of thorns,<sup>1</sup> they put it upon his head, and a reed in his right hand: and they bowed the knee before him, and mocked him, saying, Hail, King of the Jews!

30 And they spit upon him, and took the reed, and smote him on the head.

31 And after that they had mocked him, they took the robe off from him, and put his own raiment on him, and led him away to crucify him.

32 And as they came out, they found a man of Cyrene, Simon by name: him they compelled to bear his cross.

33 ¶ And when they were come unto a place called Golgotha, that is to say, A place of a skull,<sup>2</sup>

23 2 The word Golgotha is Aramaic, and its Greek equivalent is given by Matthew, Luke, and John. The Latin Calvary has become incorporated in every language of Europe. Different accounts have been given of the origin of the name. Some say it is so called because it was the burial-place of Adam, and his skull was preserved there; others that it was the place where malefactors were beheaded; others that there was a skull-shaped mound at it. There is no reference to any mound or hill earlier than the fourth century. As to the site of Calvary, we have no definite information. We learn from the evangelists that it was outside of Jerusalem, near some public road, and visible from a distance. Mar. 15. 20. Jn. 19. 25. Lu. 23. 49. Ver. 25. This imprecation, dictated by a ferocious cruelty that would satiate its appetite for blood at any price, has been, alas! most literally fulfilled. After the reduction of Jerusalem by Titus, more than 500 Jews were sometimes crucified in a single 25 9 The words of ver. 52. 53 must be interpreted literally, like other parts of this narrative. The graves were thrown open by the shock of the earthquake at the time of Christ's death. They were rock-tombs, with stone doors. The dead, however, did not rise till the moment of Christ's resurrection. They rose with, or after him; for he was the 'first-fruits of them that sleep.' They appeared unto many, as if to afford visible evidence that HE was 'the resurrection and the life.' How long they continued to appear is not stated. What became of them afterwards is not stated. Possibly, as Alford suggests, they may have remained on earth forty days, and then ascended with Christ to glory.—P.

34 They gave him vinegar to drink, mingled with gall: and when he had tasted thereof, he would not drink.

35 And they crucified him, and parted his garments, casting lots; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, They parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots.

36 And sitting down, they watched him there;

37 And set up over his head his accusation written, THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS.<sup>4</sup> 38 Then were there two thieves<sup>5</sup> crucified with him; one on the right hand, and another on the left.

39 ¶ And they that passed by reviled him, wagging their heads,

40 And saying, "Thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself. If thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross."

41 Likewise also the chief priests mocking him, with the scribes and elders, said, 42 He saved others, himself he cannot save.

"If he be the King of Israel, let him now come down from the cross, and we will believe him."

43 He trusted in God; let him deliver him now, if he will have him: for he said, "I am the Son of God."

44 The thieves also,<sup>6</sup> which were crucified with him, cast the same in his teeth.<sup>7</sup>

45 ¶ Now from the sixth hour there was darkness<sup>8</sup> over all the land unto the ninth hour.

46 And about the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? that is to say, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?

47 Some of them that stood there, when they heard that, said, "This man calleth for Elias."

48 And straightway one of them ran, and took a sponge, and filled it with vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

49 The rest said, Let be, let us see whether Elias will come to save him.

50 Jesus, when he had cried again with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost.

51 ¶ And behold, the vail of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent;

52 And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept, arose,

53 And came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many.<sup>9</sup>

But the first of these opinions is contrary to the best MS. authority; the second, to the whole idea of inspiration. That Zechariah may also have been called Jeremiah, or that Jeremiah may actually have written part of the prophecy emitted by Zechariah, affords a ready and sufficient solution of the whole difficulty. <sup>2</sup> Considerable difficulty is experienced in harmonizing the four accounts of the resurrection given by the evangelists. This arises from a variety of causes:—1. The evangelists wrote independently. None of them appears to have been acquainted with the writings of the others. 2. Each writer records those facts which most struck himself.

3. We have no full account of all the events, so as to be able to supply the connecting links. The time of the resurrection is here indicated:—it was at the end of the Sabbath; i.e. after the close of the Jewish Sabbath—not immediately, but, as the succeeding clause more minutely specifies, at DAWN of the day following.—P.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

IN the <sup>a</sup>end of the sabbath,<sup>1</sup> as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, to see the sepulchre.<sup>2</sup>

2 And, behold, there was<sup>3</sup> a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

3 His<sup>b</sup> countenance<sup>4</sup> was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow:

4 And <sup>c</sup>for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men.<sup>5</sup>

5 And the angel <sup>a</sup>answered and said unto the women, 'Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

6 He is not here; <sup>9</sup>for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

7 And <sup>b</sup>go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you.

8 And<sup>i</sup> they departed quickly from the sepulchre, with fear and great joy, and did run to bring his disciples word.

Ver. 34. Gall. That this was some bitter infusion is all that is precisely known. It is probable, however, that it was a narcotic, employed, in 'cruel mercy,' to stupify the sufferers; or perhaps even poisonous, and used to hasten dissolution. Wherefore our Lord, who was resigned to suffer, as appointed to save, 'to the uttermost,' would not drink. C.

Ver. 46. Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? These are not the precise Hebrew words of Ps. 22. 1, but a translation into the Syro-Chaldaic. Why hast thou forsaken me? This is neither the language of expostulation nor impatience; for he came to do, and therefore to suffer, the will of the Father. It is merely a believing recitation of the words of the Spirit (Ps. 22. 1), adduced to show that, in obedience to the Father's will, Messiah behaved to be 'cut off,' and left for a time to the triumphant malice of Satan and of wicked men. C.

Ver. 51. Vail. There were two vails, the one at the entrance of the holy place, the other between the holy place and the sanctuary. This was called 'the inner,' and, in He. 9. 3, 'the second veil.' The veil was the emblem of the flesh of Christ, He. 10. 20, which being rent by death, made patent the way into 'the holiest of all,' He. 9.8. C.

Ver. 60. He rolled a great stone, &c. It is not likely that Joseph, who had hewn a sepulchre out of a rock, would have a door so inartificial as this is sometimes represented—a mere round stone to be rolled up against the entrance. It is much more probable that it was, what may still be seen in the East, a flat circular stone that was rolled in a groove. C.

Ver. 66. Sealing the stone. How this sealing was effected cannot be precisely ascertained. But tombs are still found in the East in which a hole in the circular stone described in the foregoing note (ver. 60) corresponds to one in the rock when the stone is rolled into its place. This hole, it would appear, was intended for a piece of wood or iron, the head of which, if pushed a little within the outer surface of the stone, could easily be so sealed as to render opening without detection quite impossible. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Men, especially wicked rulers, are awfully set upon mischief. Not only commanded devotion, but even necessary sleep, must give way to it.

But dreadful is the reward of treachery to Christ. And the price of blood, the horrors of conscience, and the sorrows of hell, are closely linked together. Yet no alarming convictions, no pretences to piety, can restrain men abandoned to wickedness.—Dreadful from earth, from hell, from heaven, were the sufferings of our Redeemer. Hypocritical rulers, the lately extolling mob, the inwardly convinced heathen governor, the profane soldiers, concur to abuse and murder him. But, alas! at what expense of misery to themselves and posterity, for many ages, do the hardened Jews, who had witnessed his benevolent miracles and heard his saving doctrines, cry for his blood! In the most dreadful manner they tempt him to abandon his work of redemption. But willingly and steadily he persevered in his saving of sinful men! Yea, the malice of the priests and elders, the treachery of Judas, the insolence and imprecations of the mob, the indulgence and obstinacy of Pilate, the insults of the soldiers, the attempt to imprison him in his grave, were all marvelously overruled to accomplish the oracles of God, and for the honour of Jesus and redemption of his church. With pleasure and triumph he therefore breathed out his last. And the most honourable attestations were given to his death. Thrice happy are they who sleep in Jesus!—Them will God, through his death, bring with him, that they may be glorified together.—Stand in awe, then, my soul! avoid sin, lest it bring thee to a miserable end, and entail a curse on my seed. Never value thyself on popular applause, which may so quickly be turned into contempt, malice, and murder. Let me never account anything too much to be given, or to be suffered, for the sake of my dying Redeemer. While others prefer Barabbas, let me adhere to look on and weep with him in every difficulty and danger. Let me never come down from my cross till I can say, It is finished. And let neither death nor the grave terrify me, since Jesus the forerunner hath for me passed through and entered into his glory.—See now, my soul, the dreadful punishment, and in that the nature, of my sin! What is a drowned world, a burning Sodom, a plagued Egypt, an opened hell, in comparison of the Son of God suffering—troubled in spirit, till he knew not what to say—amazed and very heavy—sorrowful, even unto death—in an agony, sweating great drops of blood—tormented and insulted by men—harassed by devils—deserted by God—groaning and giving up the ghost, under the weight of infinite wrath!—Listen, O my soul, how, by every debasement, every strait, every labour, every reproach, every wound, every groan, every tear, every drop of blood, Jesus charges me to come to him, that I may have life! Behold how my debt is paid, my happiness secured, my peace with God procured and confirmed, and my comfort enhanced! There divine righteousness is honored, transgression finished, the curse exhausted, the law magnified, God reconciled, death vanquished, and hell extinguished—and all for me!

Ver. 13. The statement of the watch contains the proof of its own falsehood. Had they said, 'Some persons unknown have stolen him,' they might have been believed. But when they charge the stealing against the disciples, and yet acknowledge they themselves were asleep when the theft was committed, they are asserting what they could not know, and are therefore entitled to no credence. That this falsehood was diligently dis-

2 The concluding verses of this Gospel are among the most precious in the Bible. Christ's declaration that universal sovereignty is given to him, in his mediatorial capacity, King and Head of his church, is the basis of what follows. 'Go ye therefore; I am your King, and you are bound to obey; I am omnipotent, and you must succeed. Go and 'make disciples of all nations'—never cease until all mankind become mine. Go and teach them 'what I have commanded you'—my word is to be your sole text-book. Act thus, 'AND, lo, I am with you always.'—P.

15 So <sup>q</sup>they took the money, and did as they were taught: and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day.

16 ¶ Then<sup>r</sup> the eleven disciples went away into Galilee, into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them.<sup>7</sup>

17 And <sup>s</sup>when they saw him, they worshipped him: but some doubted.<sup>8</sup>

18 ¶ And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, <sup>t</sup>All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth.

19 Go<sup>u</sup> ye therefore, and teach all <sup>v</sup>nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost;

20 Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, <sup>v</sup>I am with you<sup>1</sup> always, even unto the end of the world. Amen.<sup>2</sup>

nated is evident from Justin Martyr. Traces of it may also be found in the Rabbinical writers. C.

Ver. 18. All power is given unto me—of which he had shown specimens upon earth in repelling Satan, casting out demons, healing diseases, raising the dead, producing food, stilling the tempest, smiting the barren fig-tree, and convincing and converting sinners. This power was given to him as Mediator, God and man in one person, in which character he held it not inherently but derivatively from the Father. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Jesus, who was delivered for our offences, rises again for our justification! In the most solemn and seasonable manner JEHOVAH liberates our Savior when man is redeemed. And great earthquakes, mighty angels, risen saints, suspicious disciples, terrified soldiers, and an empty grave, are made joint witnesses of this leading article of our Christian faith. Yea, even the self-destructive lie, contrived by the Jewish rulers to refute it, indirectly confirms it. But O how great was his kindness in acknowledging those for brethren who had lately forsaken him, and solemnly to visit those who had so shamefully deserted and so sinfully suspected him. Great are the joys which spring from his being; as God-man, made governor of all things in heaven and earth for the good of his church. What extending of her limits! What discipling of the Gentiles! What solemn admission of them into the family and instruction of them in the things of God. We have need then to hold fellowship with him in every ordinance, and obey him in every command; and, even under the best ministry, to try everything by his laws, and to depend on him in every circumstance for his promised presenee.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF MATTHEW.

Matthew was early called to be a disciple and apostle. From that time forward he was a constant attendant upon our Lord; and so, amply qualified to relate 'the things that he both saw and heard.' The Gospel by Matthew is distinguished by the length at which he has related several of our Lord's discourses. Take as examples, the sermon on the mount, his charge to the apostles, his parabolic illustrations of the nature of his kingdom, and his prophecy concerning Jerusalem and the judgment to come. He is also remarkable for the particularity with which he has related so many of our Lord's most wonderful replies to the cavils of his adversaries—replies in which may be found what many of the deepest reasoners of this world have sought in vain—the principle by which evidence rises above probability, and attains to certainty. This our Lord shows to be found in uniformity—in judging of one thing upon exactly the same principles that we judge by in another. By this he silenced the scribes, Pharisees, and Herodians—compelling them, by their judgment in their own case, either to yield to his arguments or shrink away in silence. Of this important principle of reasoning examples may be found, ch. 12. 1-5; 15. 1-9; 16. 1-3; 21. 23-27; 22. 15-22, 41-46.—As the original purpose of the Gospel is to instruct the ignorant, and convince unbelievers, it is presented to us with all the historic evidence that entitles it to the acceptance of reasonable men. It is affirmed by competent witnesses—related with great simplicity;—and that the historians believed their own statements, their sufferings in defence of their testimony sufficiently demonstrate. Upon these grounds it was necessary the Gospel should first stand, so that no unbeliever would be able to screen his infidelity under any pretended want of ordinary historic evidence. Still it is to be remembered, that, while this species of evidence for revelation, like the evidence for the being of a God from the light of nature and creation, is sufficient to leave men without excuse, the believer ascends to a higher ground—the prophecies fulfilled, and the miracles wrought in attestation of our Lord's commission, and the commission emanating from him to his disciples, with the promise of the Holy Spirit to 'bring all things to their remembrance whatsoever he had said to them,' and certainly to 'guide them into all truth.'

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO SAINT MARK.

Mark, the writer of the following Gospel, is generally supposed to be the person called John, surnamed Mark, who was nephew to Barnabas, Col. 4. 10, and the son of that Mary at whose house many were assembled praying when Peter was delivered from prison, Ac. 12. 12. Peter calls him 'Mareus my son,' 1 Pe. 5. 13, most probably as Paul calls Timothy 'my son in the gospel,' both being spiritual children of their respective fathers in Christ. He accompanied Paul in his travels, Ac. 12. 25; 13. 5-13; 15. 36-41; 2 Ti. 4. 11; Phile. 24; and he is said to have been amanuensis to Peter, and to have prepared his gospel narrative under Peter's inspection, and chiefly for the use of the Gentile converts. The internal evidence of this Gospel seems to favour this statement, for many things particularly honourable to Peter are omitted, while his weaknesses and faults are minutely detailed; given, as it were, con amore, not with the vain ostentation of a proud humility, but with the inward desire to humble the sinner and exalt the Saviour. Some learned commentators have represented it as an abridgment of the larger narrative of Matthew. But though there is doubtless a considerable agreement, yet Mark omits many important particulars mentioned by Matthew, and adds others, dilating upon some things only cursorily noticed by Matthew, and differs from him considerably in the order of time. So that, these things considered, there can appear no reason for supposing one Gospel an abridgment of the other, but that each is an independent narrative of the same events, derived from the same sources, and varying only as it pleased the Holy Spirit that the one should form a supplement or exposition to the other. That the Gospel of Mark was originally written in Greek, is the uniform voice of antiquity; though some, on the ground of a few Latin words, have supposed it originally written in Latin. But the use of a few Latin words in a Greek discourse may be easily accounted for by the residence of Mark at Rome, and the fact of his writing for a people who generally spoke Latin, yet as generally read and understood Greek, and considered it the most efficient vehicle for public instruction. Mark, as writing more immediately for the Gentiles, omits the genealogy of our Lord, so specially recorded by Matthew and Luke; but though omitting his record as 'Son of man,' he opens his history with asserting him to have been 'the Son of God.' C.

MONASTERY AT THE BROOK CHERITH—WHERE CHRIST FASTED FORTY DAYS AND FORTY NIGHTS. [MARK, i:13.]—One of the most sublime ravines in Palestine. The founders of the monastery on the mountain's side believed it to be the site, or near the site, of Elijah's hiding place during the miraculous drought that occurred in Ahab's reign, and where he was fed by ravens while the famine raged in Palestine. In this region Christ wandered when He was driven by the spirit into the wilderness after the opening heavens, the descending dove and the Father's voice. Here He was with the wild beasts; here He fasted forty days and forty nights; here He resisted the temptations of the adversary by the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God. It is a most desolate place.

One or two other characteristics of Mark's Gospel are worthy of note:—(1) It contains fewer quotations from the Old Testament than the other Gospels. The reason is obvious; such quotations would not have been received as authoritative by those to whom the Gospel was immediately addressed. (2) It contains explanations of Jewish rites. (3) It gives interpretations of Aramaic words. (4) Passages abound in which hopes are held out to the heathen of admission to the kingdom of heaven even without the Jews, ch. 12. 9, and in which the religion of the heart is placed far above mere formality, ch. 2. 18; 3. 1-5; 7. 5-23. (5) It describes with greater minuteness and graphic power some of the events of our Lord's life than the other Gospels. It dwells more on the acts and history of Christ than on his sayings:—His displays of divine power; his war with and victory over Satan; his universal benevolence; his defence and development of all that is noble, good, and pure. In a word, Mark exhibits Jesus as the founder of a religion divine in its origin, pure in its principles, and ennobling in its results. P.

* We have three independent accounts of the baptism. In the English version the words of the 'voice from heaven' are different in all three. In Matthew they are as follows:—

'This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased;'

in Mark: 'Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased;'

in Luke: 'Thou art my beloved Son, in thee I am well pleased.'

In the Greek Mark differs from Luke only in one word; the former has ἐν ('whom'), the latter ἐν ('thee').

The best MSS. have σοι in both, and this is the true reading; so that Mark and Luke exactly agree.

In them 'the voice' speaks to Jesus. In Matthew the voice speaks to the people: 'This is,' &c. Is it not probable, is it not natural, to conclude that both utterances were given?—P.

14 ¶ Now after that <sup>t</sup>John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching <sup>u</sup>the gospel of the kingdom of God, 15 And saying, <sup>v</sup>The time is fulfilled, <sup>w</sup>and the kingdom of God is at hand: <sup>x</sup>repent ye, and believe the gospel.

16 ¶ Now<sup>z</sup> as he walked by the sea of Galilee, he saw Simon, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers.

17 And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become <sup>a</sup>'fishers of men.'

18 And straightway they forsook their nets, and followed him.

19 And when he had gone a little further thence, he saw James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, who also were in the ship mending their nets.

20 And straightway he called them: and they <sup>b</sup>left their father Zebedee in the ship with the hired servants, and went after him.

21 And<sup>c</sup> they went into Capernaum: and straightway on the sabbath-day he entered into the synagogue, and taught.

22 And<sup>d</sup> they were astonished at his doctrine: for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.

23 ¶ And<sup>e</sup> there was in their synagogue a man with an unclean spirit; and he cried out,

24 Saying, <sup>f</sup>Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, <sup>g</sup>the Holy One of God.<sup>9</sup>

25 And Jesus <sup>h</sup>rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him.

26 And<sup>i</sup> when the unclean spirit had torn <sup>j</sup>him, and cried with a loud voice, he came out of him.

27 And<sup>k</sup> they were all amazed, insomuch that they questioned among themselves, saying, What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth he even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 4. The baptism of repentance—because his principal topic was calling 'a generation of vipers' to repent, and 'flee from the wrath to come,' see Mat. 1. 7, 8; and his chief argument to enforce attention and obedience was the doctrine of the grace of God, which proclaims to every believing penitent sinner remission of his sins through Jesus Christ. C.

Ver. 10. Straightway. That is, 'And coming up out of the water, he (John) straightway (immediately after) saw the Spirit descending,' &c. Bloomfield, in conjunction with some very high authorities, says it was JESUS, and not JOHN, who saw the Spirit descending; but a reference to Jn. 1. 32-34 seems to refer it unquestionably to John. C.—Like a dove. The expression does not define the form of appearance (though we learn from Luke that it was in a bodily form), but the manner of its descent, namely, like the rapid gliding of a dove. Bloomfield.

Ver. 13. Wild beasts are not mentioned by Matthew, for he wrote for Jews who knew the wilderness; but they are mentioned by Mark, who wrote for Roman citizens, and to whom this circumstance would afford a striking feature in our Lord's temptation. C.

REFLECTIONS.—John delightfully, but humbly, prepares the way that grace and truth may come through our incarnate God. But the greatest of ministers are 28 And<sup>1</sup> immediately his fame spread abroad throughout all the region round about Galilee.

29 ¶ And<sup>n</sup> forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John.

30 But Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever; and anon they tell him of her.

31 And he came and took her by the hand, and lifted her up; and immediately the fever left her, and she ministered unto them.

32 ¶ And<sup>2</sup> at even, when the sun did set,<sup>2</sup> they brought unto him all that were diseased, and them that were possessed with devils.

33 And all the city was gathered together at the door.

34 And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases,<sup>3</sup> and cast out many devils; and suffered not the devils<sup>4</sup> to speak, because they knew him.<sup>5</sup>

35 ¶ And<sup>6</sup> in the morning, rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed.<sup>6</sup>

36 And Simon, and they that were with him, followed after him.

37 And when they had found him, they said unto him, All men seek for thee.

38 And he said unto them, "Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach there also: for therefore came I forth.

39 And he preached in their synagogues throughout all Galilee, and cast out devils.

40 ¶ And<sup>7</sup> there came a leper to him, beseeching him, and kneeling down to him, and saying unto him, "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

41 And Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth his hand, and touched him, and saith unto him, I will; be thou clean.

42 And as soon as he had spoken, immediately the leprosy departed from him, and he was cleansed.

43 And he straitly charged him, and forthwith sent him away;

44 And saith unto him, "See thou say nothing to any man: but go thy way, show thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing those things which Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

45 But<sup>8</sup> he went out, and began to publish it much, and to blaze abroad the matter, inso-

6 We learn from ver. 21 that the day on which Christ healed the man with an unclean spirit was the Sabbath. Our Lord performed on that day acts of mercy; but the Jews considered it wrong to bring to him their sick to be healed. When even was come, however, and the Sabbath concluded, they brought the sick to our Lord.—P.

5 Because they knew him, and would therefore address him as Messiah, 'the Holy One of God,' a title whereby prejudice would be excited (see Lu. 4. 41) before he had time to establish his claims to that character, and an evidence from which a charge would arise accusing him of a league with demons, because he received their testimony.—Note. While Christians should never court persecution, or an ill name, from unbelievers, nor reject either kindness or a good name, if unbelievers are inclined to give them; yet let them beware lest the desire of popularity, or the fear of censure, should lead them into any sacrifice of principle; and rather let them reject a good name, than defile a pure conscience.—C.

secured for it by day, or in the city, he rose before dawn, and selecting a retired spot, there prayed. So should it be with us. 15 Our Lord's object is to prove that he is God, and that he has therefore power to forgive sins. He admits the validity of the reasoning that God only can forgive them. He was not able to afford them any direct evidence that the man's sins were forgiven when he declared them to be so. He must give some proof of his divinity which would be fully cognizable by man's senses; this he does by the miracle of healing. They saw the miracle; they could not question its reality; they could not deny that divine power alone could accomplish it, and the logical inference from it was that Jesus, being God, had power to forgive sins. Thus our Lord himself appeals to his miracle as a proof of his Godhead and his divine mission.—P.

much that Jesus could no more openly enter into the city, but was without in desert places; and they came to him from every quarter.

CHAPTER II.

1 Christ healeth one sick of the palsy, 14 calleth Matthew from the receipt of custom, 15 eateth with publicans and sinners, 18 excuseth his disciples for not fasting, 23 and vindicateth them for plucking the ears of corn on the sabbath-day.

AND again<sup>a</sup> he entered into Capernaum after some days; and it was noised that he was in the house.

2 And<sup>b</sup> straightway many were gathered together, insomuch that there was no room to receive them, no, not so much as about the door: and he preached the word unto them.

3 ¶ And<sup>c</sup> they come unto him, bringing one sick of the palsy, which was borne of four.

4 And when they could not come nigh unto him for the press, they uncovered the roof where he was: and when they had broken it up, they let down the bed wherein the sick of the palsy lay.

5 When Jesus saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins be forgiven thee.

6 But there were certain of the scribes sitting there, and reasoning in their hearts,

7 Why<sup>d</sup> doth this man thus speak blasphemies? Who<sup>e</sup> can forgive sins but God only?

8 And immediately, when Jesus perceived in his spirit that they so reasoned within themselves, he said unto them, Why reason ye these things in your hearts?<sup>3</sup>

9 Whether is it easier to say to the sick of the palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk?

10 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (he saith to the sick of the palsy,) <sup>4</sup>

11 I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house.

12 And immediately he arose, took up the bed, and went forth before them all; insomuch that they were all amazed, and glorified God, saying, We never saw it on this fashion.

13 ¶ And he went forth again by the seaside; and all the multitude resorted unto him, and he taught them.

14 And<sup>p</sup> as he passed by, he saw Levi the son of Alphæus sitting at the receipt of custom, but emptiness and nothing if compared with their divine Master. When multitudes attend their ministrations, all must issue in repentance towards God and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ. And highly criminal is our unbelief of the gospel, which has been attested by concurrent reports of inspired evangelists, by the sermons of John and of Jesus, by victories over devils, the approbation of angels, by JEHOVAH's testimony from heaven, by the Spirit's descent, and by miracles unnumbered. O what do I owe to Christ! If I am accepted of God, it is in him:—if I receive the Spirit, it is through him:—if I am tempted as a Christian, it is in conformity to him:—if I resist the devil, and he flee from me, it is through his having been tempted, that he might succour them that are tempted:—if angels minister to me, it is at his command and for his sake:—if I am called or qualified as a Christian or minister, it is by him:—if I am delivered from diseases or devils, I owe all to him. Let me then never act the part of a devil in asking, What have I to do with him? And if I have experienced his grace, let me gratefully employ all that I have in his service and praise.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 4. Uncovered the roof. They ascended by the outer stair, and came over the place where they knew or believed Jesus was. They then broke up the flat covering of the roof, and let down the sick man by cords attached to the four corners of the carpet or mat, which, according to eastern custom, constituted his bed.—Note. There is an expressive proverb: 'Wherever there is a will there is a way,' of which the faith of these friends affords a beautiful example. 'Go thou' to thy friend, diseased in spirit, and do likewise.' Send him to Jesus by the Word of truth, if he will go; and if he will not, bear him to the Great Physician in the prayer of faith. C.

Ver. 22. By the parable of 'new cloth,' and 'new wine,' our Lord illustrates the necessity of suiting his doctrine and requirements to the weak state of his disciples, see Jn. 16. 12, whom he compares to the 'old cloth' and 'old bottles.' In the same spirit Paul says to the Corinthians, 'I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able,' 1 Co. 3. 2. Even so, the Lord seldom tries a young convert, or an infant church, by the test of persecution; but when they have ceased to be children, it often pleases him to call them to the duties and endurance of men. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Let me always attend Jesus' ordin-and said unto him, Follow me. And he arose and followed him.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, that, as Jesus sat at meat in his house, many publicans and sinners<sup>6</sup> sat also together with Jesus and his disciples: for there were many, and they followed him.

16 And when the scribes and Pharisees saw him eat with publicans and sinners, they said unto his disciples, How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners?

17 When Jesus heard it, he saith unto them, They<sup>s</sup> that are whole have no need of the physician, but they that are sick: I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

18 ¶ And<sup>t</sup> the disciples of John and of the Pharisees used to fast: and they come and say unto him, Why do the disciples of John and of the Pharisees fast, but thy disciples fast not?

19 And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the bride-chamber fast while the bridegroom<sup>7</sup> is with them? as long as they have the bridegroom with them, they cannot fast.

20 But the days will come when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days.

21 No<sup>z</sup> man also seweth a piece of new<sup>8</sup> cloth on an old garment: else the new piece that filled it up taketh away from the old, and the rent is made worse.

22 And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine doth burst the bottles, and the wine is spilled, and the bottles will be marred:<sup>a</sup> but new wine must be put into new bottles.<sup>9</sup>

23 ¶ And<sup>b</sup> it came to pass, that he went through the corn-fields on the sabbath-day; and his disciples began, as they went, to pluck the ears of corn.

24 And the Pharisees said unto him, Behold, why<sup>c</sup> do they on the sabbath-day that which is not lawful?

25 And he said unto them, Have ye never read what David did, when he had need, and was an hungered, he, and they that were with him?

26 How he went into the house of God in the days of Abiathar<sup>1</sup> the high-priest, and did g As this occurred, not in the high-priesthood of Abiathar, but of his father Ahimelech, Abiathar has been considered the error of a transcriber, or a second name of Ahimelech. * These words are peculiar to Mark. The meaning of them is that the Sabbath was instituted as a day of rest suitable to man's physical constitution and wants; a day of worship adapted to his moral constitution and spiritual aspirations; a day of hope, leading forward his mind to the eternal rest of heaven, and preparing him for it. The Sabbath being thus made for man, he who is man's Representative, Mediator, and King—who in his mediatorial character has been made head over all things—he is Lord of the Sabbath. He has authority to direct the manner of its observance. The conclusion from the whole is that the Sabeat the show-bread, which is not lawful to eat but for the priests, and gave also to them which were with him?

27 And he said unto them, The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath:<sup>2</sup>

28 Therefore<sup>3</sup> the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

CHAPTER III.

1 Christ healeth the withered hand, 10 and many other infirmities; 11 rebuketh the unclean spirits; 13 chooseth his twelve apostles; 22 confuteth the blasphemous absurdity of casting out devils by Beelzebub; 31 and sheweth who are his brother, sister, and mother.

AND he<sup>a</sup> entered again into the synagogue; and there was a man there which had a withered<sup>1</sup> hand.

2 And<sup>b</sup> they watched him, whether he would heal him on the sabbath-day; that they might accuse him.

3 And he saith unto the man which had the withered hand, Stand forth.

4 And he saith unto them, Is it lawful to do good on the sabbath-days, or to do evil? to save life, or to kill? But they held their peace.

5 And when he had looked round about on them with anger, being grieved for the hardness<sup>2</sup> of their hearts, he saith unto the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it out: and his hand was restored whole as the other.<sup>3</sup>

6 ¶ And<sup>i</sup> the Pharisees went forth, and straightway took counsel with the Herodians against him, how they might destroy him.

7 But Jesus withdrew himself with his disciples to the sea:<sup>4</sup> and a great multitude from Galilee followed him, and from Judea,

8 And from Jerusalem, and from Idumea, and from beyond Jordan; and they about Tyre and Sidon, a great multitude, when they had heard what great things he did, came unto him.

9 And he spake to his disciples, that a small ship should wait on him because of the multitude, lest they should throng him.

10 For he had healed many; insomuch that they pressed<sup>5</sup> upon him for to touch him, as many as had plagues.<sup>6</sup>

11 And unclean spirits, when they saw him, fell down before him, and cried, saying, Thou art the Son of God.

ances, that I may honour him and receive his blessing, that he may speak to my heart, give me the faith which he will approve, forgive my sins, and heal my plagues. And let no impediment hinder me from his grace. While proud sinners are ever rejecting against him to their own destruction, it becomes me to esteem, receive, admire, and honour him to my eternal salvation. And if he call me to himself by his grace, diligently should I exert all my influence in bringing others along with me. Sinners, as such, he came to save: sinners, as such, he calls in his gospel: and him that cometh unto him, he will in no wise cast out. The more sinful and wretched I feel myself to be, the more evident is my gospel right to receive the Redeemer, who came to seek and to save that which is lost. No publican or sinner is too bad for him to save, or too obstinate for him to conquer. And he does, and must, seek us before we seek him. Wisely he connects every duty with its proper season, and proportions his people's services to their ability. Let then his word be my rule, and his authority my obligation, in observing his Sabbaths and ordinances: and let his grace make me prize his service, since all is designed for my profit.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 5. Looked round about on them with anger, being grieved. The word ὀργή does not necessarily signify anger, but any commotion of the mind. The first feeling of our Lord was grief for the calamities he foresaw as the natural and inevitable consequence of that hardness of heart. The second, that emotion of dissatisfaction with which a holy mind, the image of a holy God, must always regard sin, the common enemy both of God and man. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Attendance on Christ for his healing power and grace is always hopeful. No day is unseasonable for works of mercy, especially in dealing with him. And if he order us to give dead hearts, or stretch out withered hands, himself must afford the ability. The most earnest gospel calls are in vain without the loving power of his grace. Many, alas! by their obstinacy and hardness of heart, provoke his grief and indignation, and return him hatred, murder, and blasphemy for his kindness!—and men deny and abuse him whom even devils confess and obey! But it is highly absurd to pretend his connection with Satan, when their interests are so evidently contrary. And dreadful is that presumption which leads to the unpardonable sin. Professors should carefully avoid this infallible cause of ruin. Very honourable is a spiritual relation to Christ, and an active faithfulness in his service. If then he graciously call me to his work, let no censures of men deter or importunity of friends divert me from it.

TRAVELING IN GALILEE. [MARK, iii: 7-8.]—Jesus Christ was brought up in Galilee and often traveled through it. This scene is one common to the country. Every day one is likely to meet families traveling just as is here shown. Things never change in Palestine. As they travel to-day, they have always traveled, and there is no doubt that our Savior witnessed many just such scenes as the one here photographed.

A couple of boxes are strapped on the back of a mule or donkey so that one box balances the other. Then a part of the family occupy one box while the remainder occupy the other. The head of the household goes in front to lead the mule and to protect and guide his loved ones. One is constantly impressed with the air of contentment which seems to gather in the faces of the people in this country.

12 And <sup>u</sup>he straitly charged them that they should not make him known.<sup>8</sup>

13 ¶ And<sup>9</sup> he goeth up into a mountain, and calleth unto him whom he would: and they came unto him.

14 And he ordained<sup>1</sup> twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach,<sup>2</sup>

15 And to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils:

16 And <sup>v</sup>Simon he surnamed Peter;

19 And <sup>f</sup>Judas Iscariot, which also betrayed him: and they went into an house.<sup>4</sup>

20 ¶ And the multitude cometh together again, so that <sup>h</sup>they could not so much as eat bread.

21 And when his friends<sup>5</sup> heard of it, they went out to lay hold on him: for they said, <sup>i</sup>He is beside himself.<sup>6</sup>

22 ¶ And the scribes which came down from Jerusalem said, <sup>j</sup>He hath Beelzebub, and by the prince of the devils casteth he out devils.

23 And he called them unto him, and said unto them in <sup>k</sup>parables, How can Satan cast out Satan?<sup>7</sup>

24 And if a kingdom be divided against itself, that kingdom cannot stand.

25 And if a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand.

26 And if Satan rise up against himself, and be divided, he cannot stand, but hath an end.

27 No man can <sup>l</sup>enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he will first bind the strong man; and then he will spoil his house.

28 Verily<sup>n</sup> I say unto you, All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme:

29 But he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation;

30 Because<sup>o</sup> they said, He hath an unclean spirit.<sup>8</sup>

31 ¶ There<sup>p</sup> came then his brethren and his mother, and, standing without, sent unto him, calling him.

32 And the multitude sat about him; and they said unto him, Behold, <sup>q</sup>thy mother and thy brethren without seek for thee.

If this be the meaning of the name, its application both to James and John, or rather to their writings and labours in the church, it will not be difficult to discover.—C.

For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds be revealed,' Jn. 3. 19, 20.—C.

CHAPTER IV.

<sup>1</sup> The parable of the sower, 14 and the meaning thereof. <sup>21</sup> We must communicate the light of our knowledge to others. <sup>26</sup> The parable of the seed growing secretly, 30 and of the mustard-seed. <sup>35</sup> Christ stilleth a tempest by his word.

AND he<sup>a</sup> began again to teach by the sea-side: and there was gathered unto him a great multitude, so that he <sup>b</sup>entered into a ship, and sat in the sea; and the whole multitude was by the sea on the land.

2 And he taught them many things <sup>c</sup>by parables, and said unto them in his doctrine,

3 Hearken;<sup>d</sup> Behold, there went out a sower to sow:<sup>1</sup>

4 And it came to pass, as he sowed, some fell by the way-side, and <sup>e</sup>the fowls of the air came and devoured it up.

5 And some fell on <sup>f</sup>stony ground, where it had not much earth; and immediately it sprang up, because it had no depth of earth:

6 But when the sun was up, it was scorched; <sup>h</sup>and because it had no root, it withered away.

7 And <sup>i</sup>some fell among thorns; and the thorns grew up, and choked it, and it yielded no fruit.

8 And <sup>j</sup>other fell on good ground, and did <sup>k</sup>yield fruit that sprang up and increased; and brought forth, some thirty, and some sixty, and some an hundred.

9 And he said unto them, <sup>l</sup>He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

10 ¶ And <sup>m</sup>when he was alone, they that were about him with the twelve asked of him the parable.

11 And he said unto them, <sup>n</sup>Unto you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God; but unto them <sup>p</sup>that are without,<sup>2</sup> all these things are done in parables:

12 That<sup>q</sup> seeing they may see, and not perceive;<sup>3</sup> and hearing they may hear, and not understand; lest at any time they should be converted, and their sins should be forgiven them.

13 And he said unto them, <sup>r</sup>Know ye not this parable? and how then will ye know all parables?

14 ¶ The<sup>s</sup> sower soweth the word.

15 And these are <sup>t</sup>they by the way-side, where the word is sown; but when they have

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 26-29. As Mark very commonly relates the same facts as Matthew, so this is the only parable which Mark relates that is not mentioned by Matthew. The scope of it is to show that the gospel, being once published in the world in a gradual and mysterious manner, should produce a large church therein before the end of time; and that a vital principle of grace, being once planted in a soul, gradually and insensibly increases in strength, vigour, and appear heard, "Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was sown in their hearts.

16 And these are <sup>1</sup>they likewise which are sown on stony ground; who, when they have heard the word, immediately receive it with gladness;

17 And <sup>2</sup>have no root in themselves, and so endure but for a time: afterward, when affliction or perscution ariseth for the word's sake, immediately they are offended.

18 And <sup>3</sup>these are they which are sown among thorns; such as hear the word, 19 And the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things entering in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful.

20 And <sup>4</sup>these are they which are sown on good ground; such as hear the word, and receive it, and bring forth fruit, some thirty-fold, some sixty, and some an hundred.

21 ¶ And <sup>a</sup>he said unto them, Is a candle brought to be put under a bushel, or under a bed?<sup>4</sup> and not to be set on a candlestick?

22 For<sup>b</sup> there is nothing hid, which shall not be manifested; neither was any thing kept secret, but that it should come abroad.

23 If<sup>c</sup> any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

24 And he said unto them, <sup>d</sup>Take heed what ye hear: <sup>e</sup>with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you; and unto you that hear shall more be given.

25 For<sup>f</sup> he that hath, to him shall be given: and he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he hath.

26 And he said, <sup>h</sup>So is the kingdom of God, as if a man should cast <sup>i</sup>seed into the ground,

27 And should sleep and rise, night and day, and the seed should <sup>j</sup>spring and grow up, he knoweth not how.<sup>5</sup>

28 For <sup>k</sup>the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; <sup>l</sup>first the blade, then the ear; after that, the full corn in the ear.<sup>6</sup>

29 But <sup>n</sup>when the fruit is brought forth,<sup>7</sup> immediately <sup>o</sup>he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come.

30 ¶ And he said, <sup>p</sup>Wheremto shall we liken the kingdom of God? or with what comparison shall we compare it?

31 It is like a grain of mustard-seed, which, when it is sown in the earth, is less than all the seeds that be in the earth:

32 But when it is sown, it <sup>q</sup>groweth up, and ance, and in fruits of holiness, which shall be graciously rewarded in the day of judgment.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! that so much of God's truth should be sown in our world to so little purpose! Unfruitful hearers of the gospel are everywhere numerous; and they who mix faith with the Word, to the salvation and sanctification of their souls, are, alas! very few. There is great need therefore to watch carefully against Satan, and the snares which arise from the pleasures, cares, and terrors of this world. Diligently should we consider how and what we hear; and look well to our hearts, that they be truly sincere and upright; yea, look upward for God's grace to render us fruitful in works of righteousness. Thrice happy is it to be the distinguished objects of Jesus' love, to know the secrets of his grace, and to become careful improvers of whatever gifts or graces he hath given us, that we may abound therein! His work in his church, and in every becometh greater than all herbs, and shooteth out great branches; so that the fowls of the air may lodge under the shadow of it.

33 And<sup>r</sup> with many such parables spake he the word unto them, as they were able to hear it.

34 But <sup>s</sup>without a parable spake he not unto them: and when they were alone, he expounded all things to his disciples.

35 ¶ And<sup>t</sup> the same day, when the even was come, he saith unto them, Let us pass over unto the other side.

36 And when they had sent away the multitude, they took him even as he was in the <sup>8</sup>ship: and there were also with him other little ships.

37 And<sup>u</sup> there arose a great storm of wind, and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full.

38 And he was in the hinder part of the ship, <sup>v</sup>asleep on a pillow:<sup>9</sup> and they awake him, and say unto him, <sup>w</sup>Master, carest thou not that we perish?

39 And he arose, and <sup>x</sup>rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still.<sup>1</sup> And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm.

40 And he said unto them, <sup>y</sup>Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith?

41 And they <sup>z</sup>feared exceedingly, and said one to another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?<sup>2</sup>

<sup>k</sup> The end of this parable is to show that when our Lord should have preached and confirmed his gospel, by his resurrection and the outpouring of his Spirit, he would then be received into heaven, and seem to leave the word to the mere impulse of natural causes—that is, to the judgment, liberality, effort, zeal, yea, to the very emulations, jealousies, & passions of men—yet during all this time would be watching over his field with the eye of the skillful husbandman, and would cut down and gather it the moment it became ripe for the harvest either of life or condemnation.—C.

<sup>n</sup> One lesson which may be drawn from this parable is, that a life of dreamy contemplation, and indolent reflection, whether in convent cell or desert cave, is not necessary to the development of true piety and purity. The truth when planted in the heart of man is nourished by a divine power. Its fruits appear when man is most active in the performance of life's various duties. No lawful duty can ever hinder or interfere with true religion.—P.

The miracle is also instructive. Christ our king and head rules the elements. Amid the fury of the tempest, amid the raging of the sea, when all human means of safety seem gone, the prayerful, faithful Christian is never beyond the reach of his Master's omnipotent arm.—P.

<sup>1</sup> These people were so called from Gadara, a city in the half-tribe of Manasseh, about six miles south-east of the Sea of Galilee. It was one of the cities called Decapolis, and much celebrated for its hot baths. It was taken by Vespasian, and, after sustaining all the horrors of a siege, was laid in ashes—an awful retribution for the rejection of the Saviour, ver. 17. It was situated near to the city of Gergesa—whence the same country is also called the land of the Gergesenes.—C.

<sup>4</sup> It is worthy of note that the cliffs and rocks round Gadara are filled with ancient tombs. They are excavated in the limestone rock, and consist of chambers of various dimensions, some more than 20 ft. square, with loculi for bodies. The doors are slabs of stone, hung upon pivots, and many of them are still in their places. Most of the present inhabitants of Gadara live in these tombs.—P.

THE GADARENE COUNTRY—SHOWING THE PLACE WHERE THE DEVILS ENTERED INTO THE HERD OF SWINE. [MARK, v: 1.]—The Gadarene country lies east of the Jordan. From the point of our present view we see the dim outlines beyond the Sea of Galilee of part of the Gadarene country. It is supposed that the swine into which the devils entered ran violently down the steep hill opposite the present city of Tiberias. So that in this view we are looking at about the place where this notable miracle of our Savior was wrought. There are little boats also out on the lake we see, which are used by the boatmen to carry tourists across the lake. The Gardarene country gets its name from the city of Gadara, which is some miles beyond the Sea of Galilee. This view was taken from a point near an old wall, by the edge of the lake.

of the most high God? <sup>1</sup>I adjure thee by God, that thou torment me not.

8 For he said unto him, <sup>2</sup>Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit.

9 And he asked him, What is thy name? And he answered, saying, My name is Legion;<sup>3</sup> for we are many.<sup>4</sup>

10 And he<sup>5</sup> besought him much, that he would not send them away out of the country.<sup>6</sup>

11 Now there was there, nigh unto the mountains, a great herd of <sup>7</sup>swine feeding.

12 And<sup>8</sup> all the devils besought him, saying, Send us into the swine, that we may enter into them.

13 And forthwith Jesus <sup>9</sup>gave them leave. And the unclean spirits went out, and entered into the swine: and the herd <sup>10</sup>ran violently down a steep place into the sea, (they were about two thousand,) and were choked in the sea.<sup>7</sup>

14 And<sup>11</sup> they that fed the swine fled, and told it in the city, and in the country. And they went out to see what it was that was done.

15 And they come to Jesus, and see him that<sup>12</sup> was possessed with the devil, and had the legion, sitting, and clothed, and in his right mind: <sup>13</sup>and they were afraid.

16 And they that saw it, told them how it befell to him that was possessed with the devil, and also concerning the swine.

17 And<sup>14</sup> they began to pray him to depart out of their coasts.

18 And when he was come into the ship, he that had been possessed with the devil <sup>15</sup>prayed him that he might be with him.

19 Howbeit, Jesus suffered him not,<sup>8</sup> but saith unto him, <sup>16</sup>Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee.

20 And he departed, and began to publish in Decapolis<sup>9</sup> how great things Jesus had done for him: and all men did marvel.

21 ¶ And when Jesus was passed over again by ship unto the other side, <sup>17</sup>much people gathered unto him: and he was nigh unto the sea.

22 And,<sup>20</sup> behold, there cometh one of the rulers of the synagogue,<sup>1</sup> Jairus by name; and when he saw him, he fell at his feet, 24 And Jesus went with him; <sup>26</sup>and much people followed him, and thronged him.

25 ¶ And a certain woman, which had an <sup>27</sup>issue of blood twelve years, tombs of the East are often roomy and ornamented caves cut in the faces of rocks, or builded on the surface of the earth with stone. That in ancient times they were often used as dwelling-houses, is recorded in Diogenes Laërtius, ix. 38; and in modern times the subterranean tombs of Egypt are often so occupied by the Arabs. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Dreadful is the case of natural men who are filled with and governed by devils. Cruelly they tyrannize over their vassals, and furiously work in them, so that no restraints of human laws, solemn vows, awful or engaging providences, nor even common operations of the Holy Ghost, can in the least avail. But great is the mercy that Christ's compassion is infinitely greater than Satan's implacable malice, and his saving power infinitely superior to all his fury; and when he casts out the unclean spirit, he puts a new heart and a right spirit within us. In the most fearful forms he sometimes punishes worldlings by the hand of their own master, for the manifestation of his own power and grace. And great is their folly and wickedness who prefer their secular interests to Jesus Christ and his salvation, and, from inordinate love to the world, desire him to depart from them. If he take them at their word, how dismal is the consequence! But if some reject him, others will rise up ready to receive him. And no distance, no filthiness, no shame, no fear, no discouragement, no derision, no death, shall hinder their health, their comfort, their life, who apply to him; while vain, and even hurtful, are all other means of relief when used without due subordination to him. Even saints are ready to tremble when they ought to triumph; for Jesus often, by voluntary delays, lets the case, even of his most earnest supplicants, become apparently desperate before he grants relief. And scoffers exclude themselves from the means of their conviction. But if his mighty works must sometimes be only the subjects of private adoration and praise, cheerfully ought we to proclaim them, when it is most seasonable, and subservient to his and his Father's glory, and the benefit of mankind.

CHAPTER VI. REFLECTIONS.—It is strange that sinners should so cavil at, condemn, and rage against the Redeemer, and labour to lay hindrances in when he had put them all out, he taketh the father and the mother of the damsel, and them that were with him, and entereth in where the damsel was lying.

41 And he took the damsel by the hand, and said unto her, Talitha eumi; which is, being interpreted, Damsel, I say unto thee, arise.

42 And straightway the damsel arose, and walked; for she was of the age of twelve years. And they were astonished with a great astonishment.

43 And he charged them straitly that no man should know it; and commanded that something should be given her to eat.<sup>8</sup>

CHAPTER VI.

1 Christ is contemned of his countrymen. 7 He giveth the twelve power over unclean spirits. 14 Divers opinions of Christ. 27 John Baptist is beheaded, 29 and buried. 30 The apostles return from preaching. 34 The miracle of five thousand fed with five loaves and two fishes. 45 Christ walketh on the sea; 53 and healeth all that touch him.

AND he went out from thence, and came into his own country;<sup>1</sup> and his disciples follow him.

2 And when the sabbath-day was come, he began to teach in the synagogue: and many, hearing him, were astonished, saying, From whence hath this man these things? and what wisdom is this which is given unto him, that even such mighty works are wrought by his hands?

3 Is not this the carpenter,<sup>2</sup> the son of Mary, the brother of James, and Joses, and of Juda, and Simon? and are not his sisters here with us? And they were offended at him.

4 But Jesus said unto them, A prophet is not without honour, but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house.

5 And he could there do no mighty work,<sup>3</sup> save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them.

6 And he marvelled because of their unbelief. And he went round about the villages, teaching.

7 ¶ And he called unto him the twelve, and began to send them forth by two and two, and gave them power over unclean spirits;

8 And commanded them that they should take nothing for their journey, save a staff only; no scrip, no bread, no money<sup>4</sup> in their purse:

9 But be shod with sandals,<sup>5</sup> and not put on two coats.<sup>6</sup>

10 And he said unto them, In what place soever ye enter into an house, there abide till ye depart from that place.

11 And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear you, when ye depart thence, shake off the dust under your feet for a testimony against them. Verily I say unto you, It shall be more

7 That is, that no man should be made acquainted with the miracle at that time, partly to avoid all appearance of ostentation about so great a work, partly to avoid the danger of any political commotion, and partly lest the people should imagine he was come to interrupt the order of nature, and abolish the power of death, otherwise than by his own death, resurrection, and Spirit.—C.

8 A comparison of the narratives of this chapter with the parallels in Matthew and Luke will show, 1. That Mark must have been an eye-witness of the incidents; and 2. That he was a closer observer, and a more minute and graphic delineator of events than the others. The minute accuracy of Mark's details gives a peculiar charm to his Gospel, and constitutes one of its leading characteristics.—P.

q Origen denies that our Lord was a carpenter, and some MSS. represent him in this place but as 'the son of the carpenter.' But all the best MSS., universal tradition, and the consent of the early writers of the church, confirm the authenticity of this statement; for the Jewish law required that every man should learn some handicraft trade; and what more natural than that Joseph, a poor

8 The essence of a miracle is not the supernatural work performed, but the prophetic word or prophetic action that precedes it, for 'the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy.' Hence arose the use of the oil in the apostolic cures. It was the prophetic sign by which they declared their intention to heal—the prophetic symbol of the Spirit of God, and the visible witness and memorial that the work had been done by apostolic agency through divine power.—C.

9 Herod is called tetrarch by Matthew (ch. 14. 1) and Luke (ch. 9. 7). Both the words, tetrarch and king, were employed with some degree of latitude to signify a ruler or governor of a province. The Herod here referred to was Herod Antipas, son of Herod the Great by Malthace; he was ruler of Galilee and Peraea, which provinces were left to him by his father and confirmed by Rome. He was first married to a daughter of Aretas, king of Arabia, but subsequently to Herodias, the wife of his brother Philip. It was for this incestuous connection he was reproved by the Baptist.—P.

3 Herod furnishes a striking example of that inconsistency of human nature that takes pleasure in the company and discourses of good men, and yet 'do not the things which they say.' Like Balaam, there are many who desire to 'die the death of the righteous,' and would so die, did they not also resolve to live to their covetousness or their pleasure.—C.

12 And they went out, and preached that men should repent.

13 And they east out many devils, and anointed with oil<sup>8</sup> many that were sick, and healed them.

14 ¶ And king Herod<sup>9</sup> heard of him; (for his name was spread abroad;) and he said, That John the Baptist was risen from the dead, and therefore mighty works do show forth themselves in him.

15 Others<sup>t</sup> said, That it is Elias. And others said, That it is a prophet, or as one of the prophets.

16 But when Herod heard thereof, he said, It is John, whom I beheaded: he is risen from the dead.

17 ¶ For Herod himself had sent forth and laid hold upon John, and bound him in prison, for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife: for he had married her.

18 For John had said unto Herod, It is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife.

19 Therefore Herodias had a quarrel<sup>l</sup> against him, and would have killed him; but she could not.

20 For Herod feared John, knowing that he was a just man and an holy, and observed him; and when he heard him, he did many things, and heard him gladly.<sup>3</sup>

21 And when a convenient day was come, that Herod on his birth-day made a supper to his lords, high captains, and chief estates of Galilee;

22 And when the daughter of the said Herodias came in, and danced, and pleased Herod and them that sat with him, the king said unto the damsel, Ask of me whatsoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee.

23 And he sware unto her, Whatsoever thou shalt ask of me, I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom.

24 And she went forth, and said unto her mother, What shall I ask? And she said, The head of John the Baptist.

25 And she came in straightway with haste unto the king, and asked, saying, I will that thou give me by-and-by, in a charger, the head of John the Baptist.

26 And the king was exceeding sorry; yet for his oath's sake, and for their sakes which sat with him, he would not reject her.

27 And immediately the king sent an executioner,<sup>4</sup> and commanded his head to be brought: and he went, and beheaded him in the prison, the way of their own mercy. And amazing is his grace and patience in sending forth other ministers when those formerly sent have been so basely contemned and persecuted. Men indeed are often astonished and affected by the Word of God who are never savingly changed by it. And while they reverence the preacher and hear him gladly, they yet continue in their sins. But ministers must execute their commission whether men will hear or forbear. And he who sends them on 30 ¶ And <sup>l</sup>the apostles gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told him all things, both what they had done, and what they had taught.

31 And he said unto them, <sup>n</sup>Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest a while: for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat.

32 And they departed into a desert place by ship privately.

33 And the people saw them departing, <sup>o</sup>and many knew him,<sup>5</sup> and ran afoot thither out of all cities, and outwent them, and came together unto him.

34 ¶ And <sup>p</sup>Jesus, when he came out, saw much people, and was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd; and <sup>q</sup>he began to teach them many things.

35 And <sup>r</sup>when the day was now far spent, his disciples came unto him, and said, This is a desert place, and now the time is far passed:

36 Send them away, that they may go into the country round about, and into the villages, and buy themselves bread: for they have nothing to eat.

37 He answered and said unto them, <sup>s</sup>Give ye them to eat. And they say unto him, <sup>t</sup>Shall we go and buy two hundred pennyworth<sup>6</sup> of bread, and give them to eat?

38 He saith unto them, How many loaves have ye? go and see. And when they knew, they say, Five, and two fishes.

39 And <sup>u</sup>he commanded them to make all sit down by companies<sup>7</sup> upon the green grass.

40 And they sat down in ranks<sup>8</sup> by hundreds, and by fifties.

41 And when he had taken the five loaves and the two fishes, <sup>v</sup>he looked up to heaven, and blessed, and brake the loaves, and gave them to his disciples to set before them; and the two fishes divided he among them all.

42 And <sup>w</sup>they did all eat, and were filled.

43 And they took up twelve baskets full of the fragments, and of the fishes.

One of the chief difficulties is found in the assertion, that 'many knew him,' which suggests the idea of an interpolation, as few could be supposed ignorant of his person where he had resided so long, and had wrought so many miracles. It is with great deference suggested that the difficulty may be better solved by translating 'and many knew him'—'and many knew it,' that is, the desert place to which our Lord and his disciples were bound (see ver. 31); and so while they doubled some headland in the boat, the people crossed the peninsula, and 'ran thither on foot,' &c.—C.

CHAPTER VII.

1 The Pharisees find fault with the disciples for eating with unwashen hands. 8 They break the commandments of God by the traditions of men. 14 Meat defileth not a man. 24 He healeth the Syrophenician woman's daughter of an unclean spirit, 31 and one that was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech.

THEN came<sup>a</sup> together unto him the Pharisees, and certain of the scribes, which came from Jerusalem.

2 And when they saw some of his disciples eat bread with defiled,<sup>1</sup> that is to say, with unwashen, hands, <sup>b</sup>they found fault.

3 For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, except they wash their hands oft,<sup>2</sup> eat not, <sup>c</sup>holding the tradition of the elders.

4 And when they come from the market, except they <sup>d</sup>wash,<sup>3</sup> they eat not. And many other things there be, which they have received

On him therefore they ought to depend for maintenance and protection, neither entangling themselves with the affairs of this life nor fearing the faces of men. Terrible is their case who hear but reject the gospel. And most deplorable the situation of those who are under the direction of ignorant and unfaithful ministers. Men's lusts will drive them to the most fearful lengths when once they are fully entangled. And none are more base than abandoned women. Yea, carnal pretences to fidelity and honour often plunge men into the most bloody crimes, and at last into the depths of hell. But if men seek Jesus, even with natural seriousness, how great his tender compassion to them, and his concern that neither soul nor body should suffer hurt in his service. He is ready to heal every disease and to

SIDON, FROM THE SEA. [MARK, vii: 24.]—Sidon was one of the great cities of Phoenicia. The first journey our Savior ever made outside of Palestine proper was into Phoenicia. It is not known whether He ever entered into Tyre or Sidon. We are told that He went into the borders of Tyre and Sidon and entered into a house, and would have no man know it, but He could not be hid. It was during this excursion into the country of the heathen that He drove the unclean spirit from the daughter of the Syro-Phœnician woman. From what is said of St. Paul in Acts, xxvii: 3, we are authorized to conclude that he had friends in Sidon, and that he made a visit to the city during one of the missionary journeys. Silks and fruits are extensively raised in the neighborhood of Sidon to-day.

to hold, as the washing of cups, and pots,<sup>4</sup> brazen vessels, and of <sup>5</sup>tables.<sup>6</sup>

5 Then the Pharisees and scribes asked him, Why<sup>e</sup> walk not thy disciples according to the tradition of the elders, but eat bread with unwashen hands?

6 He answered and said unto them, Well hath Esaias prophesied of you <sup>9</sup>hypocrites,<sup>7</sup> as it is written, <sup>h</sup>This people honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me.

7 Howbeit, in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

8 For laying aside the commandment of God, ye hold the tradition of men, as the washing of pots and cups: and many other such like things ye do.

9 And he said unto them, <sup>i</sup>Full well ye reject<sup>8</sup> the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition.

10 For Moses said, <sup>j</sup>Honour thy father and thy mother; and, Whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death:

11 But ye say, If a man shall say to his father or mother, It is Corban,<sup>9</sup> that is to say, a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me; he shall be free.

12 And ye suffer him no more to do ought for his father or his mother;

13 Making<sup>k</sup> the word of God of none effect through your tradition, which ye have delivered: and many such like things do ye.

14 ¶ And<sup>l</sup> when he had called all the people unto him, he said unto them, Harken unto me every one of you, and understand:

15 There<sup>n</sup> is nothing from without a man that, entering into him, can defile him: but the things which come out of him, those are they that defile the man.

16 If<sup>o</sup> any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

17 And<sup>p</sup> when he was entered into the house from the people, his disciples asked him concerning the parable.

18 And he saith unto them, <sup>q</sup>Are ye so without understanding also? Do ye not perceive, that whatsoever thing from without entereth into the man, it cannot defile him;

* Covetousness. Not covetousness, but covetousness; that is, immoderate desire of wealth, and the sensual gratifications upon which wealth is so often expended.—Wickedness is also, in the original, wickedness—ill-will, hatred, malice, with all their brood of evil-speaking, calumny, and false witness.—Foolishness, forwardness, impertinence, self-sufficiency, impudence, and inconsiderate rashness in speaking and acting.—C.

Our Lord's course must have been over the ridge of Lebanon, probably by the old Phœnician road which connected Sidon with the colony at Laish; then by Caesarea - Philippi, which was one of the cities of Decapolis, through the province of Gaulanitis, to the eastern shore of the Sea of Galilee.—P.

23 A man that was born deaf, could not, by ordinary means, have learned to speak; and, therefore, could not be said to have 'an impediment in his speech'; that is, to be a stammerer. The case seems to indicate one that had been born with the power of hearing, and had learned the use of the organs of speech; but who, having lost his hearing, and whose tongue being also partially affected, retained merely the power of inarticulate and unintelligible sounds—and was therefore, so far as meaning was concerned, absolutely dumb. 27 He sighed over the imperfections, sufferings, and sorrows of humanity.—C.

19 Because<sup>r</sup> it entereth not into his heart, but into the belly, and goeth out into the draught, purging all meats?

20 And he said, <sup>s</sup>That which cometh out of the man, that defileth the man.

21 For<sup>t</sup> from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders,

23 All these evil things come from within, and defile the man.

24 ¶ And<sup>u</sup> from thence he arose, and went into the borders of Tyre and Sidon, and <sup>v</sup>entered into an house, and would have no man know it: but he could not be hid.

25 For <sup>w</sup>a certain woman, whose young daughter had an unclean spirit, heard of him, and came and fell at his feet:

26 The woman was a Greek,<sup>2</sup> a Syrophenician by nation;<sup>3</sup> and <sup>x</sup>she besought him that he would cast forth the devil out of her daughter.

27 But Jesus said unto her, <sup>y</sup>Let the children first be filled: for it is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it unto the dogs.

28 And she answered and said unto him, Yes, Lord: <sup>z</sup>yet the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs.

29 And he said unto her, <sup>b</sup>For this saying go thy way; the devil is gone out of thy daughter.

30 And <sup>c</sup>when she was come to her house, she found the devil gone out, and her daughter laid upon the bed.<sup>4</sup> supply every want. And he can feed them in a wilderness, or walk on floods for their help. If then he manifest his power and his glory in our deliverance, let us never turn again to folly, nor give way to hardness and unbelief.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 9. Full well. This is commonly pronounced an irony; but such a figure seems utterly unsuited to the character of Christ. But as no meaning can be fairly extracted from the word καλῶς, except one cognate to 'fairly, justly, properly, full well,' &c., may not the imagined irony be removed by taking the words interrogatively? 'And he said unto them, Do you properly set aside the commandment of God that you may establish your own tradition?' C.

REFLECTIONS.—What self-deceivers are human hearts! The most trifling superstitions are often substituted in the place of the substantial duties of religion and morality. But no devotion, which is not commanded by God, and offered up in faith and sincerity, can be acceptable to him or profitable to us. Alas! what an infernal fountain of wickedness is every unregenerate heart! It is ready to burst forth on every occasion. And there is an absolute necessity of God's offering an abiding principle of life, light, faith, and love, in opposition to our natural corruption. His grace indeed makes a wonderful change even in the weakest believer. It gives the highest and most honourable views of Christ; the tenderest compassion to afflicted friends; earnest importunity in prayer for their relief; and great humility and patience under seeming insults and denials of help. And Jesus sometimes tries the faith of his people by great discouragements, even while he secretly upholds and animates it, till at last he crown it with the full enjoyment of all that it can wish. What complicated diseases spring from our complicated lusts and crimes! And it is a great mercy that Jesus Christ has power over all plagues. Let me then, conscious of sinful pollutions and miseries unnumbered, look up to him for relief in his own time and way. No hardened heart, deaf ears, nor stammering tongue, can withstand his healing words of power. Let me listen to his instructions with an obedient ear; and ascribe to him, as he shall direct, the glory due to his name, who is wonderful in counsel, and excellent in working.

CHAPTER VIII. REFLECTIONS.—In following Christ, let me count nothing too hard. Let me trust him with my body as well as my soul: and bread shall be given me, my water shall be sure. Never let my unbelief raise or hesitate at difficulties, as if they were too great for Christ to surmount. And let me never

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Christ feedeth the people miraculously: 10 refuseth to give a sign to the Pharisees; 14 admonisheth his disciples to beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and of the leaven of Herod: 22 giveth a blind man his sight: 27 acknowledgeth that he is the Christ, who should suffer and rise again: 34 and exhorteth to patience in persecution for the profession of the gospel.

IN those days <sup>a</sup>the multitude being very great, and having nothing to eat, Jesus called his disciples unto him, and saith unto them,

2 I<sup>b</sup> have compassion on the multitude, because they have now been with me three days, and have nothing<sup>1</sup> to eat:

3 And if I send them away fasting to their own houses, they will faint by the way: for divers of them came from far.

4 And his disciples answered him, <sup>c</sup>From whence can a man satisfy these men with bread here in the wilderness?

5 And he asked them, <sup>d</sup>How many loaves have ye? And they said, Seven.

6 And he commanded the people <sup>e</sup>to sit down on the ground: and he took the seven loaves, and <sup>f</sup>gave thanks, and brake, and gave to his disciples to set before them; and they did set them before the people.

7 And they had a few small fishes: and he blessed,<sup>h</sup> and commanded to set them also before them.

8 So <sup>i</sup>they did eat, and were filled: and they took up of the broken meat that was left seven baskets.

9 And they that had eaten were about four thousand: and he sent them away.

10 ¶ And<sup>j</sup> straightway he entered into a ship with his disciples, and came into the parts of Dalmanutha.<sup>2</sup>

This seems plain from his capacity of distinguishing between men and trees, which he could not have done had he been born totally blind.—Note. Both miracles are intended to exemplify the restorations, and the latter the gradual progress to spiritual vision, frequently exemplified in the children of God.—C.

11 And<sup>k</sup> the Pharisees came forth, and began to question with him, seeking of him a sign from heaven, tempting him.

misinterpret his words or providences, nor ever forget his former mighty works. It is highly absurd to reject the most plain and proper evidences which he gives of his dignified character, and insist to be gratified with others, far less useful, merely because they are of our own contriving. Yea, infidelity and impenitent hardness of heart will work the most fearful ruin for those who indulge them. And Jesus will perform no miracles to gratify men's humours; but will abandon those who insist upon them to the heavy judgments which they deserve. But great is his readiness to bear with, help, heal, and save them who, sensible of their wants and maladies, apply to him for relief; and in an instant, or more gradually,—in public or private, as best promotes his glory and their good,—kindly will he bestow it. What mean thoughts men have of Christ! and what carnal views have some real saints of the real glories of his office and work! And never doth Satan more readily cast the saints down than after some signal token of Jesus' regard. Nothing doth Jesus more detest than low thoughts of his sufferings and death; and in nothing does he manifest more true love than in administering sharp rebukes. If we expect glory with him, we must now take up our cross and follow him: for if we be ashamed of him now, we must not expect to be honoured by him in the last judgment. And if in forsaking him we court worldly profits, pleasures, or honours, we shall fall into everlasting perdition. In death or judgment it will little avail us what our external circumstances in life were. And surely our great concern ought to be what shall become of our immortal souls in the eternal state.

CHAPTER IX. Ver. 44-48. The fire denotes the eternal torments of hell; and the never-dying worm denotes conscience perpetually accusing, upbraiding, and condemning. 49. Every one in hell is preserved incorruptible by the very nature of personality; even as in saints the principle of grace, received in regeneration, secures eternal holiness and happiness.

REFLECTIONS.—O the transcendent glories of our Redeemer! How delightful are the manifestations thereof! Happy are they who are much favoured with them; but happier they who in heaven always behold his face! The ravishing displays of God on earth are indeed quickly passed: but it is enough to hear his Son, when we see him not. He is risen from the dead, and ascended to glory; and will quickly return, without sin, unto our salvation. Let us then exercise ourselves, not in curious questions, but in humble faith and ardent desires. And let all the opposition we receive from devils and men render his return doubly welcome.—Alas! how early Satan enters into men! But when once entered, he holds fast his possession, and cruelly and basely abuses his subjects. And yet, in cases the most alarming, multitudes take his part against Christ and his disciples. Invaluable are the mercies that unbelief defers or deprives men of. And near, though sometimes terribly introduced, is our relief, when unbelief is once made our burden. Yea, often the clearest views of the cause of our miseries come after our deliverance. How Jesus delighted in suffering for men, and yet how ill his sufferings are relished by men under the power of carnal ambition! Many proudly conceal their ignorance till it ruins them; and contend in angry debates till they have lost all sight of the truth. And it is a mercy if Jesus rebuke them, and shame them out of their ambition into peace and humility. It is base for Christians to take it ill that God's work

MILL AT BETHSAIDA—ON SITE OF THE ANCIENT CITY. [MARK, viii : 22-25.]—One of the most picturesque views on the Sea of Galilee is an old mill at Bethsaida. It is hardly to be supposed that this dates from the time of the ancient Bethsaida, but it stands upon the site of the ancient city, and serves to give a pathetic and picturesque impression of one of the great cities that stood upon this sacred sea. It was in Bethsaida that a blind man was brought to our Savior, whom He took by the hand and led out of the town and healed him. This whole place is given up now to rank grass and weeds, and utter loneliness and desolation claim a spot where once people thronged and traded and passed away. It gives us a striking picture of the vanity of building our hopes upon earthly places and prospects.

26 And he sent him away to his house,<sup>8</sup> saying, <sup>a</sup>Neither go into the town, nor tell it to any in the town.

27 ¶ And<sup>e</sup> Jesus went out, and his disciples, into the towns of Cæsarea Philippi:<sup>9</sup> and by the way he asked his disciples, saying unto them, Whom do men say that I am?

28 And they answered, <sup>9</sup>John the Baptist: but some say, Elias; and others, One of the prophets.<sup>1</sup>

29 And he saith unto them, But <sup>h</sup>whom say ye that I am? And Peter answereth and saith unto him, <sup>i</sup>Thou art the Christ.<sup>2</sup>

30 And he charged them that they should tell no man of him.

31 ¶ And<sup>k</sup> he began to teach them, that the Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again.

32 And he spake that saying <sup>l</sup>openly. And Peter took him, and began to rebuke him.

33 But when he had turned about and looked on his disciples, <sup>n</sup>he rebuked Peter, saying, Get thee behind me, Satan: for thou <sup>o</sup>savourest not the things that be of God, but the things that be of men.

34 ¶ And when he had called the people unto him with his disciples also, he said unto them, <sup>p</sup>Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

35 For<sup>q</sup> whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it.

36 For <sup>r</sup>what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?

37 Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

38 Whosoever<sup>s</sup> therefore shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, in <sup>t</sup>this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the <sup>u</sup>Son of man be ashamed, when he <sup>v</sup>cometh in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels.

CHAPTER IX.

2 Jesus is transfigured. 11 He instructeth his disciples concerning the coming of Elias: 14 casteth out a dumb and deaf spirit: 30 foretelleth his own death and resurrection: 33 exhorteth his disciples to humility: 38 bidding them to hinder no one from working miracles in his name, and warning them to avoid offences.

AND he said unto them, <sup>a</sup>Verily I say unto you, that there be some of them that stand here, which shall not taste of death, till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power.<sup>1</sup>

2 ¶ And<sup>b</sup> after six days Jesus taketh with him <sup>c</sup>Peter, and James, and John, and leadeth them up into an high mountain <sup>d</sup>apart by <sup>l</sup> The omission here of all the favourable circumstances mentioned by Matthew gives strong corroboration to the opinion that Mark wrote under the immediate eye of Peter; who, so far from allowing his own praise to be celebrated, is at pains, as it were, to suppress whatever might seem intended for his personal honour. And intended as his Gospel was for Roman converts, the omission ministers a providential rebuke to the system of despotism in this world, and of assumed power in the world to come.

<sup>n</sup> The Papal power has attempted to establish and maintain by a false interpretation of our Lord's reply to Peter.

3 And his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow; so as no fuller on earth can white them.

4 And <sup>9</sup>there appeared unto them Elias, with Moses; and they were talking with Jesus.

5 And Peter answered and said to Jesus, Master, it is <sup>h</sup>good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles: one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.

6 For he <sup>i</sup>wist not what to say; for they were sore afraid.

7 And<sup>j</sup> there was a cloud that overshadowed them: and a voice came out of the cloud, saying, <sup>k</sup>This is my beloved Son; <sup>l</sup>hear him.

8 And suddenly, when they had looked round about, they saw no man any more, save Jesus only with themselves.

9 And as they came down from the mountain, <sup>n</sup>he charged them that they should tell no man what things they had seen, till the Son of man were risen from the dead.

10 And they kept that saying with themselves,<sup>2</sup> questioning one with another what <sup>o</sup>the rising from the dead<sup>3</sup> should mean.

11 ¶ And they asked him, saying, Why say the scribes that <sup>p</sup>Elias must first come?

12 And he answered and told them, <sup>q</sup>Elias verily cometh first, and restoreth all <sup>r</sup>things; and <sup>s</sup>how it is written of the Son of man, that he must suffer many things, and be <sup>t</sup>set at nought.

13 But I say unto you, <sup>u</sup>That Elias is indeed come, and they have done unto him whatsoever they listed, as it is written of him.

14 ¶ And<sup>v</sup> when he came to his disciples, he saw a great multitude about them, and the scribes questioning with them.

15 And straightway all the people, when they beheld him, were greatly amazed;<sup>5</sup> and running to him, saluted him.<sup>6</sup>

17 And one of the multitude answered and said, Master, <sup>a</sup>I have brought unto thee my son, which hath a dumb spirit:

18 And<sup>b</sup> wheresoever he taketh him, he tear-eth him;<sup>8</sup> and he foameth, and gnasheth with his teeth, and pineth away; and I spake to thy disciples, that they should cast him out; and <sup>c</sup>they could not.

prosper in any hands but those of their particular party. And it is very dangerous to oppose that which is ratified by the blessing of God. Yea, if nothing appear contrary to the faith of the gospel, charity requires us to hope the best. God resists the proud, but giveth grace to the humble. The favour which we show to any for Christ's sake he will take as done to himself, and it shall not lose its reward. Better is it to go to heaven through much self-denial, than to hell in a

MOUNT TABOR. [MARK, ix : 2.]—Mount Tabor competes with Mount Hermon for the glory of being the place of the Transfiguration of our Savior. It is on the road from Jerusalem to Nazareth, and in sight of the latter city. It is one of the mountains upon which our Savior, in his boyhood, doubtless looked every day. It would not seem strange if this had been the mountain selected for the Transfiguration. It is unique in its features. Upon the top of this mountain there are the ruins of an old church, and all who pass this way make a pilgrimage to its top. One of the most magnificent panoramic views can be obtained from the top of Tabor. It overlooks the plain of Jezreel and Nazareth, and the Sea of Galilee, and the Gadarene country, and Mount Carmel far to the south on the shore of the Mediterranean Sea.

him; and he fell on the ground, and wallowed foaming.

21 And he asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him? And he said, Of<sup>e</sup> a child:

22 And oftentimes it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters, to destroy him: but if thou canst do any thing, have compassion on us, and help us.

23 Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth.

24 And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; help<sup>9</sup> thou mine unbelief.<sup>9</sup>

25 When Jesus saw that the people came running together, he rebuked the foul spirit, saying unto him, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee, come out of him, and enter no more into him.

26 And<sup>i</sup> the spirit cried, and rent him sore, and came out of him: and he was as one dead; insomuch that many said, He is dead.

27 But<sup>j</sup> Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up; and he arose.

28 And<sup>k</sup> when he was come into the house, his disciples asked him privately, Why could not we cast him out?

29 And he said unto them, This kind can come forth by nothing but by prayer and fasting.<sup>1</sup>

30 ¶ And<sup>a</sup> they departed thence, and passed through Galilee; and he would not that any man should know it.

31 For<sup>p</sup> he taught his disciples, and said unto them, The Son of man is delivered into the hands of men, and they shall kill him; and after that he is killed, he shall rise the third day.

32 But<sup>a</sup> they understood not<sup>2</sup> that saying, and were afraid to ask him.

33 ¶ And<sup>r</sup> he came to Capernaum: and being in the house, he asked them, What was it that ye disputed among yourselves by the way?

34 But they held their peace: for by the way they had disputed among themselves who should be the greatest.

35 And he sat down, and called the twelve, and saith unto them, If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all, and servant of all.

36 And he took<sup>a</sup> a child, and set him in the midst of them: and when he had taken him in his arms, he said unto them,

37 Whosoever<sup>v</sup> shall receive one of such children in my name, receive me: and whosoever shall receive me, receive me, but him that sent me.<sup>3</sup>

g This is a wonderful and cheering narrative. Faith is shown to be omnipotent. It is so because it accepts and appropriates an Omnipotent God. The father's trembling, tearful, and yet faithful confession is very touching. It is accompanied, as such confessions ought always to be, by a prayer for help. The faith which is kindled by the Divine Spirit, must be ever nourished and sustained by him.—P.

1 The statement in this verse develops an important principle in the divine government, not confined to the case of miraculous gifts, but extending also to the ordinary administration of divine grace. For as no one can doubt that grace is administered in answer to the prayer of faith; so, that prayer and fasting are habitually and frequently, though not inseparably, united, is the testimony of our Lord, illustrated by the practice of his apostles. 8 This is given as a reason for the injunctions and statements contained in ver. 43-48. If thy hand offend thee, cut it off. . . If thine eye offend thee, pluck it out. For every one shall be salted. &c. Fire, like salt, is a symbol. Salt was the symbol of purity. It preserves that to which it is applied untainted. Fire—the fire of God's spiritual presence, and wise judgments, purifies the soul. It is the Divine Spirit within who enables us to mortify the members, to chasten our evil desires, to cut off a darling sin. It is thus we are 'salted' or preserved 'with fire.'—P.

j Salt, when applied and absorbed, preserves from corruption, and so becomes an emblem of perpetuity (see Nu. 18.19). It is grateful to the taste, while it serves, often unknown to him that partakes of it, as an invaluable medicine; and thus it becomes an emblem of that 'meekness of wisdom' with which every exhortation, reproof, correction, or instruction of the Christian should be constantly seasoned. 45 And if thy foot offend thee,<sup>6</sup> cut it off: it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than, having two feet, to be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched;

46 Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

47 And if thine eye offend thee,<sup>7</sup> pluck<sup>e</sup> it out: it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, than, having two eyes, to be cast into hell-fire;

48 Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

49 For<sup>h</sup> every one shall be salted with<sup>8</sup> fire, and every sacrifice shall be salted with salt.

50 Salt<sup>9</sup> is good: but if the salt have lost his saltiness, wherewith will ye season it? Have salt in yourselves, and have peace one with another.

CHAPTER X.

2 Christ disputeth with the Pharisees touching divorcement: 13 blesseth the children that are brought unto him: 17 instructeth a rich man how he may inherit life everlasting: 23 telleth his disciples of the danger of riches: 28 promiseth rewards to them that forsake any thing for the gospel: 32 foretelleth his own death and resurrection: 35 biddeth the two ambitious suitors to think rather of suffering with him: 46 and restoreth to Bartimeus his sight.

AND he<sup>a</sup> arose from thence, and cometh into the coasts of Judea, by the farther side of Jordan:<sup>1</sup> and the<sup>b</sup> people resort unto him again; and, as he was wont, he taught them again.

2 ¶ And<sup>c</sup> the Pharisees came to him, and asked him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife? tempting him.<sup>2</sup> course of self-indulgence. Let therefore the terrors and eternity of banishment, heartily believed, be a powerful check to our raging passions. And unless we wish to be through eternity salted with God's wrath, as victims of our own folly, let us, as acceptable sacrifices to his mercy and kindness, pray to have our hearts salted with grace, and our lives ordered as becometh the gospel.

CHAPTER X. Ver. 21. Loved him. The special love of Christ to this inquirer has been matter of difficulty to expositors. Hence they have sought solutions in new translations—such as, 'He accosted him kindly.' 'He felt kindly disposed towards him.' 'He kissed him.' All these have been sought for on the 4 And they said, 'Moses suffered<sup>3</sup> to write a bill of divorcement, and to put her away.

5 And Jesus answered and said unto them, For<sup>9</sup> the hardness of your heart he wrote you this precept:

6 But<sup>h</sup> from the beginning of the creation God made them male and female.

7 For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife;

8 And<sup>i</sup> they twain shall be one flesh: so then they are no more twain, but one flesh.

9 What<sup>j</sup> therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.

10 And in the house his disciples asked him again of the same matter.

11 And he saith unto them, <sup>k</sup>Whosoever shall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery against her.

12 And if a woman shall put away her husband, and be married to another, she committeth adultery.

13 ¶ And<sup>l</sup> they brought young children to him, that he should touch them: and his disciples <sup>m</sup>rebuked those that brought them.

14 But when Jesus saw it, he <sup>n</sup>was much displeased, and said unto them, <sup>p</sup>Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God.<sup>4</sup>

15 Verily I say unto you, <sup>q</sup>Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein.

16 And<sup>r</sup> he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them.

17 ¶ And<sup>s</sup> when he was gone forth into the way, there came one running, and kneeled to him, and asked him, 'Good Master, <sup>t</sup>what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?

18 And Jesus said unto him, <sup>v</sup>Why callest thou me good? There is none good, but one, that is, God.<sup>5</sup>

19 Thou<sup>w</sup> knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Defraud not, Honour thy father and mother.

20 And he answered and said unto him, Master, <sup>y</sup>all these have I observed from my youth.

21 Then<sup>z</sup> Jesus, beholding him, loved him, and said unto him, One thing thou lackest: go thy way, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, <sup>a</sup>take up the cross, and follow me.

22 And<sup>b</sup> he was sad at that saying, and went away grieved; for he had great possessions.

23 ¶ And Jesus looked round about, and saith unto his disciples, <sup>c</sup>How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!

<sup>q</sup> Alford remarks on this passage:—'We can hardly read our Lord's solemn saying, without seeing that it reaches farther than the mere then present occasion. It might one day become a question whether the new Christian covenant of repentance and faith could take in the unconscious infant, as the old covenant did:—whether when Jesus was no longer on earth, little children might be brought to him, dedicated to his service, and made partakers of his blessing.'

Our Lord furnishes the church, by anticipation, with an answer to it for all ages. Not only may the little infants be brought to him; but in order for us who are mature to come to him, we must cast away all that wherein our maturity has caused us to differ from them, and become like them.

Not only is infant baptism justified, but it is (abstractly considered)—not as to preparation for it, which from the nature of the case is precluded: the normal pattern of all baptism; none can enter God's kingdom except as an infant.—P.

his divinity. The person who addressed him called him 'good,' & yet believed him to be but a man. In that application our Lord repudiates the title. None but God can be 'good.' principle that the inquirer remaining an absolute lover of the world, any special love towards him was impossible. These difficulties, however, seem made rather than found. (1) Would not Christ have loved an enemy and taught his disciples the same?

Not, indeed, with love of approbation or complacency—for that were unnatural, impossible, and sinful—but with love of compassion, benevolence, and forgiveness. Why then might he not feel some special movement of the love of pity and benevolence 48 And <sup>e</sup>many charged him that he should hold his peace: but he cried the more a great deal, Thou Son of David, have mercy on me.

49 And<sup>h</sup> Jesus stood still, and commanded him to be called. And they call the blind man, saying unto him, <sup>i</sup>Be of good comfort, rise; he calleth thee.

50 And<sup>j</sup> he, casting away his garment,<sup>5</sup> rose, and came to Jesus.

<sup>3</sup> The fig-tree produces its fruit before its leaves, so that the appearance of the leaves was evidence that the fruit should have been ripening; and as 'the time of figs (that is, the time for their being ripe and gathered) was not yet (come),' our Lord had an additional right to expect fruit. But here the infidel asks, 'Does not this ignorance strangely contrast with or rather invalidate the wonderful prophetic wisdom attributed to Jesus in the previous narrative? The answer is obvious. The visit was intended to furnish an emblem of the blighting curse that speedily follows a barren professor of the gospel.'—C.

<sup>4</sup> But even supposing this tree to have been no man's property, but growing on an absolute common, how could Jesus be justified in destroying it for ever? If this objection be of any force, it will go to arraign the providence of God, and all that are called laws of nature—by which thousands of plants, and shrubs, and trees are annually destroyed by canker, or blight, or storms; and as whatever proves too much, in reality proves nothing,—so an objection that goes too far, is, in reality, no objection where it is applied.—C.

mount of Olives, he sendeth forth two of his disciples,<sup>1</sup>

2 And saith unto them, Go your way into the village over against you: and as soon as ye be entered into it, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon never man sat; loose him, and bring him.

3 And if any man say unto you, Why do ye this? say ye that <sup>e</sup>the Lord <sup>d</sup>hath need of him; and straightway he will send him hither.

4 And they went their way, and found the colt tied by the door without, in a place where two ways met; and they loose him.<sup>2</sup>

5 And certain of them that stood there said unto them, What do ye, loosing the colt?

6 And they said unto them even as Jesus had commanded: and they let them go.

7 And they brought the colt to Jesus, <sup>e</sup>and cast their garments on him; and he sat upon him.

8 And many spread their garments in the way; and others cut down branches off the trees, and strawed them in the way.

9 And they that went before, and they that followed, <sup>e</sup>cried, saying, Hosanna; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord:

10 Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: <sup>h</sup>Hosanna in the highest.

11 And <sup>i</sup>Jesus entered into Jerusalem, and into the temple: <sup>j</sup>and when he had looked round about upon all things, and now the eventide was come, he went out unto Bethany with the twelve.

12 ¶ And<sup>k</sup> on the morrow, when they were come from Bethany, he was hungry:

13 And<sup>l</sup> seeing a fig-tree afar off, having leaves,<sup>3</sup> he came, if haply he might find any thing thereon: and when he came to it, he found nothing but leaves; for the time of figs was not yet.

14 And Jesus answered and said unto it, No man<sup>4</sup> eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever. And his disciples heard it.<sup>5</sup>

15 ¶ And<sup>n</sup> they come to Jerusalem: and Jesus went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money-changers, and the seats of them that sold doves;

16 And would not suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple.

REFLECTIONS.—What an example of unwearied patience and labour, of wisdom and prudence, of humility and condescension, of tenderness and compassion, has Jesus set before us in himself! and under what an excellent dispensation of purity, light, and grace, do we now live in the gospel period! Its various truths are set forth in the most evident light, and all its precepts recommended by the strongest arguments. The laws of marriage are plainly settled, for preventing confusion, and for promoting conjugal faithfulness and affection. And the privileges of believers' children are clearly established, and themselves made emblems of the true heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ. But self-confidence, proud ambition, and a worldly spirit are great hindrances to real religion and happiness. And God's grace rarely recovers men from their influence, or teaches them that the only use of riches is to do good with them. Alas! how many have several amiable qualities, and yet, for want of indwelling grace, land at last in eternal sorrow! but rich are the rewards of self-denial and multiplied losses for Christ's sake. And yet it is only believing views of his sufferings that will make us to delight in them. It is shameful for the disciples of a crucified Redeemer repeatedly to contend about the imaginary trifles of worldly grandeur. And great is his compassion in bearing with the infirmities, ignorance, and frowardness of his people. Yea, he is ready to heal such as apply to him for relief in the firm faith of his infinite ability and willingness to save. No meanness, no distemper, can stop the egress of his great love. And if he welcome, no matter how many thousands wickedly discourage me. And if he succour, supply, save, and enlighten my soul or body, cheerfully should I follow him in my way to eternal rest.

CHAPTER XI. REFLECTIONS.—The divine sove-

SITE OF THE TEMPLE. [MARK, xi: 27.]—This view gives us the best representation of the premises upon which the temple was situated to be possibly obtained from a photograph. It was taken from the top of a house in the neighborhood, and we are enabled to see the Mosque of Omar and the Mosque of El Aksa, with gates, tombs, pulpits and arches that belong to this wonderful spot. We are able to form a very satisfactory idea of the area on which stood the temple of Solomon a thousand years before Christ, and on which stood the temple of Herod, into which our Savior entered at the time of the royal reception which the multitude gave him. What memories crowd upon us as we look at these sacred precincts! It was here that Abraham offered Isaac, and the scene calls up the illustrious names of Jewish and of Christian history.

17 And he taught, saying unto them, Is it not written, °My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer?<sup>6</sup> but ye have made it a den of thieves.

18 And<sup>p</sup> the scribes and chief priests heard it, and sought how they might destroy him: for they feared him, because all the people was astonished at his doctrine.

19 And<sup>a</sup> when even was come, he went out of the city.

20 ¶ And<sup>r</sup> in the morning, as they passed by, they saw the fig-tree dried up from the roots.

21 And Peter, calling to remembrance, saith unto him, Master, behold, the fig-tree which thou cursedst is withered away!

22 And Jesus, answering, saith unto them, Have faith in God.<sup>7</sup>

23 For<sup>s</sup> verily, I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass;<sup>8</sup> he shall have whatsoever he saith.

24 Therefore I say unto you, °What things soever ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them.

25 And<sup>u</sup> when ye stand<sup>9</sup> praying, forgive, if ye have ought against any; that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses.

26 But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses.<sup>1</sup>

27 ¶ And<sup>v</sup> they come again to Jerusalem: and as he was walking °in the temple, there come to him °the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders, 28 And say unto him, °By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority to do these things?

29 And °Jesus answered and said unto them, I will also ask of you one question,<sup>2</sup> and answer me, and I will tell you by what authority I do these things.

30 The<sup>b</sup> baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men? Answer me.

31 And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say, Why then did ye not °believe him?

32 But<sup>d</sup> if we shall say, Of men; they feared the people: for all men counted John, that he was a prophet indeed.

4 The Herodians were those Jews who were attached to the family and policy of the Herods. They were less exclusive than the Pharisees, and they were inclined to make such a compromise between the Jewish law and Roman polity as might save to some extent the independence of the nation under the rule of the Herodian family. On questions of Jewish law our Lord had completely silenced the charges and cavils of the Pharisees; in the hope, therefore, of entrapping him politically, and thus bringing upon him the judicial power of the civil governor of Galilee, the Herodians assailed him.—P.

33 And they answered and said unto Jesus, °We cannot tell. And Jesus answering, saith unto them, °Neither do I tell you by what authority I do these things.

CHAPTER XII.

1 In a parable of the vineyard let out to wicked husbandmen, Christ foretelleth the reprobation of the Jews, and the calling of the Gentiles. 13 He avoideth the snare of the Pharisees and Herodians about paying tribute to Cæsar: 18 confuteth the error of the Sadducees, who denied the resurrection: 28 resolveth the scribe, who questioned of the first commandment: 35 refuteth the opinion that the scribes held of Christ: 38 bidding the people to beware of their ambition and hypocrisy: 41 and commendeth the poor widow for her two mites, above all the gifts of the rich.

AND he<sup>a</sup> began to speak unto them by parables. A certain man planted a vineyard, and set an hedge about it, and digged a place for the wine-fat, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country.

2 And °at the season he sent to the husbandmen °a servant, that he might receive from the husbandmen of the °fruit of the vineyard.

3 And<sup>e</sup> they caught him, and beat him, and sent him away empty.

4 And again he sent unto them another servant; and at him they cast stones, and wounded him in the head, and sent him away shamefully handled.

5 And again he sent another; and him they killed, °and many others; beating some, and killing some.

6 Having<sup>b</sup> yet therefore one son, his well-beloved,<sup>1</sup> he sent him also last unto them, saying, They will reverence my son.

7 But<sup>i</sup> those husbandmen said among themselves, This is the °heir; come, let us kill him, and the inheritance shall be ours.

8 And they took him, and killed him, and cast him out of the vineyard.

9 What shall therefore the lord of the vineyard do? °He will come and destroy the husbandmen, and will give the vineyard unto others.

10 And have ye not read this scripture; °The stone which the builders rejected is become the head of the corner:<sup>2</sup>

11 This was the Lord's doing, and it °is marvellous in our eyes?

12 And<sup>o</sup> they sought to lay hold on him, but feared the people:<sup>3</sup> for they knew that he had spoken the parable against them: and they left him, and went their way.

13 ¶ And<sup>p</sup> they send unto him certain of the Pharisees and of the °Herodians,<sup>4</sup> to catch him in his words.

holiness, the omniscience, and almighty power of our Redeemer, was clearly manifest even in his deepest humiliation; and his meek and lowly triumph proclaimed the spiritual nature of his kingdom. Every one's property ought therefore to be ready at his call, and every mouth opened to publish his praise. Notwithstanding the fairest pretences to the contrary, every ordinance should be inviolably observed according to his law. Yea, it is the great design of Christ and his gospel to reform the worship of God and the hearts and manners of men. And he acts with great majesty and power whenever he takes his work in hand. Christ will do great things for such as believe firmly, pray earnestly, and forgive injuries heartily. But, alas! how many prayers are lost for want of faith and a charitable frame towards others! Infinite is the danger of living fruitless under the means of salvation, and of being by rejecting Christ cast into endless perdition! But the more he displays his glory, holiness, and power, in his word or work, the more ungodly sinners, and especially hypocrites, set themselves against him. Yea, by every art, evasion, and wicked or wilful untruth, they labour to oppose him and his interests in the world. But none of their projects are hid from or can prevail against him.

CHAPTER XII. REFLECTIONS.—Great is the kindness of God in planting a church among men, and astonishing his patience towards obstinate and rebellious sinners. Thousands of the most shocking affronts to himself, his messengers, and messages, he endures before he executes his wrath upon them. Yea, marvellous above all is his grace in sending his Son to 14 And when they were come, they say unto him, "Master, we know that thou art true, and carest for no man: for thou regardest not the person of men, but teachest the way of God in truth: 'Is it lawful to give tribute to Cæsar,<sup>5</sup> or not?"

15 Shall we give, or shall we not give? But he, knowing their hypocrisy, said unto them, Why<sup>t</sup> tempt ye me? Bring me a penny,<sup>6</sup> that I may see it.

16 And they brought it. And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription? And they said unto him, Cæsar's.

17 And Jesus, answering, said unto them, Render<sup>u</sup> to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's. "And they marvelled at him.

18 ¶ Then* come unto him the Sadducees, which say there is no resurrection; and they asked him, saying, 19 Master, Moses wrote unto us, "If a man's brother die, and leave his wife behind him, and leave no children, that his <sup>2</sup>brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

20 Now there were seven brethren: and the first took a wife, and dying, left no seed.

21 And the second took her, and died; neither left he any seed: and the third likewise.

22 And the seven had her, and left no seed: last of all the woman died also.

23 In the resurrection therefore, when they shall rise, whose wife shall she be of them? for the seven had her to wife.

24 And Jesus answering said unto them, Do ye not therefore err, because "ye know not the scriptures,<sup>b</sup> neither "the power of God?

25 For when they shall rise from the dead, they neither marry nor are given in marriage; but are <sup>d</sup>as the angels which are in heaven.

26 And as touching the dead, that they rise; have ye not read in the book of Moses, "how in the bush<sup>7</sup> God spake unto him, saying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob?<sup>8</sup>

27 He is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living: "ye therefore do greatly err.

28 ¶ And<sup>h</sup> one of the scribes came, and having heard them reasoning together, and perceiving that he had answered them well, asked him, Which is the first commandment of all?

29 And Jesus answered him, The first of all 21 How in the bush.

The construction of the Greek seems to give 'the bush' as a mark of the place in the book of Moses,<sup>7</sup> from which our Lord quoted, rather than as the place whence God spoke: a mode of quotation and reference natural, if not necessary, before the introduction of the artificial form of chapters and verses.
See Ro. 11.2.—C.

22 It is important in these days of scepticism to observe that our Lord brings his proof of the doctrine of the resurrection from the Pentateuch, which he ascribes
to Moses as author, and whose authority he appeals to as unquestionable, because divine.—P.

8 The difference between the quotation in Matthew (ch. 22.
35) and Mark is very instructive. Matthew wrote for the Jews, who knew the whole passage, and he therefore, for the sake of brevity, the commandments is, 'Hear,<sup>9</sup> O Israel; the Lord our God is one Lord:

30 And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. This is the first commandment.

31 And the second is like, namely this, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these.

32 And the scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth: for <sup>k</sup>there is one God; and there is none other but he:

33 And to love him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbour as himself, <sup>l</sup>is more than all whole burnt-offerings and sacrifices.

34 And when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, he said unto him, "Thou art not <sup>1</sup>far from the kingdom of God.<sup>2</sup> And<sup>o</sup> no man after that durst ask him any question.

35 ¶ And<sup>p</sup> Jesus answered and said, while he taught in the temple, How say the scribes that Christ is the son of David?

36 For David himself said "by the Holy Ghost, The LORD said to my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool.<sup>3</sup>

37 David therefore himself calleth him Lord; and <sup>r</sup>whence is he then his son? And the common people heard him gladly.<sup>4</sup>

38 ¶ And he said unto them in his doctrine, "Beware of the scribes, which love to go in long clothing, and love salutations in the market-places,

39 And the chief seats in the synagogues, and the uppermost rooms at feasts;

40 Which<sup>t</sup> devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayers: "these shall receive greater damnation.

41 ¶ And<sup>v</sup> Jesus sat over against the treasury,<sup>5</sup> and beheld how the people cast <sup>6</sup>money into the treasury: and many that were rich cast in much.

42 And there came a certain poor widow, and she threw in two mites,<sup>7</sup> which make a farthing.

43 And he called unto him his disciples, and saith unto them, "Verily I say unto you, That this poor widow hath cast more in, than all they which have cast into the treasury:

seek and save such sinners, and call them to repentance! And just and unavoidable their ruin who reject him! But if some will tread on the Redeemer, God will make others to receive him, and bring forth fruits answerable to their privileges. And, in spite of all the rage of his enemies, Jesus shall be honoured, and his kingdom established—to the astonishment and joy of all those who have experienced his power and the influence of his grace in their hearts. But if any remain unconcerned, no wonder that at last they become exasperated against his message and ministers.—They who heartily hate one another more heartily unite against him and his cause. Nor are their designs ever more malignant than when they profess most kindness. Yet nothing can conceal their wickedness from God. Men often pretend a regard to the Scriptures that they may undermine their credit. And there is no error so extravagant but they who live ignorant of the Scriptures and the power of God may affirm. The word of revelation sets the just bounds to civil and religious concerns. It gives the clearest certainty of a general resurrection, makes the plainest discoveries of the eternal state, and honourably and delightfully connects our duties to God and to men. They who improve the light which God gives them bid fair to be rendered more knowing, or even led into all truth. Yea, babes in Christ understand more of the mystery of godliness than the graceless learned. Alas! that many are never more than almost Christians! An inordinate desire of human respect marks their carnal and unmortified heart. But the greater men's hypocrisy and wickedness the more terrible will be their condemnation.

CHAPTER XIII. REFLECTIONS.—If external privileges be abused they but aggravate our guilt and hasten our ruin, and national sins will bring on national 44 For all they did cast in of their abundance; but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even <sup>all</sup> her living.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Christ foretelleth the destruction of the temple: 9 the persecutions for the gospel: 10 that the gospel must be preached to all nations: 14 that great calamities shall happen to the Jews: 24 and the manner of his coming to judgment: 32 the hour whereof being known to none, every man is to watch and pray, that we be not found unprovided, when he cometh to each one particularly by death.

AND as<sup>a</sup> he went out of the temple, one of his disciples saith unto him, Master, see what manner of stones and what buildings are here!

2 And Jesus, answering, said unto him, Seest thou these great buildings? <sup>b</sup>there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

3 ¶ And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, over against the temple, <sup>c</sup>Peter and James and John and Andrew asked him <sup>d</sup>privately,<sup>1</sup>

4 Tell<sup>e</sup> us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign<sup>2</sup> when all these things shall be fulfilled?

5 And Jesus, answering them, began to say, Take<sup>g</sup> heed lest any man deceive you:

6 For<sup>h</sup> many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many.

7 And<sup>i</sup> when ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars, be ye not troubled: for such things must needs be; but <sup>j</sup>the end shall not be yet.

8 For<sup>k</sup> nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; and there shall be earthquakes in divers places, and there shall be famines and troubles: these are the beginnings of sorrows.<sup>3</sup>

9 But<sup>l</sup> take heed to yourselves: for they shall deliver you up to councils; and in the synagogues ye shall be beaten;<sup>4</sup> and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them.

10 And<sup>n</sup> the gospel must first be published among all nations.

11 But<sup>o</sup> when they shall lead you, and deliver you up, take no thought beforehand what ye shall speak, neither do ye premeditate; but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye: for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost.

12 Now<sup>p</sup> the brother shall betray the brother to death, and the father the son: and children shall rise up against their parents, and shall cause them to be put to death.

13 And <sup>q</sup>ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: <sup>r</sup>but he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

14 But<sup>s</sup> when ye shall see the abomination of

2 The apparent discrepancy between the questions in this place, and those given by Matthew (ch.24.3) is to be accounted for, not by any defect in the recollection of Mark, but by that guidance of Spirit whereby he was led to select such points as would be most intelligible to his Roman readers. See ch.12.20. Besides, it is not to be imagined when four persons put the questions, that all should employ exactly the same words. The Spirit, therefore, would direct the evangelist to choose, not the words Matthew had been directed to choose, but the words of any other of the four apostles more suited to the comprehension of the readers for whom the Gospel was first intended, as well as for the future edification of the church.—C.

17 But<sup>v</sup> woe to them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days!

18 And pray ye that your flight be not in the winter.

19 For<sup>x</sup> in those days shall be affliction, such as was not from the beginning of the creation which God created unto this time, neither shall be.

20 And<sup>y</sup> except that the Lord had shortened those days, no flesh should be saved: but for the elect's sake, whom he hath chosen, he hath shortened the days.

21 And<sup>z</sup> then if any man shall say to you, Lo, here is Christ; or, Lo, he is there: believe him not:

judgments. God is administering the universe in Jesus Christ. And great is his kindness in warning men before their contempt of himself and his gospel bring on them those temporal miseries which presage their eternal destruction. Kindly he chastens his people that they may be kept in mind of their own weakness; and graciously he warns them of their danger, and directs them how to conduct themselves for his honour and their own security. Safely he preserves through the worst times those who cling to him and walk in him. And many who persecute them owe their temporal preservation to them and their prayers.—If men bear his image they must expect hatred from the world, even from their nearest carnal relations. The enmity between the seed of the woman and the seed of the serpent shall never cease. But let them do their worst, God will cause his gospel to spread through the world, and will support his

MOUNTAINS OF JUDEA — SHOWING BIRTHPLACE OF JOHN THE BAPTIST.
[MARK, xiii : 14.]—In this view we have an excellent picture of the Judean mountains. We get an idea of the sweep of the hills, of the terraces of the mountains. About the center of the picture we see the olive groves, and then in the far distance, rising up from the side of the hill, we see a little village which, according to tradition, was the birthplace of John the Baptist. It was to this village that Mary went to see her cousin Elizabeth, remaining with her six months. Here John the Baptist grew up, and there is a church in his memory there to-day, called the Church of St. John in the Desert. The character of the place where John the Baptist was born and brought up is in line with the character of that great preacher of repentance. It is solemn and lonely and severe

BETHANY. [MARK, xiv : 3.]—There is no village in the world outside of Bethlehem, where our Savior was born, more attractive than the village of Bethany, where He so often sojourned with His friends, Lazarus and Mary and Martha. Here Jesus came to rest after the toil and conflicts of the day in Jerusalem. Here He found friends who understood Him and sympathized with Him; and His connection with this little village has endeared it to the hearts of the human race. Here took place the incident of the woman having the alabaster box of ointment, giving rise to an immortal lesson. There is nothing in its present appearance to win consideration for it. Because it was so often the home and resting-place of the Lord Jesus Christ is it so much loved and so often visited to-day. It is two miles from Jerusalem and on the road to Jericho.

34 For the Son of man is 'as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch.

35 Watch<sup>n</sup> ye therefore; for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning;

36 Lest coming suddenly, he find you sleeping.

37 And what I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch.<sup>p</sup>

CHAPTER XIV.

AFTER two<sup>a</sup> days was the feast of the passover, and of unleavened bread:<sup>1</sup> and the chief priests and the scribes sought how they might take him by craft, and put him to death.

2 But<sup>b</sup> they said, Not on the feast-day, lest there be an uproar of the people.

3 ¶ And<sup>c</sup> being in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper, as he sat at meat, there came a woman having an alabaster-box of ointment of spikenard,<sup>2</sup> very precious; and she brake the box,<sup>3</sup> and poured it on his head.<sup>4</sup>

4 And<sup>d</sup> there were some that had indignation within themselves, and said, Why was this waste of the ointment made?

5 For it might have been sold for more than three hundred pence,<sup>5</sup> and have been given to the poor. And they murmured against her.

6 And Jesus said, Let her alone; why trouble ye her? she hath wrought a good work on me.

7 For<sup>h</sup> ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good: but me ye have not always.

8 She hath done what she could:<sup>6</sup> she is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying.

9 Verily I say unto you, Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this also that she hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her.

10 ¶ And<sup>k</sup> Judas Iscariot, one of the twelve, went unto the chief priests, to betray him unto them.<sup>7</sup>

11 And when they heard it, they were glad, and promised to give him money. And he sought how he might conveniently betray him.

12 ¶ And<sup>n</sup> the first day of unleavened bread, when they killed<sup>8</sup> the passover, his disciples faithful servants and followers; guide them by his counsel while here, and afterwards receive them to glory. And nothing is more proper to preserve us steady and faithful in evil times than constant watchfulness and fervent prayer. In so doing we shall be able, at Jesus' tribunal, to give our account with joy, and not with grief.

e She brake the box.

The word translated brake, signifies 'to rub together, to crush, to break in pieces.'

Some take it here to signify 'to shake up'—translating 'very, precious' by 'liquid,' as on the margin.

The breaking can scarcely be spoken of the box itself; but, most probably, is spoken of the envelope or case in which the box was inclosed, or the seal or cement by which it was secured.

The idea of shaking being necessary to bring it into a proper state of liquidity, as some suppose, proceeds upon inattention to the low temperature at which such oils are perfectly liquefied, and the advanced state of the year in the warm climate of Palestine.—C.

l This is one of those minute and delicate details which I have often noted as characteristic of Mark.

It completes the picture. Mary had pondered, probably long and anxiously, how she could most palpably show her esteem and devotion to Jesus.

She procured this precious ointment—perhaps spending her all upon it, and poured it upon her beloved Lord.

She may have had some dim foresight of his death; and her act may have been one of faith as well as devotion. However this may be, she did all in her power to testify her supreme love and honour for the Messiah; so he understood and appreciated it; and so he has proclaimed it to all generations in these striking words recorded by Mark:—

'She hath done what she could.'—P.

CHAPTER XIV. REFLECTIONS.—Redeeming love accepted in the heart inflames it with the strongest gratitude. Nothing is thought too costly to manifest regard to the Redeemer. And they that honour him shall be sufficiently vindicated and honoured; wherever the fame of Jesus goes, thither shall theirs go at last.

said unto him, Where wilt thou that we go and prepare, that thou mayest eat the passover?

13 And he sendeth forth two of his disciples, and saith unto them, Go ye into the city, and there shall meet you a man bearing a pitcher of water: follow him.

14 And whersoever he shall go in, say ye to the good-man of the house, The Master saith, Where is the guest-chamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples?

15 And he will show you a large upper room furnished and prepared: there make ready for us.

16 And his disciples went forth, and came into the city, and found as he had said unto them: and they made ready the passover.<sup>1</sup>

17 And in the evening he cometh with the twelve.

18 And as they sat and did eat, Jesus said, Verily I say unto you, One of you which eateth with me shall betray me.

19 And they began to be sorrowful, and to say unto him one by one, Is it I? and another said, Is it I?

20 And he answered and said unto them, It is one of the twelve, that dippeth with me in the dish.<sup>2</sup>

21 The Son of man indeed goeth, as it is written of him: but woe to that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! good were it for that man if he had never been born.

22 ¶ And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave to them, and said, Take, eat; this is my body.

23 And he took the cup; and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them: and they all drank of it.

24 And he said unto them, This is my blood of the new testament,<sup>5</sup> which is shed for many.

25 Verily I say unto you, I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it new in the kingdom of God.<sup>6</sup>

26 ¶ And when they had sung an hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives.

27 And Jesus saith unto them

GARDEN OF GETHSEMANE. [MARK, xiv: 32]—Between Jerusalem and the Mount of Olives, in the valley of the Kedron, there is a place that no one ever fails to visit while in Palestine—it is the Garden of Gethsemane. There is about an acre of ground enclosed by a fence, and an old olive tree that is said to date from the time of Christ himself, and flowers of all varieties beautifully cultivated and kept by the faithful and devoted monks. Here it was that our Savior met his disciples for the last conference and prayer before the Crucifixion. One cannot enter and return from this garden without being a tenderer and better man—something here appeals to the highest and deepest sentiments within the human heart. The flowers which grow in this sacred enclosure are cut by the monks and given in small bouquets to the tourists.

31 But<sup>n</sup> he spake the more vehemently, If I should die with thee, I will not deny thee in any wise. <sup>o</sup>Likewise also said they all.

32 ¶ And<sup>p</sup> they came to a place which was named Gethsemane: and he saith to his disciples, Sit ye here, while I <sup>q</sup>shall pray.

33 And he taketh with him <sup>r</sup>Peter and James and John, and began to be <sup>s</sup>sore amazed, and to be very heavy;

34 And saith unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death: tarry ye here, and watch.<sup>t</sup>

35 And he went forward a little, and <sup>u</sup>fell on the ground, and prayed that, if it were possible, the hour might pass from him.

36 And<sup>v</sup> he said, Abba,<sup>9</sup> Father, <sup>w</sup>all things are possible unto thee; <sup>x</sup>take away this cup from me: nevertheless, not what I will, but what thou wilt.

37 And he cometh, and findeth them sleeping, and saith unto Peter, Simon, sleepest thou? couldest<sup>z</sup> not thou watch one hour?

38 Watch<sup>a</sup> ye, and pray, lest ye enter into temptation. <sup>b</sup>The spirit truly is ready, but the flesh is weak.

39 And <sup>c</sup>again he went away, and prayed, and spake the same words.

40 And when he returned, he found them asleep<sup>d</sup> again, (for their eyes were heavy,) neither wist they what to answer him.

41 And he cometh the third time, and saith unto them, <sup>e</sup>Sleep on now, and take your rest: it<sup>9</sup> is enough, the hour is come: behold, the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

42 Rise up, let us go; lo, he that betrayeth me is at hand.

43 ¶ And<sup>h</sup> immediately, while he yet spake, cometh Judas, one of the twelve, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests and the scribes and the elders.

44 And he that betrayed him had given them a token, saying, Whomsoever <sup>i</sup>I shall kiss, that same is he: take him, and lead him away safely.

45 And as soon as he was come, he goeth straightway to him, and saith, Master,<sup>1</sup> Master;<sup>2</sup> and kissed him.

46 And<sup>j</sup> they laid their hands on him, and took him.

<sup>w</sup> Abba, in the Syriac, signifies father; and was the title given to a father by those who were born Jews and were free. Hence it was not allowed for a child born of a slave or proselyte of the gate, and a Jew, to call his father abba; because, among the Jews, the condition of the children depending either upon the real or adopted mother, none were reputed Jews unless born of a Jewish mother or proselyte of the covenant. Neither were children free if their mother was a slave, Ga. 4. 24. But though on coming into the world Christ took upon him 'the form of a servant,' yet being still 'God's dear Son,' he here addresses him by the title peculiar to one 'free born,' and cries to him, in the hours of agony inexpressible, 'Abba, the Father!'—C.

<sup>m</sup> Master, Master. But Matthew says his words were 'Hail, Master.' Is there not, therefore, either a contradiction between the two, or an error in the one or the other? or at least is there not here a clear proof that the inspiration was not verbal; for verbal inspiration would require perfect agreement between two or more narratives of the same event—it merely requires perfect truth in each. Judas must have repeated his salutation—'Hail, Master'—a thing most natural. Matthew records the one address, 'Hail, Master'; Mark omits the 'Hail,' and records not all Judas said, but repeats 'Master, Master,' which he actually did say. Why the Holy Spirit directed these different selections of words we cannot positively tell. The reason, most probably, lay in the suitability of the one address to the customs of the Jews, and of the other to those of the Romans.—C.

Conjecture is, at all times, a doubtful guide, and seldom to be followed; yet here, where it cannot do an injury, and may afford a pleasing reflection, we would venture to suggest the possibility at least that this may have been that 'young man' whom Jesus loved, Mat. 10. 20; ch. 10. 21, and who, repenting of his worldly sorrow (ch. 10. 21), had so far complied with our Lord's direction as to have reduced himself to the mere loose garment he wore, and who now literally and absolutely fulfils the injunction by gladly parting with the last remnant of the property which he once so dearly loved. But whoever he was, he shows by his example what a man will give up for the safety of his body. What, then, should we not renounce for the salvation of our souls?—C.

<sup>z</sup> Son of the Blessed. The apparent discrepancy between this question, and the consequent objection either to the historic accuracy of the evangelist, or the verbal inspiration of this Gospel, will be solved and answered as in the case of ver. 45.

In this case an additional answer to the objection presents itself. The high-priest spoke, most probably, in a dialect of the Syriac, the evangelists translated into Greek, a language rich in words; and, for wise reasons, the Spirit of God may have directed each evangelist to a different, but equivalent translation of the same word.—C.

50 And<sup>n</sup> they all forsook him, and fled.

51 And there followed him a certain young man,<sup>3</sup> having a linen cloth cast about his naked body; and the young men laid hold on him:

53 ¶ And<sup>p</sup> they led Jesus away to the high-priest: and with him were assembled all the chief priests and the elders and the scribes.

54 And<sup>q</sup> Peter followed him afar off, even into the palace of the high-priest: and he sat with the servants, and warmed himself at the fire.

55 And<sup>r</sup> the chief priests and all the council sought for witness against Jesus to put him to death; and <sup>s</sup>found none.

56 For many bare false witness against him, but their witness agreed not together.

57 And there arose certain, and bare false witness against him, saying, 58 We heard him say, <sup>t</sup>I will destroy this temple that is made with hands, and within three days I will build another made without hands.

59 But neither so did their witness agree together.

60 And <sup>u</sup>the high-priest stood up in the midst, and asked Jesus, saying, Answerest thou nothing? What is it which these witness against thee?

61 But<sup>v</sup> he held his peace, and answered nothing. Again the high-priest asked him, and said unto him, Art thou <sup>w</sup>the Christ, the Son of the Blessed?<sup>5</sup>

62 And Jesus said, I am: <sup>x</sup>and ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

63 Then the high-priest <sup>y</sup>rent his clothes, and saith, What need we any further witnesses?

64 Ye have heard <sup>z</sup>the blasphemy: what think ye? And they all condemned him to be guilty of death.

65 And<sup>b</sup> some began to spit on him, and to cover his face, and to buffet him, and to say unto him, Prophecy: and the servants did strike him with the palms of their hands.

66 ¶ And<sup>c</sup> as Peter was beneath in the palace, there cometh one of <sup>d</sup>the maids of the high-priest:

67 And when she saw Peter warming himself, she looked upon him, and said, And thou also wast with Jesus <sup>e</sup>of Nazareth.

Jewish rulers plot to murder the Messiah, on whom hangs the life, the eternal salvation, of millions unnumbered; for a paltry bribe Judas deliberately be-

CHAPTER XV.

1 Jesus is brought bound, and accused before Pilate. 15 Upon the clamours of the common people, the murderer Barabbas is loosed, and Jesus delivered up to be crucified. 17 He is crowned with thorns, 19 spit on, and mocked: 21 fainteth in bearing his cross: 27 hangeth between two thieves: 29 suffereth the triumphing reproaches of the Jews: 39 but confessed by the centurion to be the Son of God: 43 and is honourably buried by Joseph.

AND straightway<sup>a</sup> in the morning the chief priests held a consultation with the elders and scribes and the whole council, and bound Jesus, and carried him away, and delivered him to Pilate.

2 And<sup>b</sup> Pilate asked him, Art thou the King of the Jews? And he, answering, said unto him, Thou sayest it.

3 And<sup>c</sup> the chief priests accused him of many things: but he answered nothing.<sup>1</sup>

4 And<sup>d</sup> Pilate asked him again, saying, Answerest thou nothing? Behold how many things they witness against thee.

5 But Jesus yet answered nothing;<sup>2</sup> so that Pilate marvelled.

6 ¶ Now<sup>e</sup> at that feast he released unto them one prisoner, whomsoever they desired.

7 And<sup>f</sup> there was one named Barabbas, which lay bound with them that had made insurrection with him, who had committed murder in the insurrection.

8 And the multitude, crying aloud, began to desire him to do as he had ever done unto them.<sup>3</sup>

9 But Pilate answered them, saying, <sup>h</sup>Will ye that I release unto you the King of the Jews?

10 For he knew that the chief priests had delivered him <sup>i</sup>for envy.

e ch. 14. 61. Mat. 26. 62; 27. 13, 14. Jn. 19. 9, 10. 15. 53, 57.
f This and the clause noticed in ver. 3 seems at variance with the answer given in ver. 2. To obviate the apparent contradiction, Campbell and others translate the words, 'he answered no more.' But a simpler solution presents itself in the fact, that he answered Pilate (ver. 2), but to the accusations of the chief priests (ver. 3) he answered nothing.—C.

l An oriental palace consists of at least two courts, with chambers ranged round, and opening into them. The outer court is usually the place of reception, and of hearing and judging cases. In this court our Lord was examined, and in it a fire was kindled, round which stood the servants and soldiers with Peter among them. An entry or passage, here called 'the porch,' opened from the court on the street. 'Peter's first denial took place at the fire in the middle of the court, on his being questioned by the female porter. Peter then retreats into the passage leading to the street, where he is again questioned, and makes his second denial. The evangelists differ as to the person who questioned him. Mark says, 'the same maid;' Matthew, 'another maid;' Luke, 'another person;' John, 'they said.' The truth is, several persons interrogated him, as was very natural under the circumstances. The third denial took place an hour after, within the court, when our Lord and Peter could see each other. Here Matthew and Mark speak of several interrogators; Luke has 'some other man;' John specifies the servant of the high-priest. All are correct. Each evangelist records what struck himself. Mark says the cock crew twice; the other evangelists only speak of once. There is no discrepancy. Mark records with greater minuteness of detail.—P.

11 But<sup>i</sup> the chief priests moved the people, that he should rather release Barabbas unto them.

12 And Pilate answered, and said again unto them, What will ye then that I shall do unto him whom ye call the <sup>k</sup>King of the Jews?

13 And they cried out again, Crucify him.

14 Then Pilate said unto them, <sup>l</sup>Why, what evil hath he done? <sup>n</sup>And they cried out the more exceedingly, Crucify him.

15 And<sup>o</sup> so Pilate, willing to content the people, released Barabbas unto them, and delivered Jesus, when he had scourged him, to be crucified.

of fervent and frequent prayer in a time of trouble. Nothing is worse than slothfulness therein. And none are more active instruments of hell than apostates from Christ. No fall of eminent professors ought to make us stumble at the ways of Christ. Nor need we think it strange though, notwithstanding our innocence, we should be treated as the vilest miscreants; or though our nearest relations and most intimate friends should desert us, or turn our inveterate opposers. Let us, in silent patience, possess our souls. If God be glorified, if the Scripture be fulfilled, if the church be edified, and if God at last rise up to vindicate us, it is enough; and if, through self-confidence, we have denied our Redeemer, let us without delay think thereon, and weep.

CHAPTER XV. REFLECTIONS.—What shocking wickedness is it for men, for the professed people of God, to calumniate, to persecute, to deride, to murder the meek, the innocent, the divine Jesus, the Saviour of mankind! It was strange that the HOSANNAS of the mob should be so quickly turned into murderous clamours and cruel derisions!—That, contrary to reason, contrary to proof, contrary to convictions, almost every one should concur to abuse our gracious

Redeemer! Inexpressible were his sufferings from men, from devils, and from every other source! Alas! how vilified was his character, how tormented his body, while his soul was deserted and distressed. And yet with astonishing and silent resignation he bore all for the salvation of his betrayers and murderers. What honourable attestations Providence procured for him in the deepest debasement! Prodiges attended his death: Pilate, his judge, repeatedly declared him innocent, and the Jewish Messiah; and the centurion acknowledged him to be the Son of God. Joseph of Arimathea boldly begged and honourably buried his wagging their heads, and saying, Ah, thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, 30 Save thyself, and come down from the cross.

31 Likewise also the chief priests, mocking, said among themselves with the scribes, He saved others; himself he cannot save.

32 Let Christ the King of Israel descend now from the cross, that we may see, and believe. And they that were crucified with him reviled him.

33 ¶ And when the sixth hour was come, there was darkness over the whole land until the ninth hour.

34 And at the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani? which is, being interpreted, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?

35 And some of them that stood by, when they heard it, said, Behold, he calleth Elias.

36 And one ran and filled a sponge full of vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink, saying, Let alone; let us see whether Elias will come to take him down.

37 And Jesus cried with a loud voice, and gave up the ghost.

38 ¶ And the vail of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom.

39 ¶ And when the centurion, which stood over against him, saw that he so cried out, and gave up the ghost, he said, Truly this man was the Son of God.

40 There were also women looking on afar off; among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the less, and of Joses, and Salome;

41 (Who also, when he was in Galilee, followed him, and ministered unto him;) and many other women which came up with him unto Jerusalem.

42 ¶ And now when the even was come, because it was the Preparation, that is, the day before the sabbath, 43 Joseph of Arimathea, an honourable counsellor, which also waited for the kingdom of God, came, and went in boldly unto Pilate, and craved the body of Jesus.

44 And Pilate marvelled if he were already dead: and calling unto him the centurion, he asked him whether he had been any while dead.

45 And when he knew it of the centurion, he gave the body to Joseph.

46 And he bought fine linen, and took him down, and wrapped him in the linen, and laid

Women looking on afar off. In Jn. xix. it is said that Mary Magdalene, &c., 'stood by the cross.'

This, however, is not a contradiction of statement, but a mere difference as to time. The women stood by the cross till Jesus died; and when the unfeeling soldiers came to break the legs of the sufferers (Jn. 19. 32), they then removed and 'stood looking on afar off.'

The whole structure of the passage here appears to show that the purchase of the spices was made after the close of the Sabbath, on the same evening—the Sabbath terminating at sunset.

Luke, however, says in connection with the narrative of the burial of our Lord and the women following the body to the tomb, that 'they returned and prepared spices and ointments, and rested the Sabbath-day according to the commandment.'

Luke is not so minute in his details as Mark; he here states the general facts without regard to the order in which they took place.—P.

Peter, it is most likely, would now consider himself unworthy the name of disciple, seeing he had not done what none of the rest (nay, what not even Judas) had done—first denied positively—then denied contemptuously—and, lastly, forsworn his Master!

He is, therefore, specially mentioned, to afford him the earliest assurance of his Lord's compassion and pardon, and of his speedy restoration to the apostolic office, he had justly forfeited by his instability.—C.

7 Mark's narrative of the resurrection breaks off abruptly at this place. No reason can be assigned for it. The evangelist is not so minute in this part of his history as we find him in the earlier portions. Had we no other information, it would appear as if the women never delivered Christ's message; the fact is, however, that they communicated with the disciples almost immediately. It is by combining the four Gospels we get a clear and full view of the incidents of the resurrection.—P.

8 It will appear even to a cursory reader that this last section of the Gospel is a fragment unconnected with what precedes, and wanting in that definiteness which elsewhere characterizes Mark.

It is not found in some ancient MSS., and hence a few critics have pronounced it spurious. The weight of evidence is unquestionably in its favour, and I have no hesitation in regarding it as genuine. The probability is that Mark added it to his Gospel at a later period.—P.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 An angel declareth the resurrection of Christ to three women. 9 Christ himself appeareth to Mary Magdalene; 12 to two of his disciples going into the country; 14 then to the apostles, 15 whom he sendeth forth to preach the gospel: 19 and ascendeth into heaven.

AND when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him.<sup>1</sup>

2 And very early in the morning, the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun.

3 And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?<sup>3</sup>

4 And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great.

5 And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted.<sup>5</sup>

6 And he saith unto them, Be not affrighted: ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: he is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him.

7 But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him, as he said unto you.

8 And they went out quickly, and fled from the sepulchre; for they trembled and were amazed: neither said they any thing to any man; for they were afraid.<sup>7</sup>

9 ¶ Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils.<sup>8</sup>

10 And she went and told them that had been with him, as they mourned and wept.

11 And they, when they had heard that he was alive, and had been seen of her, believed not.

12 ¶ After that he appeared in another form unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country.

13 And they went and told it unto the residue; neither believed they them.

14 ¶ Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat,<sup>1</sup> and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen.

corpse. The women attended in order to embalm him. And shall not my soul love and honour him who so loved me and gave himself for me!

CHAPTER XVI. Ver. 6. We seek Jesus of Nazareth. A pious mind—which is always the same with a truly philosophical mind—will feel pleasure in observing that an angel from heaven is well acquainted with the name of a humble and despised town upon earth, of which he makes special and honourable mention, as the birthplace of Jesus. And let every humble, though, it may be, despised believer, remember that the contrite heart receives from the Saviour the honour of being recorded not only as his birthplace, but his home. See Ga. 4. 19; Jn. 14. 23; Re. 3. 20. C.

culties which they know not how to surmount, they go forward depending on God, and find them removed; and readily, amidst fear and confusion, they obey the heavenly direction.—Happy are they who have a risen Redeemer as theirs, with all mercy in his heart and all power in his hand! How marvellous his love in appearing first to Mary Magdalene, who had been lately so notorious a sinner; and so early to disciples, who had so shamefully deserted him! How careful was he to establish the truth of his resurrection by repeated appearances to his incredulous followers! He conquered their unreasonable diffidence, and shamed them out of their unbelief. But great was his grace in granting his apostles an unlimited commission to preach the gospel in all the world, and miraculous powers to attest it. And astonishing is his glory in heaven, and the blessed effects of it in the descent of his Spirit.—Let me now then believe the gospel to the saving of my soul. Let my faith and hope be in God through him. Let me rejoice in my risen, my ascended Saviour; and eagerly ask, and abundantly receive, the gifts which he received for men, even for the rebellious. And let my affections be set on things above, where Jesus is at the right hand of God.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF MARK.

Biography is, certainly, one of the most efficient modes of instruction; for by gratifying curiosity, it lightens study, and excites attention, while it conveys and fixes precept by the visible power of example. In the biographies, however, composed by worldly men—nay, sometimes in those composed by religious men—minute and trivial details are often so extended as to beget a fear that the idolatry of friendship has rather attempted to set up an object of admiration and worship, than to record important facts either for warning against error and sin, or instruction in truth and righteousness.

Among the numerous internal evidences of the divine origin of the Scriptures, their biographies hold a conspicuous place, their chief characteristics being truth, concerning good or evil, and brevity. Had the life of our Lord been ‘a cunningly devised fable,’ it contains materials for many volumes, which literary vanity never could have compressed into four brief tracts, such as the Gospels literally are. This observation applies in a particular manner to the Gospel by Mark, which reduces the whole ministerial life of the most remarkable character that ever appeared on earth to sixteen chapters! Mark was not himself, so far as appears, a constant companion of our Lord, and so must have received several of his narratives, and especially whatever he records of our Lord’s private discourses, from one of the twelve apostles, who is believed to have been Peter. That the style and contents of his Gospel are somewhat similar to those of Matthew, is certain; yet are there differences, both of omission and addition, to prove that he was no copyist; and especially there are some marks of style that prove the distinct originality of Mark,—the Spirit of God making use of the various styles of men—the words being his own—just as in nature God manifests a continued variety, though that boundless variety unites in one witness to his wisdom, power, and goodness.

As an example of Mark’s peculiarity of style, one word may be selected, the word εὐθέως, immediately; which occurs in Matthew 15 times, in Luke 8 times, in John 4 times, in Acts 9 times, and in Mark no less than 39 times! A peculiarity so striking that were it certain that the evangelist was that John Mark who was servant to Paul and Barnabas (Ac. 15. 37-39), his so frequent use of the word might be looked upon as a result and memorial of that ready and habitual attention with which he was accustomed to reply to their directions.

That he wrote for Gentile strangers is obvious from the following, among other evidences. 1. When he mentions the Jordan (ch. i. 5), the appellation river is added. 2. As the Romans could not understand the Jewish phrase ‘defiled’ hands, he adds, parenthetically, the description ‘unwashen’ (ch. 7. 2). 3. When he uses the word ‘corban’ (ch. 7. 11), he immediately subjoins the interpretation, ‘that is, gift.’ 4. In speaking of our Lord he never styles him ‘Son of man,’ which the Jews could interpret from Daniel (ch. 7. 13), but ‘Son of God,’ by which the Gentiles might comprehend his deity.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO SAINT LUKE.

Luke was a physician, Col. 4. 14: and attended Paul about seventeen years after his coming into Macedonia, Ac. 16. 10: probably till his death, 2 Ti. 4. 11. He wrote this history of the life of Christ, perhaps about twenty-two, or rather thirty years after his ascension; and includes therein a multitude of things, not mentioned by Matthew nor Mark, concerning the birth and private life of John the Baptist and Jesus Christ, ch. i. ii.; Christ’s genealogy, ch. iii.; his preaching and persecution at Nazareth, ch. iv.; his sermon on the plain, ch. vi.; his raising the widow’s son, and parable of the debtors, ch. vii.; his mission of the seventy; direction of the lawyer as to the way of eternal life; parable of the Samaritan, and reproof of Martha, ch. x.; his directions to pray; parable of the importunate friend, ch. xi.; and of the rich fool, ch. xii.; his alarm to repentance, &c.; his parable of the barren fig-tree; his healing the deformed woman, ch. xiii.; his cure of the dropsy; parables of the supper, builder, and king intending to make war, ch. xiv.; his parables of the lost sheep, piece of silver, younger son, unjust steward, and of Lazarus, ch. xv. xvi.; his parable of the servant; his healing ten lepers; his warning as to the awful manner of setting up his kingdom, ch. xvii.; his parable of the importunate widow, and of the Pharisee and publican, ch. xviii.; the conversion of Zaccheus; parable of the pounds; mournful prediction of Jerusalem’s ruin, ch. xix.; his abuse by Herod, ch. xxiii.; and conversation with the disciples going to Emmaus; and with the eleven, &c., ch. xxiv.

The origin and object of Luke’s Gospel are stated by himself. Others had taken in hand to draw up narratives of our Lord’s life and labours, he resolved to write a more complete history. The other narratives to which he refers were not the canonical Gospels; they appear to have been fragmentary biographies written without divine authority, and consequently imperfect, and probably erroneous. Luke, with these before him, undertook in the interests of the church, and under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, to draw up a full and authentic narrative. He was not himself an eye-witness of Christ’s labours; but he received his information from

CHURCH OF ST. JOHN IN THE DESERT. [LUKE, i: 5.]—The Church of St. John is built over the exact spot where it is supposed once stood the house in which lived Zachariah and Elizabeth. This is at Ain Karim. We have a distant view of this village from the Jerusalem road lying indistinct in the midst of the Judean mountains. Now we are on the very spot that is sacred to the memory of Elizabeth and Zachariah and John the Baptist. This church was built by the affection and piety of the saints of the early ages. For hundreds of years monks and priests and unworlily Christians found pleasure in living in the neighborhood of this sacred place. It is about nine miles from Jerusalem. Here Mary came from Nazareth and spent six months with her cousin Elizabeth.

those who were; he arranged his materials and constructed his narrative with philosophic skill; and his Gospel is in some respects historically more complete than any of the others. It gives details of the events preceding and accompanying the birth of our Lord which we do not find elsewhere, and which were probably obtained from the Virgin Mary. It unfolds more fully some of Christ's discourses and parables; it enlarges upon the great facts of the resurrection; and it supplies the only account we possess in the Gospels of the last earthly interview between Christ and the apostles at the ascension. Luke attached himself specially to Paul; joining him at Troas on the eve of his entrance into Greece, he remained with him during the greater number of his later missionary journeys. He accompanied him to Jerusalem, where he was seized by the Jews; he remained with him at Cæsarea; he went with him to Rome, and was his companion during a long imprisonment. The character of Paul's oral teachings, the varied nationalities of the churches he founded, his logical acumen and burning eloquence—all contributed more or less to give this Gospel its distinctive form, and to make it equally applicable and acceptable to Jewish and Gentile converts. FORASMUCH as many<sup>1</sup> have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of <sup>a</sup>those things which are most surely believed among us,

2 Even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were <sup>b</sup>eye-witnesses, and ministers<sup>c</sup> of the word;

3 It<sup>d</sup> seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first,<sup>2</sup> to write unto thee in <sup>e</sup>order, <sup>f</sup>most excellent Theophilus,

4 That<sup>h</sup> thou mightest know the certainty of those things wherein thou hast been instructed.

5 THERE was, <sup>i</sup>in the days of Herod the king of Judea, a certain priest named Zacharias, <sup>j</sup>of the course of Abia:<sup>3</sup> and his wife was of the daughters of Aaron, and her name was Elisabeth.

6 And<sup>k</sup> they were both righteous before God,<sup>4</sup> walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord,<sup>5</sup> blameless.<sup>6</sup>

7 And<sup>l</sup> they had no child, because that Elisabeth was barren, and they both were now well stricken in years.

8 And it came to pass, that while <sup>m</sup>he executed the priest's office before God in the order of his course,

9 According<sup>o</sup> to the custom of the priest's office, his lot was to burn incense when he went into the temple of the Lord.<sup>7</sup>

10 And<sup>p</sup> the whole multitude of the people were praying without, at the time of incense.

11 And<sup>q</sup> there appeared unto him an angel of the Lord, standing on the right side of <sup>r</sup>the altar of incense.

12 And when Zacharias saw <sup>s</sup>him, <sup>t</sup>he was troubled, and fear fell upon him.

13 But the angel said unto him, <sup>u</sup>Fear not, Zacharias: <sup>v</sup>for thy prayer<sup>8</sup> is heard; and thy wife Elisabeth shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John.

e By this phrase Luke intends not so much divine guidance and inspiration (though these are not necessarily excluded), as personal research, and thorough examination of all trustworthy sources. This is important, for it illustrates a principle in the publication of the divine Word. It is this: that wherever knowledge can be gained by human means, supernatural revelation is not employed.—P.

this word that many accounts had already been published in Luke's time, of the life and labours of Christ. It seems also to me, from ver. 4. that none of these were satisfactory, and consequently Luke cannot here refer to the canonical Gospels. It is questionable whether he ever saw, or even heard of, any of the other Gospels before writing his own. None of the narratives referred to by Luke have come down to us. The works known as apocryphal, and which profess to give histories of our Lord, are of a much later date.—P.

16 And<sup>p</sup> many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God.

17 And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient <sup>q</sup>to the <sup>r</sup>wisdom of the just;<sup>3</sup> to make ready a people prepared for <sup>s</sup>the Lord.

18 ¶ And Zacharias said unto the angel, <sup>t</sup>Whereby shall I know this? for I am an old man, and my wife well stricken in years.

19 And the angel, answering, said unto him, <sup>u</sup>I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God; and am sent to speak unto thee, and to show thee these glad tidings.

20 And, behold, <sup>v</sup>thou shalt be dumb, and not able to speak, until the day that these things shall be performed, <sup>w</sup>because thou believest not my words, which shall be fulfilled in their season.<sup>4</sup>

21 And the people <sup>x</sup>waited<sup>6</sup> for Zacharias, and marvelled that he tarried so long in the temple.

22 And when he came out, he could not speak unto them: and they perceived that he had seen a vision in the temple; for he beckoned unto them, and remained speechless.

23 And it came to pass, that, as soon as the <sup>y</sup>days of his ministration were accomplished, he departed to his own house.

24 ¶ And after those days, his wife Elisabeth <sup>z</sup>conceived, and hid herself five months, saying, 25 Thus hath the Lord dealt with me, in the days wherein <sup>a</sup>he looked on me, to take away my reproach among men.

26 ¶ And in the <sup>b</sup>sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God, unto <sup>c</sup>a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, 27 To<sup>d</sup> a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 16, 17. By his doctrine and example he shall be a happy instrument, in the hand of the Spirit, of turning many from their iniquities and false opinions to the Messiah. In his coarse and severe manner of life, and by his plentiful endowment with the Holy Spirit, he shall resemble the ancient Elijah; and shall be the means of reconciling men one to another, even Jews to Gentiles; yea, he shall make the most stubborn sinners wise unto salvation, and, by conviction of sin, prepare them to receive the divine Saviour. 51-53. He has marvellously exerted his power in helping and showing mercy to all people, in casting down self-righteous and self-sufficient sinners, and in putting high honours upon the poor and debased. He has granted the desire of such as were earnestly inquiring after a Saviour, and enriched them with his favour; but has denied the blessings of his kingdom to such as are rich in this world, or abound in self-confidence and self-conceit. 68. Let all praise, honour, and blessing be ascribed to that God who, after a long apparent neglect of his people, is now, in infinite kindness, sending his Son to save and redeem them, and who is now raising up his long-promised Messiah to exalt and protect his pious ones, and to cast down their

NAZARETH FROM THE LATIN MOUNT. [LUKE, i:26.]—We have here an excellent view of Nazareth. From the Latin Mount we see the roads and camel paths and hills about the city, with the olive trees and residences at the lower part of the city, and get a beautiful view of one of the loveliest spots under the sun. A view all the more attractive because we know, in addition to the natural features which make it lovely, the eyes of our Savior often beheld it. Perhaps there is not a hill or valley or spot about this, the city of His boyhood, that He did not pass over time and again. The tents that look so small, above the Greek Church of the Annunciation, were the tents of the tourists who passed through Palestine to get the pictures which illustrate this New Testament. They were here from the 5th to the 8th of May, 1894.

29 And when she saw him, <sup>1</sup>she was troubled<sup>9</sup> at his saying, and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this should be.

30 And the angel said unto her, <sup>1</sup>Fear not, Mary; for thou hast found favour with God.

31 And, <sup>1</sup>behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS.

32 He<sup>t</sup> shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him <sup>1</sup>the throne of his father David:<sup>1</sup>

33 And<sup>o</sup> he shall reign upon the house of Jacob<sup>o</sup> for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

34 Then said Mary unto the angel, <sup>1</sup>How shall this be, seeing I know not a man?<sup>2</sup>

35 And the angel answered and said unto her, <sup>1</sup>The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called <sup>1</sup>the Son of God.

36 And, <sup>1</sup>behold, thy cousin Elisabeth, she hath also conceived a son in her old age: and this is the sixth month with her who was called barren.

37 For <sup>1</sup>with God nothing shall be impossible.

38 And Mary said, <sup>1</sup>Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word.<sup>3</sup> And the angel departed from her.

39 ¶ And Mary arose in those days, and went into the <sup>1</sup>hill country with haste, into a city of <sup>1</sup>Judah;<sup>5</sup>

40 And entered into the house of Zacharias, and saluted Elisabeth.

42 And she spake out with a loud voice, and said, <sup>1</sup>Blessed art thou among women, and blessed<sup>i</sup> is the fruit of thy womb.

enemies, spiritual or temporal; 74, 75, that being, by his love, power, and grace, redeemed from sin, Satan, and the world, we may, while we live, constantly serve God, without slavish fear of him, or tormenting fear of our enemies, in all the duties of piety, righteousness, and sobriety, as in his sight, and depending on him for assistance and gracious reward. 76-79. Thou shalt be the prophetic forerunner of the incarnate God the Messiah, to publish his appearance, and to direct and excite men to receive him; to show them that they must be saved, not by their own legal righteousness, but by the remission of their sins through Jesus' blood, according to the loving, tender and compassionate kindness of God, by which Christ, the heavenly Sun of Righteousness, comes into our world, to enlighten, revive, and save, not only us Jews, but also the Gentiles, who have been long destitute of the means of grace, and enveloped with ignorance, error, and wickedness; and to direct us to the true methods of enjoying peace with God, with our own consciences, and our neighbours, till we arrive at perfect and everlasting happiness.

Ver. 3. Theophilus. Who this person was does not appear; and historic celebrity is neither essential nor important to the children of God. That he was a real and not a fictitious personage is, however, apparent; because no man 'speaking by the Spirit of God' could call an imaginary character to receive or patronize, as it were, a real history. C.

Ver. 15. And he shall be filled, &c. A beautiful and blessed example of the work of the Spirit being contemporaneous with the moment, not merely of birth, but of living existence, as the original signifies. We once knew a philosopher to say, 'That he had known but one who had led him to question the doctrine of original sin.' The observation was striking and candid, but not just. The beauty of a personal holiness, that he could not deny, should have led him not to doubt original sin, but to admire the early, and wonderful, and effectual working of the Spirit of God. C.

Ver. 19. That stand in the presence of God. This is not a description borrowed, as Bloomfield imagines, 'from the custom of oriental courts,' but a declaration of the fact that where Gabriel stands there is 'the presence (the manifestation) of the Lord.' C.

Ver. 24. Hid herself. Not to avoid, as Bloomfield supposes, 'the raileries and gazings of the vulgar'—for such conduct the Jewish feelings and manners would never have tolerated (see ver. 58); but to give herself to meditation and prayer, upon an announcement and occasion so extraordinary.—Note, 'Children are God's heritage,' and blessed is that wife who, if the Lord deny her children, bows submissively to his holy will; and who, if the Lord grant her children, receives the gift as a subject and excitement to thanksgiving and prayer. unciation—the most wonderful ever made to mortal, was received by Mary with that meek humility and faith which constituted the chief characteristics of her nature. Unlike Zacharias, she never questioned the truth of the announcement. Still it was too mysterious, too profound, for her intellect. It even seemed to be impossible as well as incomprehensible. 43 And<sup>k</sup> whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me?

44 For lo, as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy.

45 And<sup>n</sup> blessed is she that believed: for there<sup>6</sup> shall be a performance of those things which were told her from the Lord.

46 ¶ And Mary said, <sup>1</sup>My soul doth magnify the Lord,

47 And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour.<sup>7</sup>

48 For<sup>p</sup> he hath regarded the low estate<sup>8</sup> of his handmaiden: for, behold, from henceforth all generations <sup>1</sup>shall call me blessed.

49 For<sup>r</sup> he that is mighty hath done to me great things; and holy is his name.

50 And<sup>s</sup> his mercy is on them that fear him, from generation to generation.

51 He<sup>t</sup> hath showed strength with his arm; <sup>1</sup>he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts.

53 He<sup>w</sup> hath filled the hungry with good things, and the rich he hath sent empty away.

54 He<sup>y</sup> hath holpen his servant Israel, in remembrance of his mercy;

55 As<sup>z</sup> he spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed for ever.

56 And Mary abode with her about three months, and returned to her own house.

57 ¶ Now Elisabeth's full time came, that she should be delivered; and <sup>1</sup>she brought forth a son.

58 And her neighbours and her cousins heard how the Lord had showed <sup>1</sup>great mercy upon her; and <sup>1</sup>they rejoiced with her.

59 And it came to pass, that <sup>1</sup>on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child; and they called him Zacharias, after the name of his father.

combines the divine and human nature of Christ, this might suffice, in which he is called the 'Son of the Highest,' yet exalted by promise to 'the throne of his father David!' C.

Ver. 35. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, is one act representing the preparation of the body of Jesus, ver. 31.—And the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee, is another, representing the personal act of the Word, uniting himself with the humanity which was 'born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God'—even of God the Holy Spirit.—The conclusion in the word therefore, clearly demonstrates that Jesus was called 'the Son of God,' because, according to his humanity, he was conceived of the Holy Ghost. But his being named 'the Son of God' upon this account does not preclude his being also named 'the Son of God' upon another account—namely, upon account of his being 'that eternal life which was with the Father, and was manifested to us,' 1 Jn. 1. 1. For surely if he was 'eternal life with the FATHER,' he must have been the SON; for the FATHER could not have been the FATHER unless the WORD had been his SON! C.

Ver. 39. A city of Judah. The particular city is unnamed, and conjecture is useless. But it is worth remark, that from Nazareth to the nearest city in the 'hill country of Judah' (ver. 6) could not be less than several score miles, through mountains intersected with ravines and rivers; and that the undertaking of such a journey is a striking mark of the devotedness and decision of the personal character of Mary. C.

Ver. 42-55. It is impossible to read these pious effusions of Elisabeth and Mary without admiring the rich treasury of prayer and praise which the Scriptures furnish for all occasions. To

DISTANT VIEW OF THE BIRTHPLACE OF JOHN THE BAPTIST. [LUKE, i: 57.]—The birthplace of John the Baptist which we have shown in another view of the Judean mountains is so indistinct and vague that it can hardly be discerned. It is toward the right of the picture. The view helps us to get an idea of the Judean mountains, the folds of the hills, and the general topographical features of the country. This view is typical of the character of John the Baptist. He was a gloomy and severe and lonely man. So the country, represented in the picture before us, is gloomy and lonely and severe. A man in a region like this would be very apt to grow into a contemplative and thoughtful man. There is nothing here to divide the attention and nothing of a worldly nature to tempt any one. Here are lonely hills and skies and lakes and olive trees, and nothing else.

61 And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name.

62 And they made signs to his father, how he would have him called.

63 And he asked for a writing-table, and wrote, saying, His name is John.<sup>9</sup> And they marvelled all.

64 And<sup>h</sup> his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed, and he spake, and praised God.

65 And<sup>i</sup> fear came on all<sup>1</sup> that dwelt round about them: and all these sayings<sup>2</sup> were noised abroad throughout all the hill country of Judea:

66 And all they that heard them <sup>3</sup>laid them up in their hearts, saying, <sup>4</sup>What manner of child shall this be! <sup>5</sup>And the hand of the Lord was with him.

67 ¶ And his father Zacharias was <sup>6</sup>filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying,

68 Blessed<sup>o</sup> be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath <sup>7</sup>visited and redeemed his people, 69 And<sup>a</sup> hath raised up an horn of salvation for us, in the house of his servant David;

70 As<sup>r</sup> he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began:

71 That<sup>s</sup> we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us;

72 To<sup>t</sup> perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and <sup>8</sup>to remember his holy covenant;

73 The oath which he sware to our father Abraham,

74 That he would grant unto us, <sup>9</sup>that we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear, 75 In* holiness<sup>3</sup> and righteousness<sup>4</sup> before him, <sup>10</sup>all the days of our life.

2 The chronological difficulty in this statement appears to be solved by the recent researches of Zumpt. P. S. Quirinus, called by Luke Cyrenius, was consul in B.C. 12, and was therefore from that time qualified to fill the office of governor of Syria. From B.C. 12 till B.C. 4, the names of the governors are recorded; from B.C. 4 till A.D. 4 the record is blank.

During that period the census took place, and there is a very strong probability that Quirinus filled the office of governor from B.C. 4 till B.C. 2, and during his rule a census of the province was either first ordered by the imperial government, or first carried into effect. Grammatically the passage may bear either interpretation.—P.

CHAPTER II.

1 Augustus taxeth all the Roman empire. 6 The birth of Christ.

8 An angel relateth it to the shepherds: 13 many sing praises to God for it. 21 Christ is circumcised. 22 Mary purified. 28 Simeon and Anna prophesy of Christ: 40 who increaseth in wisdom, 46 questioneth in the temple with the doctors, 51 and is obedient to his parents.

AND it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cæsar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed.<sup>1</sup>

2 (And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.)<sup>2</sup>

3 And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

4 And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, (because he was <sup>3</sup>of the house and lineage of David,)

5 To be taxed with Mary his espoused <sup>4</sup>wife, being great with child.

6 ¶ And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.

7 And <sup>a</sup>she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling-clothes, and them the Spirit leads the memories of these two godly women, and gives their feelings utterance in language doubly affecting, because uniting the recollection of the past with the possession of the present mercies; see ver. 54. C.

Ver. 60. It is evident Zacharias had communicated to his wife the name the angel had prescribed for the child—a lesson of that confidence that 'those whom God hath bound together' should ever reciprocate. It is equally evident that while perfectly confidential with one another, they were as perfectly silent towards their neighbours and relatives—another most valuable lesson for all relations and conditions of life; for while cunning concealment of our purposes is foolish and vain, a prudent silence, and even secrecy, is always a proof of wisdom, and generally essential to success. C.

Ver. 77. 'The knowledge of salvation,' and the knowledge of the 'remission of sins,' are inseparably connected in the purpose of God; and he that lays hold upon the one cannot possibly be ignorant of the other. Even as he that is delivered from shipwreck or disease cannot possibly, if in his right mind, be ignorant of his escape from danger, or of his restored health. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The wonderful things of the gospel are declared with the greatest care and certainty, that we may clearly understand and firmly believe them. And for the same purpose a train of miracles introduced our Immanuel into our world, by which the ancient predictions concerning him and his forerunner were exactly accomplished. Delightful, distinguished, and unexpected mercies will come at last to those who, in a distinguished manner, fear God. Those that are humble and honour him he will honour; nothing is too hard for him to effect. And saints' unbelief of his promises must meet with sharp rebukes. The revival of miracles and prophecies pleasingly opened the way for the gospel dispensation. And with what reverence ought we always to think of Jesus Christ as the Son of God, as the Lord our God; and of the Holy Ghost, who exerts the whole power of the Godhead!—But how sweetly astonishing is it to behold God's eternal Son made of a woman!—To behold the infinite JEHOVAH personally united to the likeness of sinful flesh in order to save his enemies of mankind. Permanent and glorious is his spiritual kingdom. From the riches of divine mercy all the blessings of it originally proceed, and are bestowed on us by almighty love, notwithstanding all our unwillingness and unworthiness. It is this which lays the surest ground for the firmest faith, the deepest humility, the profoundest admiration, the most ravishing joy, and exalted praise. Thrice blessed is it to rejoice in a Saviour born for us, and received into our heart, and in that great salvation which he brings near to all men. Thrice happy are true believers in the pardon of their sins, the acceptance of their prayers, and their deliverance from their enemies. And in the highest praise and filial service of God should they improve these benefits. Never does God send any upon important work without proper qualifications. And rarely do men addicted to carnal company make an agreeable figure in the church. —Let me in every state learn to be fervent in my devotions. Let me offer all my services through Jesus' mediation. Let me acquaint myself with God and his Word, and always credit whatever he says. Let me vie with angels in readiness to speak of my Redeemer. And if God honour me, let me humble myself, and rejoice in his mercy.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 34, 35. He is appointed of God and brought into the world as an occasion of the stumbling and falling of many Israelites, and as the divine means of raising up men to eternal life and happiness. And such shall be his wonderfully mean and suffering circumstances that many will speak against him with bitter enmity and blasphemy; and you, his mother, shall be tormented with anguish and pain to see him so contemned, reviled, persecuted, and murdered: yet by these means it will clearly be discovered who are his friends that accept him, and who his enemies that reject him.

Ver. 1. Cæsar Augustus. This was Caius Cæsar Octavianus Augustus, one of the Roman triumvirs, who was chosen emperor B.C. 29, and died A.D. 14. He received the name of Cæsar, the family name of Julius Cæsar, by whom he had been adopted, and the name of Augustus the most probable meaning of which is, 'worthy of divine honours,' Pausan. iii. 11) he received from the senate. —All the world. Some would translate it, 'all the (Roman) empire'—an expression very frequent in the best classical writers. But as no such general taxation is mentioned by any contemporary historian, it seems more consonant to Jewish phraseology to understand it merely of 'all Judea,' which the Jews considered the earth of the whole world; see Ru. 1. 1; 2 Sa. 24. 8. This view seems to be confirmed by ver. 3, in which 'every one' went to 'his own city'—a description that evidently could apply to Judea alone. C.

Ver. 2. It appears from historical records that Cyrenius was not made governor of Syria till ten or twelve years after the birth of Jesus. The words may, however, be more literally translated, 'And this first registration was carried into effect (that is, by taxation) when Cyrenius was governor of Syria; or, (The first registration was made under Cyrenius (afterwards) governor of Syria.) C.

Ver. 3. His own city—the capital city of his own family (see ver. 4), not of his district. Wherefore it is evident that, though commanded by Roman authority, the registration was conducted upon Jewish principles. C.

Ver. 12. A manger. The ordinary Greek text is 'the manger, stable,' or whatever else the meaning of the term may be. The,

PLACE OF THE MANGER IN THE GROTTTO. [LUKE, ii:4-7.]—This is a picture of the interior of the Church of the Nativity, and there is given here a representation of the place once occupied by the manger in which our Savior was born. The star which you observe in the view is supposed to occupy the particular place where our Savior was born. Around this star are written the following words: "HERE JESUS CHRIST

WAS BORN OF THE VIRGIN MARY." This place is always guarded by the Turkish soldiers, and about this star silver lamps are always burning. Notable festivities are observed in this church during Christmas time. Nearly all the lamps that are in it are very fine, and are presents from different kings of the world. There is no place in Palestine looked upon with more loving and pathetic interest than the place of the manger in the grotto.

laid<sup>e</sup> him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

8 ¶ And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping<sup>4</sup> watch over their flock by night.<sup>5</sup>

9 And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them, and they were sore afraid.

10 And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

11 For<sup>k</sup> unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

12 And this shall be a sign unto you: Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling-clothes, lying in a manger.

13 And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God, and saying, 14 Glory<sup>o</sup> to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds<sup>6</sup> said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

16 And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

17 And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.

18 And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

19 But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

20 And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

21 ¶ And when eight days were accomplished for the circumcising of the child, his name was called JESUS,<sup>7</sup> which was so named of the angel before he was conceived in the womb.

22 ¶ And when the days of her purification, according to the law of Moses, were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord;

23 (As it is written in the law of the Lord, Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord;)

4 Or, the night-matches. It therefore seems it was not in the winter, Ex. 3.1.2. Pr. 27.25.

5 This statement renders it highly improbable, if not impossible, that our Lord could have been born in mid-winter. At that season, amid the mountains of Judea, the nights are intensely cold, and neither shepherds nor flocks could remain in the fields. The careful calculations of Gresswell show that the birth took place about the time of the passover in spring.

* In reviewing this wondrous narrative there is one thing which strikes the thoughtful student, especially in these days. In every circumstance connected with the promise and birth of the Forerunner, and the advent of the Messiah, we see the supernatural. It is so entirely interwoven with the narrative—it is so imbedded in every fact, and incident, and speech, that it cannot be eliminated without at the same time destroying the harmony and consistency of the whole history. To strip the evangelist's story of the supernatural element would be to make it not merely incredible but impossible. The narrative opens with the visit of an angel. His words are prophetic and his acts miraculous. A second time he appears with a message from God. Mary and Elizabeth were both filled with the Holy Ghost. His presence and inspir-

I think Alford has given the key to the right interpretation of this passage. It is connected with, in fact embodied in, a sentence which describes the effects of Christ's salvation upon the hearts and consciences of men. No allusion is made to mere human sorrow, but to sorrow for sin. The struggles referred to in the context are the struggles of penitent souls for pardon and acceptance. Mary herself, it is here predicted, would pass through a similar struggle. The pangs of sorrow for sin would pierce her heart also.—P.

25 ¶ And, behold, there was a man in Jerusalem, whose name was Simeon; and the same man was just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel: and the Holy Ghost was upon him.

26 And it was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death before he had seen the Lord's Christ.<sup>8</sup>

27 And he came by the Spirit<sup>9</sup> into the temple: and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law,

28 Then took he him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said,

29 Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word:

30 For mine eyes have seen thy salvation,

31 Which thou hast prepared before the face of all people;

32 A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.

33 And Joseph and his mother marvelled at those things which were spoken of him.

34 And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against;

35 (Yea, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also,<sup>1</sup>) that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed.

36 ¶ And there was one Anna, a prophetess, the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Aser; she was of a great age, and had lived with an husband seven years from her virginity;

37 And she was a widow of about fourscore and four years, which departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day.

38 And she, coming in that instant, gave thanks likewise unto the Lord, and spake of him to all them that looked for redemption in Jerusalem.<sup>3</sup> however, is wanting in many MSS.; the Editio Princeps is cancelled by Wetstein, and rejected by Middleton. But as it occurs in ver. 7, in distinction from 'the inn,' it is evidently as necessary here, where it serves as a direction to the shepherds—a direction which proves it to be a well-known public place, and not a private article, such as 'a manger,' that could not serve as a mark of any particular place in the town. See also ver. 16, in which the is repeated without any critical question. C.

Ver. 19. The conduct of Mary in this case furnishes a most valuable lesson to parents, who are often found anxious and labouring to display every qualification and prospect of their children. Never had a mother such an opportunity, nay, such a temptation to display, as Mary; but she was silent, yet not regardless; for while she 'kept all these things,' she 'pondered them in her heart.' C.

(5) That they are God's agents in human affairs, even those considered minute and unimportant; and are (not ruling spirits, entitled to prayer, but) 'ministering spirits, sent forth to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation.' C.

THE ROAD FROM JERUSALEM TO BETHLEHEM—OVER WHICH MARY AND JOSEPH PASSED. [1, UKR. ii: 22.]—Mary and Joseph, in going from Nazareth to Bethlehem to be taxed in accordance with the decree of Cæsar Augustus, doubtless passed by Jerusalem, and this road becomes interesting to us because of its connection with the visit of the holy family. It is, perhaps, very much to-day as it was when Joseph and Mary passed this way. The particular part of it we see is just below the Joppa Gate in the Jerusalem wall. One sort of conveyance passes along this way now that was never known until within recent years—that is the omnibus which carries passengers to and from the Jerusalem trains; for it is along this same way that modern tourists now go to the Jerusalem depot, which is about half a mile from the walls of the city.

BEEROOTH — WHERE MARY AND JOSEPH MISSED THE CHILD JESUS. [LUKE, ii:44.]—Beeroth is about a day's journey from Jerusalem as people used to travel. It is interesting to-day because it is supposed to be the place where Mary and Joseph spent the night after the first day's journey from Jerusalem upon their return to Nazareth, in our Savior's twelfth year. It is well known that at the end of the day's journey they sought Him among the people, and failed to find Him, making it necessary that they return the next day to Jerusalem to seek for Him. This is one of the cities of the Gibeonites. There are the ruins of an ancient church here, built by the Knights Templar who held Beeroth during the reign of the Latin kings. It was at Beeroth that Jotham concealed himself for fear of his brother, Abimelech.

42 And when he was twelve years old, they went up to Jerusalem, after the custom of the feast.

43 And when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the child Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem; and Joseph and his mother knew not of it.

44 But they, supposing him to have been in the<sup>h</sup> company, went a day's journey; and they sought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance.

45 And when they found him not, they turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking him.

46 And it came to pass, that after three days they found him in the temple,<sup>5</sup> sitting in the midst of the doctors, both <sup>h</sup>hearing them, and asking them questions.

47 And all that heard him <sup>i</sup>were astonished at his understanding and answers.

48 And when they saw him, they were amazed: and his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? behold, thy father<sup>6</sup> and I have sought thee sorrowing.

49 And he said unto them, How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that <sup>k</sup>I must be about my Father's business?<sup>7</sup>

50 And they <sup>l</sup>understood not the saying which he spake unto them.

51 ¶ And he went down with them, and came<sup>n</sup> to Nazareth, and was subject unto them: but his mother <sup>o</sup>kept all these sayings in her heart.

52 And <sup>p</sup>Jesus increased in wisdom and stature,<sup>8</sup> and in favour with God and man.<sup>9</sup>

<sup>n</sup>Christ's words are remarkable and most important. Mary half reproachfully asks him, "Why hast thou dealt thus with us? Thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing." Hitherto Jesus had been reckoned by friends, and called by the family, Joseph's son. Now he shows them that he knew the whole truth; that, in fact, he had a far deeper insight into the mystery of his origin and nature than Mary herself. "How is it that ye sought me? Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" He was God's Son, and henceforth he must be devoted to God's great work.—P.

* This is a remarkable statement, and recent controversies have attached to it even greater importance than it formerly possessed. I understand it as follows:—Our Lord possessed a true human nature—a human body and mind. He possessed also a divine nature; and in that nature was infinite in wisdom and in power. His body grew, and the faculties of his mind expanded, like those of other children. And just in proportion as his mental faculties were developed did the divine wisdom manifest itself in them and shine through them. The human mind of Jesus was always filled with wisdom to the utmost extent of its capacity. Hence the statement in ch. 2. 40, "The child grew, filled with wisdom." As the mental powers expanded they were able to apprehend and exhibit more and more of the infinite wisdom of the indwelling God. From a human point of view, therefore, Jesus increased in wisdom. There was this essential difference, however, between him and mere men: men got their knowledge from without—from parents, schools, masters; Jesus got his from within—from his divine nature, which is the fountain of all knowledge.—P.

NAZARETH FROM THE ESPLANADE OF THE ENGLISH ORPHANAGE—THE TOWN OF OUR SAVIOR'S BOYHOOD SEEN FROM AN INSTITUTION HIS LIFE CREATED. [LUKE, ii:51.]—"And he went down with them and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them: but his mother kept all these sayings in her heart." Some centuries after the ascension of our Lord, Nazareth became a place of great importance in the Christian Church. During the Crusades it was given to Tancred as a reward for his valor in winning Tiberias from the Saracens. Tancred established a church at Nazareth and enriched it with a large endowment. Nazareth, which thus began to be celebrated because of the wealth of its church, became a metropolitan see. After the victory of Saladin in 1187, gained at the Horns of Hattin, Nazareth was reduced to great poverty. Saracen troops entered the church of the Virgin and butchered the Christians who had sought refuge there. King Louis of France is said to have visited Nazareth in 1250. At the beginning of last century the Christian population of Nazareth was greatly increased. There is a charm about the place now that no language can describe. Every rock and hill and tree glows with associations connected with the name of Jesus. There are now far more Christians here than Mahometans.

<sup>7</sup> Son-in-law. The forty men here mentioned from Joseph to David were Christ's natural progenitors by his mother, whereas those mentioned by Matthew (ch. 1. 6-16) were ancestors in office, and progenitors of Joseph his supposed father.

<sup>8</sup> Matthew has traced the genealogy of Jesus through Solomon and Joseph; Luke through Nathan, another son of David, and Mary. Heli was not the natural father of Joseph, but his father-in-law and father of Mary. Females were not reckoned in the Jewish genealogies. Mary is, therefore, passed over in name, but clearly intended when her father Heli is introduced. Joseph was, however, legally called the son of Heli, inasmuch as those who married heiresses were obliged to pass into the families of their fathers-in-law and be reckoned as their sons. Luke, writing for the Gentiles, proves Christ to be the 'seed of the woman;' Matthew, writing for the Jews, proves him the son of David and Abraham.—C.

found in the genealogy of Ge. 11. 12 and 1 Ch. 1. 18. But as no authority of MSS. is adduced for this omission, and as Luke must have quoted from the public registers, it would be unsafe to reject a name thus sanctioned. For examples are not wanting in the Old Testament of names occurring in one genealogy, and, for legal reasons, now unknown to us, expunged from another. The reverse of this may, of course, be the case; and a name expunged from one ancient genealogy may, for legal reasons, be restored in another.—C.

CHAPTER IV.

2 Being forty days <sup>e</sup>tempted of the devil. And <sup>f</sup>in those days he did eat nothing: and when they were ended, he afterward <sup>h</sup>hungred.

Ver. 35. An ignorant man, by looking upon flint and steel, or even from feeling and minute examination, would never expect fire from their collision; and as little does any man know either himself or others, till circumstances bring out what lies concealed and unknown, and often unsuspected. The person, ministration, the cross, the sacrifice, and the judgment-seat of Christ, can alone fully reveal all that is in man of enmity that resists, or of humility, Spirit-begotten, that submits to the righteousness of God.

Ver. 36. Anna a prophetess. There were several distinguished prophetesses under the Old Testament—as Miriam, Deborah, and Huldah—so Anna is now inspired to represent woman in the knowledge and revelation of Messiah. By such historic means, and not by assertion or argument, does the Scripture declare the intellectual and moral dignity of woman. The Lord raise up many such holy women in his church to welcome and commend the Saviour! C.

Ver. 44. Company. The country being infested with many robbers, as appears from Josephus, it was needful that the people should travel in companies, for mutual protection; but it is more than probable (Ps. 84. 8, margin) that they were accustomed to unite in bands for mutual edification and religious services during their journeys. C.

Ver. 52. If Jesus were God, how could he 'grow in favour?' He grew in favour, as in stature or age. Being in the flesh, he was subject to all the sinless circumstances of the flesh, and consequently grew in favour with his heavenly Father, as years developed his amiabilities. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The taxing pride of a Roman emperor in a wonderful manner occasions our Redeemer's birth at the place long before marked in prophecy, and the enrolment of him and his family as descendants of David. And O how infinite was the debasement of the Son of God to save men! Yet pregnant with the greatest glory to himself and his Father, and with grace to men. Delightful are the tidings, the gracious offers, of him and his salvation to sinners in the gospel. And with sincerity and grateful praise ought they to be received by us and commended to others. A safe child-birth ought to be esteemed a great mercy; and both mother and child ought gratefully to be devoted to God. Thrice happy are they who long wait for the Lord! He will at last appear for their comfort, and open their lips in his praise. And it is only believing views of Jesus Christ that can render death and eternity truly pleasant and hopeful. But unhappy are they to whom this light, this Saviour of the world, becomes an occasion of greater sin and more terrible ruin. Even they who have distinguished honours allotted them have frequently some bitter trials annexed to them. And even they who live nearest to Jesus Christ must often seek him. It is enough that they find him at last, and lay up his words in their heart.—While parents consider how carefully they ought to attend the ordinances of God, and bring their children along with them, let children ponder what a delightful pattern of early knowledge, devotion, trust in God, and obedience to mean parents, is represented to them in our Redeemer.

CHAPTER III. REFLECTIONS.—The season of important events ought to be exactly marked. In great wisdom and grace Jesus appears to erect his kingdom when rulers almost everywhere are monsters of wickedness. And God, by his forerunner, honourably introduces him to his work. Great need have sinners to hasten to him when death and ruin are just at their heels. Dreadful is their case who fall into the hands of the living God. And none bid fairer for hell than they who have the strongest carnal or legal hopes of heaven. No outward privilege can avail those who have unrenewed hearts and unholy lives. And no repentance can be justly reckoned sincere that does not make men cease from and detest the sins to which they are most tempted or addicted. God often renders the most unlikely the distinguished monuments of his power and grace. But at best the state of the church is but imperfect and mixed in this world. In the next God will, to the joy of saints and terror of obstinate sinners, make a full separation; and many who, like Herod, did many good things, and heard God's ministers gladly, shall be cast into eternal ruin. It is a delightful sight when great honours render men humble; and humility is rewarded with more abundant honours. How solemn was our Saviour's consecration to his work, and his attestation by God! And it is plainly manifest that he is the seed of the woman, and of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Judah, Jesse, and David, according to the promise.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 2. Forty days. Matthew (ch. 4. 3) places the temptation after the forty days. Luke seems to describe it as continuing throughout the whole period. The two accounts are perfectly reconcilable. The chief temptation, as recorded by Matthew, was after the forty days of fasting. Luke relates the same chief temptation, but intimates that inferior temptations continued through the whole period. C.

Ver. 3. Command this stone. Matthew (ch. 4. 3) has it 'these stones.' How then are the two passages reconciled upon the principle of real inspiration? In the very simplest manner. Satan used both expressions, urging our Lord by the repetition and increase of his demand for miracles. Matthew records the one demand, Luke the other. C.

Ver. 6. Here, according to his system of delusion, Satan affirms what is partly true and partly false. That he has 'power, a seat, and great authority,' and that, at certain times of judgment, 'power is given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations'—that he

STREAM FLOWING FROM UNDER THE MOUNT OF TEMPTATION. [LUKE, iv:5.]—
The second Temptation of Christ is represented in the Scriptures as taking place upon a high mountain, from which the devil could call the attention of our Savior to all the kingdoms of the world. This mountain, upon which occurred the second Temptation, is over against Jericho and looking directly over the Plain of Sodom and Gomorrah and away to the mountains of Moab. At the time of the Temptation this whole Plain of the Jordan, between the Dead Sea below and twenty miles above, was cultivated and kept like a garden. Herod had lived here in great style and luxury. Cleopatra had come to this place for revelry, and it was doubtless one of the most beautiful and attractive places in the world. The Mount of Temptation is a lonely height.

3 And the devil said unto him, 'If thou be the Son of God, <sup>i</sup>command this stone that it be made bread.<sup>2</sup>

4 And Jesus answered him, saying, <sup>k</sup>It is written, That man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God.

5 And<sup>l</sup> the devil, taking him up into an high mountain, showed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time.

6 And the devil said unto him, <sup>n</sup>All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them: for that is delivered unto me; and to whomsoever I will I give it.

7 If thou, therefore, wilt worship me,<sup>3</sup> all shall be thine.

8 And Jesus answered and said unto him, Get<sup>o</sup> thee behind me, Satau: for it is written, Thou<sup>p</sup> shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

9 And<sup>q</sup> he brought him to Jerusalem, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, and said unto him, <sup>r</sup>If thou be the Son of God, <sup>s</sup>cast thyself down from hence:

10 For<sup>t</sup> it is written, He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee;<sup>4</sup>

11 And in <sup>their</sup> hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

12 And Jesus, answering, said unto him, <sup>u</sup>It is said, <sup>v</sup>Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

13 And <sup>w</sup>when the devil had ended all the temptation, he departed from him for a season.<sup>5</sup>

14 ¶ And<sup>y</sup> Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee: and there went out a fame of him through all the region round about.

15 And <sup>z</sup>he taught in their synagogues, being glorified of all.

16 ¶ And he came to <sup>a</sup>Nazareth, where he had been brought up: and, as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath-day, and <sup>b</sup>stood up for to read.

17 And there was delivered unto him the book of the prophet Esaias. And when he had opened the book, he found the place where it was written, v The words 'to keep thee,' are not found in the corresponding passage in Matthew. This difference, however, does not in the least degree infringe upon the principle of the real divine inspiration of the evangelists. Matthew states all that Luke states; but Matthew does not say that the tempter added no more. Luke supplies the additional argument. The reason of the difference is plain: Matthew wrote for Jews, who fully understood, from history, the nature of angelic agency, and did not require any explanation; Luke wrote for Gentiles, who were ignorant upon the subject; and, therefore, he records the portion of the dialogue in which angelic agency was described.—C.

18 The<sup>c</sup> Spirit of the Lord <sup>is</sup> upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted,<sup>d</sup> to preach deliverance to the captives, and <sup>e</sup>recovering of sight to the blind,<sup>6</sup> to set at liberty them that are <sup>f</sup>bruised,

19 To preach the <sup>9</sup>acceptable year of the Lord.

20 And he closed the book, and he gave <sup>it</sup> again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on him.<sup>7</sup>

21 And he began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears.

22 And all bare him witness, and wondered at the <sup>h</sup>gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. And they said, 'Is not this Joseph's son?

23 And he said unto them, Ye will surely say unto me this proverb, Physician, heal thyself: <sup>i</sup>whatsoever we have heard done in Capernaum, do also here in thy country.

24 And he said, Verily I say unto you, No <sup>k</sup>prophet is accepted in his own country.

25 But I tell you of a truth, <sup>l</sup>many widows were in Israel in the days of Elias, when the heaven was shut up three years and six months, when great famine was throughout all the land;

26 But unto none of them was Elias sent, save unto Sarepta, <sup>a</sup>a city of Sidon, unto a woman <sup>that</sup> was a widow.

27 And<sup>n</sup> many lepers were in Israel in the time of <sup>o</sup>Eliseus the prophet; and none of them was cleansed, saving Naaman the Syrian.

28 And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, <sup>p</sup>were filled with wrath,

29 And<sup>q</sup> rose up, and thrust him out of the city, and led him unto the brow<sup>s</sup> of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast him <sup>r</sup>down headlong.<sup>9</sup>

30 But<sup>s</sup> he, passing through the midst of them, went his way;<sup>1</sup>

31 And<sup>t</sup> came down to Capernaum, a city of Galilee, and taught them on the sabbath-days.

32 And they were astonished at his doctrine: <sup>u</sup>for his word was with power.<sup>2</sup>

33 ¶ And<sup>v</sup> in the synagogue there was a man, which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice, 34 Saying, Let <sup>us</sup> alone;<sup>3</sup> what<sup>x</sup> have we to do with thee, <sup>thou</sup> Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art; <sup>y</sup>the Holy One of God.

35 And <sup>z</sup>Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the devil had <sup>a</sup>thrown him in the midst, he came out of him, and hurt him not.

36 And<sup>b</sup> they were all amazed, and spake is 'the prince,' nay, 'the god of this world,' is all true; but when he adds that 'all this power and glory' is his, and that 'to whomsoever he will he gives it,' he affirms what is false; for 'the Lord God omnipotent reigneth.' He alone 'putteth down one and setteth up another,' even as he 'raised up Pharaoh to show his power in him.' Satan, moreover, after the manner of all liars and deceivers, suppresses what is true; for he never alludes to the coming judgment of the great day, nor the 'everlasting fire prepared for him and his angels.' See Re. 13. 2, 7; Jn. 12. 31; 2 Co. 4. 4; Ps. 97. 1; 19. 6; 75. 7; Ex. 9. 16; Mat. 25. 41. C.

Ver. 19. The acceptable year seems an allusion to the year of the jubilee, which proclaimed its blessings on the day of atonement, which proclaimed liberty to him who had been enslaved, restoration to possessions, and return to families—all emblems of gospel time and gospel blessings. The time, the day upon which the proclaimed atonement is fully embraced; the blessings, the restoration of sinners to the forfeited possession of paradise, and to membership and communion in the family of God. C.

Ver. 20. The eyes of all . . . were fastened on him. The specific reason of this intense observation is not recorded. It may have arisen from recollection of the early prophecies concerning him—from curiosity, mingled with incredulity, concerning the works he was now reported to have wrought elsewhere—from his voice, for he spake as never man spake; see ver. 22—or from his manner, for 'he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.' C.

Ver. 24. This statement has been fully verified by all prophetic history. Moses was rebelliously vilified, Nu. 16. 3; David was ejected from his throne; Jeremiah was cast into prison; Elijah was hunted 'like a partridge upon the mountains.' All were despised or rejected by their countrymen. Wherefore let no man wait for the reformation of any church or people until God raise up some of themselves to lead the way; but rather let every one remember that the human mind is more ready to listen to strangers than to acquaintance, and take hold of this propensity, and send the gospel by 'men of other tongues.' C.

Ver. 28. The secret cause of offence seems to be the implied intimation of God's merciful regards to the heathen, whom the Jews despised, and judged unworthy of sharing with them in the divine favour; but the ostensible cause was the parallel between the humble Jesus and Elijah and Elisha, whom they esteemed as chief among the prophets. C.

GREEK MOUNT OF PRECIPITATION, NAZARETH—FROM WHICH IT WAS SOUGHT TO CAST OUR SAVIOR DOWN. [LUKE, iv: 28-29.]—"And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, were filled with wrath, and rose up, and thrust him out of the city and led him unto the brow of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast him down headlong."—Luke, iv: 28, 29. Upon the brow of this hill, from which it is supposed the people of Nazareth sought to cast our Savior down, the Greeks have built a little chapel, where the devout and faithful of that communion retire to pray and meditate. This little chapel may be said to be the scene of the sad event in the lives of the people of Nazareth when they turned from their doors and their lives the greatest of their countrymen.

among themselves, saying, What a word is this! for with authority and power he commandeth the unclean spirits, and they come out.

37 And<sup>e</sup> the fame of him went out into every place of the country round about.

38 ¶ And<sup>d</sup> he arose out of the synagogue, and entered into Simon's house. And Simon's wife's mother was taken with a great fever; and they besought him for her.

39 And<sup>e</sup> he stood over her,<sup>4</sup> and rebuked the fever; and it left her: <sup>9</sup>and immediately she arose, and ministered unto them.

40 ¶ Now<sup>h</sup> when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him; and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them.

41 ¶ And<sup>i</sup> devils also came out of many, crying out, and saying, Thou art Christ<sup>5</sup> the Son of God. And he, rebuking them, suffered them not to speak: for they knew that he was Christ.<sup>6</sup>

42 ¶ And<sup>j</sup> when it was day, he departed, and went into a desert place: <sup>k</sup>and the people sought him, and came unto him, and stayed him, that he should not depart from them.

43 And he said unto them, 'I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also; for therefore am I sent.

44 And<sup>n</sup> he preached in the synagogues of Galilee.

CHAPTER V.

1 Christ teacheth the people out of Peter's ship: 4 in a miraculous taking of fishes, sheweth how he will make him and his partners fishers of men: 12 cleanseth a leper: 16 prayeth in the wilderness: 18 healeth one sick of the palsy: 27 calleth Matthew the publican: 29 justifieth his eating with publicans and sinners: 33 foretelleth the fastings and afflictions of the apostles after his ascension: 36 and liketh faint-hearted and weak disciples to old bottles and worn garments.

AND it<sup>a</sup> came to pass, that, as the people pressed<sup>b</sup> upon him to hear the word of God, he stood by the lake of Gennesaret,<sup>1</sup>

2 And saw two ships standing<sup>2</sup> by the lake: but the fishermen were gone out of them, and were washing their nets.

REFLECTIONS.—The most fearful temptations and troubles may quickly succeed to the most distinguished testimonies of God's love. And it is highly improper for the best of saints to hope to escape even the most horrible seducements, when Jesus was called to suffer them. How shocking is the impudence of Satan! how fixed his perseverance in harassing the saints! and how implacable his malice in tempting where he surely hopes to succeed! He is very subtle in contriving the form and choosing the seasons of his temptation. And it is necessary to resist him always with the sword of the Spirit. Thus only can we prove conquerors through him that loved us, and is able and ready to succour us. But what fearful work hath sin made in the world! It hath transformed angels into unclean spirits, perverted human nature, and subjected it to the tyranny of the devil, and to diseases unnumbered.—Alas! into what sorrow and suffering it plunged our divine Saviour! But infinite is his grace; and, as appointed of God to save us, in him all fulness dwells answerable to all our need. And always by his Word, he exerts his power on the most unworthy. With great toil and danger he went about to heal human maladies, spiritual and temporal. But, alas! where he should be most readily received he is often most obstinately rejected; and almost everywhere few are turned to him! Many never believe more than devils, who never had his blessings offered to them; and though they hear his words with attention and wonder, they quickly envy and seek to destroy him or his interests; but terrible is their situation when he abandons them to their own hearts' lusts.—It is a great mercy that he can restrain furious persecutors, and cast out malicious and subtle devils, even when they almost transform themselves into angels of light. And it is delightful when they who have much public work in hand prepare for it by much fervent prayer; and when they who have enjoyed Christ's presence and ordinances earnestly desire the continuance of them.

CHAPTER V. Ver. 8. Every man of intellect judges best in his own profession. Had Peter been a landsman he would not have been at all so affected by the miracle; but as an experienced fisherman, he sees its full extent. But the narrative educes another trait of character. Had Peter been covetous he would have entreated our Lord never to leave him; had he been superstitious (as fishermen are often found to be) he would have ascribed the miracle to good fortune, or some prevalent charm or talisman; but being neither superstitious nor covetous, he beholds in the miracle the evidence of our Lord's holiness and divinity, which, contrasting with his own sinfulness, he falls down and worships, and entreats him to depart, not because he desired to be freed from his presence, but counted himself unworthy of the honour. 	y Le. xiii. xiv.

3 And he entered into one of the ships, which was Simon's, and prayed him that he would thrust out a little from the land. And he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.

4 ¶ Now when he had left speaking, he said unto Simon, <sup>d</sup>Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

5 And Simon, answering, said unto him, Master, we have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing: nevertheless, at thy word I will let down the net.

6 And<sup>g</sup> when they had this done, they inclosed a great multitude of fishes: and <sup>h</sup>their net brake.<sup>4</sup>

7 And they beckoned unto their partners, which were in the other ship, that they should come and help them. And they came, and filled both the ships, so that they began to sink.

8 When Simon Peter saw it, <sup>i</sup>he fell down at Jesus' knees, saying, Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord.

9 For<sup>k</sup> he was astonished, and all that were with him, at the draught of the fishes which they had taken:

10 And so was also <sup>l</sup>James and John, the sons of Zebedee, which were partners with Simon. And Jesus said unto Simon, Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt <sup>m</sup>catch<sup>5</sup> men.

11 And when they had brought their ships to land, they <sup>n</sup>forsook all, and followed him.

12 ¶ And<sup>p</sup> it came to pass, when he was in a certain city, behold, a man full of leprosy; who seeing Jesus, fell on his face, and <sup>q</sup>besought him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou <sup>r</sup>canst make me clean.

13 And he put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, <sup>s</sup>I will; be thou clean.<sup>6</sup> And <sup>t</sup>immediately the leprosy departed from him.

14 And he charged him to <sup>u</sup>tell no <sup>v</sup>man: but go, and <sup>w</sup>show thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing, according as Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

but not the Pharisees, who, though they might be amazed, did not glorify God for the works done by Christ. C.

Ver. 36. The differences between this parable, as recorded by Matthew and as recorded by Luke, can neither be tortured into contradictions (for the meaning is the same), nor be attributed to mere variety in the memories of the evangelists, nor to an ideal instead of a real inspiration. The differences can be accounted for upon a principle much more simple, and in perfect accordance with the doctrine of full and perfect divine inspiration—that is, upon the most natural of all suppositions—that our Lord repeated the parable more than once, and varied his expressions to aid in the exposition of his meaning. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The most diligent and laborious have often little success. And all that comes is vanity and vexation of spirit. How base and polluted men appear to themselves when viewed in the light of Christ's glory! But nothing is more absurd or wicked than to make our sinfulness a reason against fellowship with him who is the Saviour from sin. Great is his power, who can command multitudes of fishes into a net, and multitudes of souls into a reception of the gospel. None who taste his goodness can forbear following him. The firm faith of his ability betokens our deliverance at hand, and promotes a regard to his ordinances. Great is the mercy that his prayers are powerful, and his mercy present to save men; and that he readily grants remission and healing to such as believe. If he forgive us, neither envious men nor malici-

15 But<sup>a</sup> so much the more went there a fame abroad of him: and great multitudes came together, to hear, and to be healed by him of their infirmities.

16 ¶ And<sup>b</sup> he withdrew himself into the wilderness, and prayed.

17 ¶ And it came to pass on a certain day, as he was teaching, that there were<sup>c</sup> Pharisees and docters of the law sitting by, which were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judea, and Jerusalem; and "the power of the Lord was present<sup>d</sup> to heal them."

18 And,<sup>b</sup> behold, men brought in a bed a man which was taken with a palsy: and they sought means to bring him in, and to lay him before him.

19 And when they could not find by what way they might bring him in because of the multitude, they went upon the house-top, and let him down through the tiling,<sup>1</sup> with his couch,<sup>2</sup> into the midst before Jesus.

20 And when he<sup>a</sup> saw their faith,<sup>3</sup> he said unto him, Man, thy sins are forgiven thee.

21 And the scribes and the Pharisees began to reason, saying, "Who is this which speaketh blasphemies?"<sup>b</sup> Who can forgive sins but God alone?

22 But when Jesus perceived their thoughts, he, answering, said unto them, What reason ye in your hearts?

23 Whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Rise up and walk?

24 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath<sup>k</sup> power upon earth to forgive sins, (he said unto the sick of the palsy,) "I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy couch, and go unto thine house."

25 And immediately he rose up before them, and took up that whereon he lay,<sup>4</sup> and departed to his own house, "glorifying God."

26 And<sup>e</sup> they were all amazed, and they glorified God, and were filled with fear, saying, "We have seen strange things to-day."

27 ¶ And<sup>p</sup> after these things he went forth, and saw a publican, named Levi, sitting at the receipt of custom: and he said unto him, "Follow me."

28 And<sup>r</sup> he left all, rose up, and followed him.

29 And<sup>s</sup> Levi made him a great feast in his own house: and there was a great company of publicans and of others that sat down with them.

30 But<sup>t</sup> their scribes and Pharisees murmured against his disciples, saying, "Why do ye eat and drink with publicans and sinners?"<sup>5</sup>

The point of the passage is not to draw any comparison between the two systems, but simply to show the natural preference of the Jews for that to which they were accustomed.—P.

<sup>1</sup> Second sabbath after the first. Literally, "on the second first sabbath;" but this is unintelligible, because unsuited to English idiom. The meaning most probably is, not "the second sabbath after the first day of unleavened bread;" but, "the first sabbath after the second day of unleavened bread," which was the second after the first day of the passover, which was always a sabbath (Le. 23. 7); for upon that second day of the passover the wave sheaf was offered up, and from that second day, and not from the first, the fifty days till pentecost were reckoned (Le. 23. 11, 15, 16); whence all the sabbaths from the passover to pentecost took their numerical titles from "the second of the passover."—C.

31 And Jesus, answering, said unto them, "They that are whole need not a physician; but they that are sick."

32 I<sup>v</sup> came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

33 ¶ And they said unto him,<sup>6</sup> "Why<sup>a</sup> do the disciples of John fast often, and make prayers, and likewise the disciples of the Pharisees; but thine eat and drink?"

34 And he said unto them, Can ye make<sup>b</sup> the children of the bride-chamber fast, while the bridegroom<sup>7</sup> is with them?

35 But the days will come when the bridegroom shall be<sup>c</sup> taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days.

36 ¶ And he spake also a parable unto them: "No man putteth a piece of a new garment upon an old: if otherwise, then both the new maketh a rent, and the piece that was taken out of the new<sup>d</sup> agreeth not with the old."

37 And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine will burst the bottles and be spilled, and the bottles shall perish.

38 But new wine must be put into new bottles; and both are preserved.

39 No man also having drunk old wine straightway<sup>8</sup> desireth new: for he saith, "The old is better."<sup>1</sup>

CHAPTER VI.

<sup>1</sup> Christ reproveth the Pharisees' blindness about the observation of the sabbath, by scripture, reason, and miracle: 12 chooseth twelve apostles: 17 healeth the diseased: 20 preacheth to his disciples before the people of blessings and curses: 27 how we must love our enemies: 46 and join the obedience of good works to the hearing of the word: test in the evil day of temptation we fall like an house built upon the face of the earth, without any foundation.

AND it<sup>a</sup> came to pass, on the second sabbath after the first,<sup>1</sup> that he went through the eorn-fields; and his disciples plucked the ears of eorn, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands.

2 And certain of the Pharisees said unto them, "Why do ye that which is not lawful to do on the sabbath-days?"

3 And Jesus answering them said, Have ye not read so much as this, "what David did, when himself was an hungered, and they which were with him;"

4 How he went into the house of God, and did take and eat the show-bread, and gave also to them that were with him; "which it is not lawful to eat but for the priests alone?"

5 And he said unto them, "That the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath."

6 ¶ And<sup>9</sup> it came to pass also on another sabbath, that he entered into the synagogue, and taught; and there was a man whose<sup>h</sup> right hand was withered.

ous devils can reverse his sentence. And every mercy to ourselves and others should fill our hearts with wonder and praise. If the chiefs of sinners heed his call, none can keep or shut them out from his favour.—But unbounded is his condescension to become their husband, upon whose presence all their joys depend, and to proportion their duties to their strength and circumstances.

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 12. In prayer to God. If the word translated prayer must be retained in that sense, as Bloomfield maintains, the translation should be altered to "the prayer of God." A literal translation, however, gives a sense more agreeable to history: "He continued all night in the proseucha of God"—a retired

DISTANT VIEW OF THE MOUNT OF BEATITUDES. [LUKE, vi: 20.]—We have in this picture a different view of the Mount of Beatitudes from the one we gave in connection with the Sermon on the Mount, as reported by Matthew, v. vi, vii. This is an interesting height, not simply because it is supposed that Christ there uttered his memorable sermon, but also because it is thought by some to be the mount to which He retired after the resurrection. If Jesus Christ was not the son of God is it not an unaccountable thing that He should have, nearly 2,000 years ago, uttered the words which, by general consent, are looked upon as the sublimest that have ever fallen from the lips of man? It is inconceivable that a Galilean peasant, with no help from a divine source, could have expressed himself in such a discourse.

7 And the scribes and Pharisees watched him, whether he would heal on the sabbath-day, that they might find an accusation against him.

8 But<sup>j</sup> he knew their thoughts, and said to the man which had the withered hand, <sup>k</sup>Rise up, and stand forth in the midst. And he arose, and stood forth.

9 Then said Jesus unto them, I will ask you one thing; <sup>l</sup>Is it lawful on the sabbath-days to do good, or to do evil? to save life, or to destroy it?

10 And looking round about upon them all, he said unto the man, <sup>m</sup>Stretch forth thy hand. And he did so: and his hand was restored whole as the other.

11 And<sup>o</sup> they were filled with madness;<sup>3</sup> and communed one with another what they might do to Jesus.

12 ¶ And it came to pass in those days, that he<sup>p</sup> went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God.

13 And when it was day,<sup>4</sup> he called unto him his disciples: and of them he chose twelve, whom also he named apostles;<sup>5</sup>

14 Simon<sup>q</sup> (whom he also named Peter) and Andrew his brother, James and John, Philip and Bartholomew, 15 Matthew and Thomas, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon called Zelotes, 16 And <sup>r</sup>Judas the brother of James, and Judas<sup>s</sup> Iscariot, which also was the traitor.

17 ¶ And he came down with them, and stood <sup>t</sup>in the plain, and the company of his disciples, and a <sup>u</sup>great multitude of people out of all Judea and Jerusalem, and from the sea-coast of Tyre and Sidon, which came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases;

18 And they that were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed.

19 And <sup>v</sup>the whole multitude sought to touch him: for there went virtue out of him, and healed them all.

20 ¶ And<sup>w</sup> he lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said, <sup>x</sup>Blessed be ye poor;<sup>6</sup> for yours is the kingdom of God.<sup>7</sup>

21 Blessed<sup>z</sup> are ye that hunger now: <sup>a</sup>for ye shall be filled. <sup>b</sup>Blessed are ye that weep now: for ye shall laugh.

22 Blessed<sup>c</sup> are ye, when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and east out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake.

23 Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy: for, behold, <sup>d</sup>your reward is great in heaven: <sup>e</sup>for

The sermon in Mat. he delivered sitting, this standing (ver. 17); and there is also considerable difference in the expressions when the similar passages are compared.—C.
<sup>21</sup> Our Lord spent at least three years, probably not very long, in teaching his disciples. It was natural, indeed it was necessary, that he should repeat the same truths, and develop again and again the same doctrines. One evangelist records one discourse; another another; but we must not expect either that there should be a total difference in the subjects when the discourses are different; or that there should be a verbal identity in language when the subjects are identical.—P.

<sup>26</sup> On a superficial view of this narrative, it would appear utterly impossible to account for this most unreasonable madness of the Pharisees. Two principles, however, will apply explaining its origin: (1) A false theory establishing the traditions of the elders, whereby their own doctrines and practices were supported, the doctrines of our Lord condemned, and the necessity of reformation superseded, even as, in more modern times, the Church of Rome, adopting the false theory of her own infallibility, refuses to be reformed, and anathematizes in her bull, In Coena Domini, the teachers of every fundamental doctrine of divine grace. (2) The worldly interests of the Pharisees, which were inseparably entwined with their doctrine of tradition, blinded their eyes to the glory of Christ, stopped their ears against the voice of truth, hardened their hearts against every feeling but those of envy, hatred, and madness against the prophet by whose righteous denunciations these interests were endangered.—C.

The tormenting fear which many entertain of meeting the spirits of the dead in solitary places by night, may it not be chiefly traced to the neglect of solitary nightly prayer, wherein the soul meeting in holy and immediate converse with God, would so occupy and fill itself with a sense

1 The additional particulars supplied here by Luke bring out in still stronger colours the character of the centurion. He was a stranger, yet he had shown great interest in the people among whom he was placed; he had displayed also a princely generosity. The Jewish rabbins pressed these facts upon the attention of our Lord so as to induce him to listen to the centurion's request. The centurion himself, however, so far from pleading any merit, takes the position of an humble, helpless, undeserving suppliant. What a lesson does this teach Christians!—P.

like a man that without a foundation built an house upon the earth: against which the stream did beat vehemently, and immediately it fell; and the ruin of that house was great.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Christ findeth a greater faith in the centurion, a Gentile, than in any of the Jews: 10 healeth his servant, being absent: 11 raiseth to life the widow's son at Nain: 19 answereth John's messengers with the declaration of his miracles: 24 testifieth to the people what opinion he held of John: 30 inveigheth against the Jews, who, with neither the manners of John nor of Jesus, could be won: 36 and sheweth, how he is a friend to sinners, not to maintain them in sins, but to forgive them their sins, upon their faith and repentance.

NOW when he had ended all his sayings in the audience of the people, he entered into Capernaum.

2 And a certain centurion's servant, who was dear unto him, was sick, and ready to die.

3 And when he heard of Jesus, he sent unto him the elders of the Jews, beseeching him that he would come and heal his servant.

4 And when they came to Jesus, they besought him instantly, saying, That he was worthy for whom he should do this:

5 For he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a synagogue.<sup>1</sup>

6 Then Jesus went with them. And when he was now not far from the house, the centurion sent friends<sup>2</sup> to him, saying unto him, Lord, trouble not thyself;<sup>3</sup> for I am not worthy that thou shouldst enter under my roof:

7 Wherefore neither thought I myself worthy allow them impartially to judge like righteous judgment for others, though against yourselves. C.

Ver. 42. Cast out first the beam out of thine own eye. Does this exhortation imply that the casting out of the beam is the act of the hypocrite himself, without any reference to the Word, Spirit, and grace of God? It contains no such implication. It speaks, as the Scriptures often do, of the thing to be done, and not of the power by which alone it can be done. When the Scriptures speak of the power by which alone conversion is effected, they attribute faith to the sinner, and all to the Word, Spirit, and grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, 1 Pe. 1. 23; 1 Jn. 3. 9; Eze. 11. 19; Zec. 4. 6; Ep. 2. 8. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Works of real necessity and mercy, but no other, may consist with a proper observance of the Sabbath. And it is base when Christ's kind indulgence is abused to carnal licentiousness; and when the rigid accusers of the innocence of others are the most indulgent to their own crimes. If we desire to have our spiritual maladies healed we must attend Christ's ordinances; and neither our own inability, nor other men's perverseness, must hinder us from our duty. If Jesus command, he can enable to perform. Where passion reigns, neither conscience nor reason can be regarded: but it is in vain to devise mischief against an all-seeing Redeemer. Important work ought always to be introduced with fervent and solemn prayer; and Jesus' prayers and power can easily furnish his church with plenty of gospel ministers! Marvellous and free are the effects of his mercy: and infinitely distant his views of real happiness and mercy from those of carnal men. Happy are they whom he blesses, and miserable are they whom he curses, be their outward circumstances what they will. And it is eternity, not time, that properly distinguishes the lot of saints and sinners. Honourable and beneficent is the spirit and tendency of the Christian religion, which so calls us to imitate JEHOVAH in his most endearing perfections and work. How important is it to be a Christian indeed! It is a great reproach for the professors of the true religion to do no more in duty toward God or men than mere heathens. And we need to live always under a deep sense of our own weakness and pollution, and in daily repentance and forgiveness; so shall we be induced to candid and charitable conceptions of others. It is absurd to attempt raising good works out of un-renewed hearts; or to expect a blessing with teachers whom Christ never sent. Let us therefore take heed what, how, and whom we hear. Let us receive Christ's Word into our heart; and resting on him by faith, practise it in our lives; so shall we persevere unto the end, and safely arrive in glory, notwithstanding all the storms that may befall us by the way.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 11. Nain was a city of Galilee, a few miles south of Mount Tabor. It still exists as a small village, exclusively inhabited by Turks. O! that the Lord would again say to the dead (to Israel, the son of the widow Zion), Young man (Israel young and vigorous in faith), Arise! O! that he would deliver him again to Jerusalem his mother! Surely then would he again 'begin to speak,' and, like Paul, he that persecuted Christ in his members, would preach him in every city! —Note, Infidels have spoken of this case as a mere restoration from a lethargy. This assertion represents these objectors as better judges, at the end of many hundred years, than a tender mother and all the young man's personal friends, a few days after his death. They judged him dead. Our Lord found him as carried to his grave, closely covered with a cloth, as the manner of the Jews required—he touched the bier—commanded him to arise—he obeyed, rose up, and began to speak.—All present were astonished, and ascribed the work to God. Infidels now may gainsay—for having rejected Moses and the prophets, neither will they believe though one rise from the dead, C.

REFLECTIONS.—Masters ought to take tender care of their faithful servants: and such indeed will in general insure their attention and regard in the time of distress or affliction. It is a great advantage to interest the fervent prayers of Christ's favourites in our behalf. And great is the influence, and distinguished the humility and honour, of a strong faith. Unanswerably has Jesus demonstrated his divine and mediatorial characters in healing all manner of diseases, raising the dead, and forgiving sins, with infinite efficacy and authority. Tender is his regard to Gentile believers, and his compassion to the afflicted and destitute: and gracious, full, and plenteous his mercy to all sorts of sinners, however guilty and miserable. What exalting thoughts ought we then to have of him, and what abasing thoughts of ourselves before him! With great earnestness ought we to call on him in every distress, and to imitate him in always doing good. Spiritually to know who and what he is, cannot but create love to him, and remove every prejudice against him: and he is ever ready to instruct and satisfy humble inquirers. Nor should we ever doubt of his excellency because we suffer for his sake, and others condemn and oppose him.—The meek will he teach his way, that they may be witnesses for God and religion, when proud and self-righteous men shall be left to reject his admonitions to their own destruction. Resolute cavillers will always find a handle in the different tempers and manners of ministers. Hatred of Christ's Word will lead them to quarrel either with the deliverer or the delivery of it.—O what a change God's almighty grace makes on the heart and life of the most atrocious sinners! And the more abundantly the grace of the gospel is believed and applied, the more abundant love to God, repentance, and deep humility will be manifested in our whole temper and conduct. Alas! that any should ever quarrel with the wisdom of God's mercy towards sinners, or with their uncommon affection towards him while impressed with a sense of his mercy!

CHAPTER VIII. REFLECTIONS.—O the infinite but voluntary debasement of our Redeemer, that he must live on the liberality of others, even of those who had lately been infamous sinners! But cheerfully they who get good by the gospel will contribute to maintain the preacher. And they who have been healed by Jesus' grace will eagerly follow him in the way. But Satan and our inward corruptions most awfully hinder the efficacy of the gospel on most of the hearers of it. Those who accept Christ are renewed, according to the will of God, and rendered fruitful in holiness. Let us then take heed how we hear, and whether we seek to have the principles of true grace implanted in our soul. And let us improve the light and grace that we have for our own and others' advantage. If we cordially embrace the gospel, we are Christ's disciples, and neither raging winds nor devouring devils shall be able to deprive us of his love and care. If storms try our faith, his presence will secure our safety. Let us therefore in dangers ever flee to, trust in, and adore our ever-merciful, ever-mindful God and Saviour. If Satan should exert all his power and malice to render us miserable, Jesus can rescue us and restrain him at pleasure. Alas, that ever love to this world, or slavish fear, should make his presence disagreeable! Happy are they who, sensible of sin, weakness, and danger, eagerly press towards and cleave to him, notwithstanding every discouragement. In what God-like manner he triumphed over diseases, devils, and death: and yet, with the greatest self-denial, laboured to conceal his miraculous works!—And still abundant is his to come unto thee: <sup>1</sup>but say in a word, and my servant shall be healed.

8 For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers: and I say unto one, <sup>4</sup>Go; and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it.

9 When Jesus heard these things, he <sup>k</sup>marvelled at him, and turned him about, and said unto the people that followed him, I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not <sup>4</sup>in Israel.

10 And<sup>n</sup> they that were sent,<sup>5</sup> returning to the house, found the servant whole that had been sick.

11 ¶ And it came to pass the day after, that he went into a city called Nain; and many of his disciples went with him, and much people.

12 Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, the <sup>o</sup>only son of his mother, and she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her.

13 And when the Lord saw her, he <sup>h</sup>had compassion on her, and said unto her, <sup>4</sup>Weep not.

14 And he came and touched the bier:<sup>6</sup> and they that bare him stood still. And he said, Young man, <sup>r</sup>I say unto thee, Arise.

15 And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother.

16 And<sup>s</sup> there came a fear on all: and they glorified God, saying, That <sup>a</sup>a great prophet is risen up among us; and, That God hath <sup>u</sup>visited his people.

17 And this rumour of him went forth throughout all Judea, and throughout all the region round about.<sup>7</sup>

18 ¶ And<sup>v</sup> the disciples of John showed him of all these things.

19 And John calling unto him <sup>x</sup>two of his disciples, sent them to Jesus, saying, Art thou he<sup>y</sup> that should come? or look we for another?

20 When the men were come unto him, they said, John Baptist hath sent us unto thee, saying, Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?

21 And in that same hour he cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits;<sup>8</sup> and unto many that were blind he gave sight.

22 Then Jesus answering, said unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard; <sup>z</sup>how that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, to the poor the gospel is preached.

23 And blessed is he, whosoever shall not <sup>a</sup>be offended in me.

lene, and Mary the sister of Lazarus, be the same, or three distinct persons, has been matter of serious question, both among ancient and modern expositors.
See Mat. 26. 6. Mar. 14.
3. Jn. 12. 3. It seems plain, however, that this woman was a resident in Nain, well known by character
to the Pharisee (ver.
39), and so a different person from Mary of Magdala, a city on

<sup>9</sup> Perhaps Mary
Magdalene, ver. 34;

<sup>1</sup> Whether this woman, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the sister of Lazarus, be the same, or three distinct persons, has been matter of serious question, both among ancient and modern expositors.
See Mat. 26. 6. Mar. 14.
3. Jn. 12. 3. It seems plain, however, that this woman was a resident in Nain, well known by character
to the Pharisee (ver.
39), and so a different person from Mary of Magdala, a city on the other side of Jordan; and all that is recorded of Mary the sister of Lazarus seems clearly to distinguish her from both these Marys.—C.

<sup>2</sup> In what sense this woman was a sinner does not appear; but our Lord acknowledges (ver.
47) that 'her sins were many.' Nor will this admission aid in the discovery of her peculiar character;
for who can deny that his 'sins are many.' The general conclusion that she was an adulteress or harlot seems harsh,
because it is unnecessary, and utterly unsupported by any intimation either from the uncharitable Simon or our righteous
Lord.—C.

INTERIOR OF THE CHURCH AT NAIN—WHERE OUR LORD RAISED THE WIDOW'S SON TO LIFE. [LUKE, vii: 11.]—"And it came to pass the day after, that he went into a city called Nain, and many of his disciples went with him, and much people." Nain is to-day but a dilapidated and wretched village. It was here that our Savior met the funeral procession, and said to the dead young man: "Young man, I say unto thee, arise. And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak, and he delivered him to his mother." Perhaps this is the first instance on record where a funeral procession was changed into an assembly of good cheer and rejoicing, and Jesus Christ is the only one who has ever been able to redeem a funeral from its utter desolate and heartbreaking features, and to inspire those who are giving up their loved ones with hope to meet them again.

40 And<sup>v</sup> Jesus, answering, said unto him, Simon,<sup>4</sup> I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, "Master, say on.

41 There<sup>5</sup> was a certain creditor which had two<sup>v</sup> debtors: the one owed<sup>v</sup> five hundred<sup>a</sup> pence, and the other fifty:

42 And when they<sup>b</sup> had nothing to pay, he frankly<sup>c</sup> forgave them both. Tell me, therefore, which of them will love him most?

43 Simon answered and said, I suppose that he<sup>a</sup> to whom he forgave most. And he said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged.

44 And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou<sup>e</sup> gavest me no water for my feet: but she hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped<sup>f</sup> them with the hairs of her head.

45 Thou gavest me no<sup>g</sup> kiss: but this woman, since the time I came in, hath not ceased to kiss my feet.

46 My<sup>h</sup> head with oil thou didst not anoint: but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment.

47 Wherefore I say unto thee, <sup>i</sup>Her sins, which are many,<sup>6</sup> are forgiven; for<sup>7</sup> she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little.

48 And he said unto her, <sup>j</sup>Thy sins are forgiven.<sup>8</sup>

49 And they that sat at meat with him began to say within themselves, <sup>k</sup>Who is this that forgiveth sins also?

50 And he said to the woman, <sup>l</sup>Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Women minister unto Christ of their substance. 4 Christ, after he had preached from place to place, attended with his apostles, propoundeth the parable of the sower. 16 Light is given to be improved and communicated: 21 he declareth who are his mother and brethren: 22 rebuketh the winds: 26 casteth the legion of devils out of the man into the herd of swine: 37 is rejected of the Gadarenes: 43 healeth the woman of her bloody issue: 49 and raiseth to life Jairus' daughter.

AND it came to pass afterward, <sup>a</sup>that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God: and the <sup>b</sup>twelve were with him;

2 And certain women,<sup>1</sup> which had been healed of evil spirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene,<sup>2</sup> out of whom went seven devils,

3 And Joanna the wife of Chuza, <sup>c</sup>Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others, which ministered<sup>a</sup> unto him of their substance.

4 ¶ And<sup>e</sup> when much people were gathered together, and were come to him out of every city, he spake by a parable:

5 A<sup>g</sup> sower<sup>3</sup> went out to sow his seed: and as he sowed, some fell<sup>b</sup> by the way-side; and it was <sup>i</sup>trodden down, and the fowls of the air devoured it.<sup>4</sup>

6 And some fell upon<sup>a</sup> a rock; and as soon

It appears from the incident which follows, that Christ prefers those who are faithful hearers of his word, and doers of his work, to his nearest relations. Christ would rather be busy at his work than conversing with his friends (Henry).—I.

as it was sprung up, it withered away, because it lacked moisture.

7 And some fell among<sup>k</sup> thorns; and the thorns sprang up with it, and choked it.

8 And other fell on<sup>l</sup> good ground, and sprang up, and bare fruit an hundred-fold. And when he had said these things, he<sup>m</sup> cried, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

9 ¶ And his disciples asked him, saying, <sup>n</sup>What might this parable be?

10 And he said, <sup>p</sup>Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God: but to others in parables; that<sup>q</sup> seeing they might not see, and hearing they might not understand.

11 ¶ Now<sup>r</sup> the parable is this: The<sup>s</sup> seed is the word of God.

12 Those by the way-side are<sup>t</sup> they that hear; then cometh the devil, and taketh away the word<sup>u</sup> out of their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved.

13 They<sup>v</sup> on the rock are<sup>they</sup>, which, when they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away.

14 And<sup>x</sup> that which fell among thorns are they, which, when they have heard, go<sup>y</sup> forth, and are choked with cares and riches and pleasures of<sup>this</sup> life, and bring no<sup>z</sup> fruit to perfection.

15 But<sup>a</sup> that on the good ground are they, which, <sup>a</sup>in an honest and good heart, having heard the word, keep<sup>it</sup>, and bring forth fruit with<sup>b</sup> patience.<sup>6</sup>

16 ¶ No<sup>c</sup> man, when he hath lighted a candle, covereth it with a vessel, or putteth<sup>it</sup> under a bed; but setteth<sup>it</sup> on a candlestick, that they which enter in may see the light.

17 For<sup>d</sup> nothing is secret that shall not be made manifest; neither<sup>any</sup> thing hid that shall not be known and come abroad.

18 Take<sup>e</sup> heed therefore how ye<sup>7</sup> hear: <sup>f</sup>for whosoever hath, to him shall be given; and whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have.<sup>8</sup>

19 ¶ Then<sup>h</sup> came to him<sup>his</sup> mother and his brethren, and could not come at him for the press.

20 And it was told him<sup>by</sup> certain, which said, Thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to see thee.

21 And he answered and said unto them, <sup>i</sup>My mother and my brethren are these which hear the word of God, and do it.

22 ¶ Now<sup>j</sup> it came to pass on a certain day, that he went into a ship with his disciples: and he said unto them, Let us go over unto the other side of the lake. And they launched forth.

23 But as they sailed, he<sup>k</sup> fell asleep: and

MAGDALA. [LUKE, viii:2.]—North of Tiberias, on the west coast of the Sea of Galilee, a single day's journey takes the traveler through the sites of Magdala, Nazareth and Capernaum—scenes of sacred interest in connection with the New Testament. This is nothing to-day but a little fishing village, but it has continued to bear the name it was known by in the days of our Savior, while many of the great cities of the world have disappeared, and thus this insignificant little town has continued to bear witness and to keep alive the memory of Mary Magdalene. Here it was that the grace of the Redeemer was shown in transforming into a sweet and lovely saint a woman whose name perhaps would never have been known but for the fact that she came into the presence of the Son of God and the Son of Man.

there<sup>1</sup> came down a storm of wind on the lake; and they were filled<sup>9</sup> with water, and were in jeopardy.

24 And they came to him, and <sup>1</sup>awoke him, saying, <sup>2</sup>Master, Master, we perish! <sup>3</sup>Then he arose, and rebuked the wind and the raging of the water: and they ceased, and there was a calm.

25 And he said unto them, <sup>1</sup>Where is your faith? And they, <sup>2</sup>being afraid, wondered, saying one to another, What manner of man is this! for he commandeth even the winds and water, and they obey him.

26 ¶ And<sup>1</sup> they arrived at the country of the Gadarenes,<sup>1</sup> which is over against Galilee.

27 And when he went forth to land, <sup>1</sup>there met him out of the city a certain man, which had devils long time, and ware no clothes, neither abode in any house, but in the tombs.

28 When he saw Jesus, <sup>1</sup>he cried out, and fell down before him, and with a loud voice said, <sup>2</sup>What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God most high? I beseech thee, <sup>3</sup>torment me not.

29 (For<sup>1</sup> he had commanded the unclean spirit to come out of the man. <sup>2</sup>For oftentimes it had caught him: and he was kept bound with chains and in fetters; and he brake the bands, and was driven of the devil into the wilderness.)

30 And Jesus asked him, saying, What is thy name? And he said, Legion:<sup>2</sup> because many devils were entered into him.

31 And<sup>1</sup> they besought him that he would not command them to go out into the deep.<sup>3</sup>

32 And there was there <sup>1</sup>an herd of many swine feeding on the mountain: and they besought him that he would suffer them to enter into them: <sup>2</sup>and he suffered them.

33 Then went the devils out of the man, and entered into the swine: and <sup>1</sup>the herd ran violently down a steep place into the lake, and were choked.

34 When they that fed them saw what was done, they <sup>1</sup>fled, and went and told it in the city and in the country.

35 Then they went out to see what was done; and came to Jesus, and <sup>1</sup>found the man, out of whom the devils were departed, sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and <sup>2</sup>in his right mind:<sup>4</sup> and they were afraid.

36 They also which saw it told them by what means he that was possessed of the devils was healed.

37 Then the whole multitude of the country of the Gadarenes round about <sup>1</sup>besought him to depart from them; for they were taken with consists in one erroneous idea or train of ideas. Sometimes, however, but seldom, the whole mind is astray. Now that such aberrations, whether partial or universal, may arise from various bodily affections is certain. An injury on the head, vitiated digestion or secretion, narcotics, and various stimulant drugs, fever, &c., may all produce mental derangement. But surely this variety of causes, all concurring in producing the same effect, instead of leading to the conclusion that this and the similar cases recorded in the New Testament, were not demoniacal possessions, but mere bodily diseases, should conduct to the very opposite—to wit, the possibility of some other cause inscrutable to the eye of man—nay the certainty of another cause, when discovered and declared upon the authority of Christ. Indeed, to deny the possibility of demoniacal possession is as unphiloso-phical as it is unscriptural. The power of an embodied spirit to infuse bad principles into others, and drive a man, a church, a kingdom, out of their 'right mind' is daily witnessed. Who, then, can philosophically deny to the disembodied that power which an embodied spirit is certainly known to possess?

great fear: and he went up into the ship, and returned back again.

38 Now the man out of whom the devils were departed <sup>1</sup>besought him that he might be with him: but Jesus sent him away, saying,

39 Return<sup>k</sup> to thine own house, and show how great things God hath done unto thee. <sup>1</sup>And he went his way, and published throughout the whole city how great things Jesus had done unto him.

40 And it came to pass, that, <sup>1</sup>when Jesus was returned, the people gladly received him: for they were all waiting for him.<sup>5</sup>

41 ¶ And<sup>o</sup> behold, there came a man named Jairus,<sup>6</sup> and he was a <sup>1</sup>ruler of the synagogue; and he fell down at Jesus' feet, and <sup>2</sup>besought him that he would come into his house:

42 For he had one only daughter, about twelve years of age, and she <sup>1</sup>lay a dying. But as he went, the people thronged him.

45 And Jesus said, Who touched me? When all denied, Peter, and they that were with him, said, Master, the multitude throng thee and press thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me?

46 And Jesus said, Somebody hath touched me: for I perceive that <sup>1</sup>'virtue is gone out of me.

47 And<sup>b</sup> when the woman saw that she was not hid, she came <sup>1</sup>'trembling, and <sup>2</sup>'falling down before him, she declared unto him, before all the people, for what cause she had touched him, and how she was healed immediately.

48 And he said unto her, <sup>1</sup>'Daughter, be of good comfort: thy faith hath made thee whole: go in peace.

49 ¶ While<sup>9</sup> he yet spake, there cometh one from the ruler of the synagogue's house, saying to him, Thy daughter is dead: trouble not the Master.

50 But when Jesus heard it, he answered him, saying, <sup>1</sup>'Fear not: believe only, and she shall be made whole.

51 And when he came into the house, <sup>1</sup>he suffered no man to go in, <sup>2</sup>'save Peter, and James, and John, and the father and the mother of the maiden.

52 And<sup>k</sup> all wept, and bewailed her: but he said, Weep not; <sup>1</sup>'she is not dead, but sleepeth.

53 And they <sup>1</sup>'laughed him to scorn, knowing that she was dead.

worldly hopes and fears.—His spirit would thus have been harassed—perhaps, in the end, chafed and irritated; and, in any event, he must have been exposed to great temptations to apostasy, from all which our Lord delivers him, by the prescription of self-denial, and instant decision of purpose. C.

REFLECTIONS.—With authority Jesus commissions his gospel ministers: with faithfulness and care they must labour; and men's eternal state must be fixed as they hear or reject their messages. In times of scarcity and distress we should cast all our care on God, and be always ready to divide the little subsistence that we have with the hungry. By his blessing, restored through Christ, we may live comfortably, and in a Christian manner, on a little. Happy are they who boldly confess the Redeemer, whatever they may suffer on his account. What is lost for him on earth

BETHSAIDA—THE PRESENT SITE OF THE CITY THAT WITNESSED MANY OF HIS WONDERFUL WORKS. [LUKE, ix: 10.] —Bethsaida was one of the cities most frequently visited by our Savior. It was very near Capernaum, which is called his own city. Always, in going from Capernaum to Jerusalem, or to any point west of the Sea of Galilee, He would pass through Bethsaida. It is said "He preached in their synagogues throughout all Galilee and cast out devils." We know from the woe Christ pronounced on Bethsaida that it was one of the cities which had witnessed most of his wonderful works. Nothing remains of the once proud and wealthy city but a few broken walls. It is all grown up in prickly pears and thorns, making such a thick undergrowth that it is almost impossible to pass over the site at all.

54 And <sup>he</sup> put them all out, and took her by the hand, and <sup>called</sup>, saying, Maid, arise.

55 And <sup>her</sup> spirit came again, and she arose straightway: and he commanded to give her meat.

56 And <sup>her</sup> parents were astonished; but he charged them that they should tell no man what was done.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Christ sendeth his apostles to work miracles, and preach the gospel. 7 Herod desireth to see Christ. 12 Christ feedeth five thousand: 18 inquireth what opinion the world had of him: foretelleth his passion: 23 proposeth to all the pattern of his patience. 28 The transfiguration. 37 He healeth the lunatic: 43 again forewarneth his disciples of his passion: 46 commendeth humility: 51 biddeth them to show mildness towards all, without desire of revenge: 57 proposeth terms to three persons who offer to follow him.

THEN he<sup>a</sup> called his twelve disciples together, and <sup>b</sup>gave them power<sup>1</sup> and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases.

2 And he sent them to <sup>c</sup>preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick.

3 And he said unto them, <sup>d</sup>Take nothing for your journey, neither staves, nor scrip, neither bread, neither money; neither have two coats apiece.

4 And <sup>e</sup>whatsoever house ye enter into, there abide, and thence depart.<sup>2</sup>

5 And <sup>f</sup>whosoever will not receive you, when ye go out of that city, shake off the very dust from your feet, for a testimony against them.

6 And <sup>h</sup>they departed, and went through the towns, preaching the gospel, and healing every where.

7 ¶ Now<sup>i</sup> Herod the tetrarch heard of all that was done by him: and he was perplexed, because that it was said of some, that John was risen from the dead;

8 And <sup>j</sup>of some, that Elias had appeared; and of others, that one of the old prophets was risen again.

9 And Herod said, <sup>k</sup>John have I beheaded: but who is this,<sup>3</sup> of whom I hear such things? And <sup>l</sup>he desired to see him.

10 ¶ And <sup>n</sup>the apostles, when they were returned, told him all that they had done. <sup>o</sup>And he took them, and went aside privately into a desert place, belonging to the city called <sup>p</sup>Bethsaida.

11 And the people, when they <sup>q</sup>knew it, followed him: and <sup>r</sup>he received them, and spake unto them of the kingdom of God, and healed them that had need of healing.

12 ¶ And <sup>s</sup>when the day began to wear away,<sup>4</sup> then came the twelve, and said unto him, Send the multitude away, that they may go into the towns and country round about, and lodge, and get victuals: for we are here in a desert place.

13 But he said unto them, <sup>t</sup>Give ye them to g This precept furnishes a most valuable instruction to all who are engaged in the work of Christ. 1. By confining them to one house, it gives them opportunity of studying character, an essential element in every preacher of the gospel who would 'rightly divide the word of truth.' 2. It enables them to form more intimate friendships, which are often of great value to themselves when they depart, and to their successors, whom they are thus qualified to introduce. 3. It enables them to economize, and prevents them from dissipating time. 4. It enables them to give themselves to reading and study at every interval of leisure. 5. It prevents exposure to the dangers of mixed society, and in the midst of a life of frequent change, preserves in full vigour the domestic principle and habits.—C.

m Herod is represented by Mat. (14. 1) as affirming that Jesus was John risen from the dead; here, as perplexed and inquiring. These two different statements involve, however, no contradiction; for Herod might, in the moment of his perplexity (a mixture of doubt and fear) make the inquiry; and within a very brief space, when his mind was more settled, make the affirmation.—C.

at Luke's account of the transfiguration is in some points fuller than those of the other evangelists. He gives in addition: 1. Our Lord's immediate object in going up to the mountain; it was 'to pray.' 2. He tells us how Christ was engaged when the transfiguration began;—'As he prayed.' 3. He farther tells us the subject on which our Lord spake with Moses and Elias;—it was 'of his decease.' This is one of many illustrations of the importance of studying the Gospels in harmony.—P.

eat. And they said, We have no more but five loaves and two fishes; except we should go and buy meat for all this people.

14 For they were about five thousand men. And he said to his disciples, <sup>u</sup>Make them sit down by fifties in a company.

15 And they did so, and made them all sit down.

16 Then he took the five loaves and the two fishes; and <sup>v</sup>looking up to heaven, he blessed them, and brake, and gave to the disciples to set before the multitude.

17 And <sup>w</sup>they did eat, and were all filled: and <sup>x</sup>there was taken up of fragments that remained to them twelve baskets.

18 ¶ And <sup>y</sup>it came to pass, as he was <sup>z</sup>alone<sup>6</sup> praying, his disciples were with him: and he asked them, saying, Whom say the people that I am?<sup>7</sup>

19 They answering said, <sup>a</sup>John the Baptist; but some <sup>b</sup>say, Elias; and others <sup>c</sup>say, that one of the old prophets is risen again.

20 He said unto them, But <sup>d</sup>whom say ye that I am? Peter answering said, <sup>e</sup>The Christ of God.

21 And <sup>f</sup>he straitly charged them, and commanded <sup>g</sup>them to tell no man that thing;

22 Saying, <sup>h</sup>The Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be slain, and be raised the third day.

23 ¶ And <sup>i</sup>he said to <sup>j</sup>them all, If any <sup>k</sup>man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me.

24 For whosoever will save his life, shall lose it: but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it.

25 For <sup>l</sup>what is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world, and lose himself, or be cast away?

26 For <sup>m</sup>whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and <sup>n</sup>in his Father's, and of the holy angels.

27 But <sup>o</sup>I tell you of a truth, there be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the kingdom of God.

29 And as he prayed, <sup>s</sup>the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment <sup>t</sup>was white and glistering.

30 And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were <sup>u</sup>Moses and Elias:

will be more than compensated in heaven. But dreadful is their eternal state who prefer the honours, profits, and pleasures of a present world, to him and his everlasting salvation, or who are ashamed of his truths and ways.—Astonishing is the influence of close fellowship with God. Easily it could even overset our mortal constitution. And how delightful then is heaven, where Jesus and all his saints shall for ever appear in their glory, and for ever, with joy inexpressible, contemplate his expiatory sufferings! In hopes of it, let me love his person, obey his directions, and trust all my cares and maladies to his power and skill. Let me accurately observe whether I have true faith, and in what degree; and into what debates I enter, and with what manner of spirit. Alas, what defects, prejudices,

BEDOUIN VILLAGE NEAR CÆSAREA PHILIPPI. [LUKE, ix: 39.—This scene in a Bedouin village, near Caesarea Philippi, shows us people who are very much like those living in the same region in the time of our Savior. O These people are often to-day diseased with afflictions they do not understand and that they have no means of relieving. They are so ignorant as to suppose that any medicine is sufficient to alleviate and cure them of their diseases. Refusing the spiritual help that our Lord brought to them, they have continued through all the centuries to suffer from the bodily ailments that flesh is heir to. Those that accept the spiritual offers of Jesus Christ have light and wisdom given to them, by which they are able to discern the herbs and minerals which are necessary to relieve their afflicted bodies.

32 But Peter and they that were with him were<sup>s</sup> heavy with sleep: and when they were awake, they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him.

33 And it came to pass, as they departed from him, Peter said unto Jesus, Master, <sup>3</sup>it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias: <sup>4</sup>not knowing what he said.

34 While he thus spake, there came a <sup>5</sup>cloud, and overshadowed them: and they <sup>6</sup>feared as they entered into the cloud.

35 And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, <sup>7</sup>This is my beloved Son: <sup>8</sup>hear him.

36 And when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone. <sup>9</sup>And they kept <sup>10</sup>it close, and told no man in those days any of those things which they had seen.

37 ¶ And<sup>c</sup> it came to pass, that on the next day, when they were come down from the hill, much people met him.

38 And, behold, a man of the company cried out, saying, Master, <sup>11</sup>I beseech thee, look upon my son; <sup>12</sup>for he is mine only child.

39 And lo, <sup>13</sup>a spirit taketh him, and he suddenly crieth out; and it teareth him that he foameth again; and, bruising him, hardly departeth from him.

40 And I besought thy disciples to cast him out; and <sup>14</sup>they could not.

41 And Jesus answering said, O <sup>15</sup>faithless and perverse generation! how long shall I be with you, and suffer you? <sup>16</sup>Bring thy son hither.

42 And as he was yet a coming, <sup>17</sup>the devil threw him down, and tare <sup>18</sup>him. And Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit, and healed the child, and delivered him again to his father.<sup>3</sup>

43 ¶ And<sup>d</sup> they were all amazed at the mighty power of God. But while they wondered every one at all things which Jesus did, he said unto his disciples, 44 Let<sup>n</sup> these sayings sink down into your ears: for the Son of man shall be delivered into the hands of men.

45 But<sup>e</sup> they understood not this saying, and it was hid from them, that they perceived it not: and they feared to ask him of that saying.

46 ¶ Then<sup>2</sup> there arose a reasoning among them, which of them should be greatest.<sup>4</sup>

47 And Jesus, <sup>5</sup>perceiving the thought of their heart, took <sup>6</sup>a child, and set him by him,

48 And said unto them, <sup>7</sup>Whosoever shall 31 Jesus now leaves Galilee not to return till after his resurrection. Luke details the incidents which occurred during the journey, most of which are peculiar to him, not being found in the other Gospels. Christ's route was not direct, and appears to have occupied a considerable time. We learn from Jn. 10.22 that our Lord was at Jerusalem at the feast of dedication, which took place about the end of December. Between that time and the passover when he was crucified he could not have returned to Galilee, for we are able to gather from incidental notices in John where that per-receive this child<sup>5</sup> in my name, receiveth me; and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth him that sent me: <sup>6</sup>for he that is least among you all, the same shall be great.

49 ¶ And<sup>u</sup> John answered and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbid him, because he followeth not with us.

50 And Jesus said unto him, <sup>7</sup>Forbid <sup>8</sup>him not: for he that is not against us is for us.

51 ¶ And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be <sup>9</sup>received up,<sup>6</sup> he <sup>10</sup>stedfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem,<sup>7</sup>

52 And sent messengers before his face: and they went, and entered into a village of the <sup>11</sup>Samaritans, to make ready for him.

53 And <sup>12</sup>they did not receive him, because his face was as though he would go to <sup>13</sup>Jerusalem.

54 And when his disciples <sup>14</sup>James and John saw <sup>15</sup>this, they said, Lord, wilt thou that <sup>16</sup>we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did?

55 But he turned, <sup>17</sup>and rebuked them, and said, Ye know not <sup>18</sup>what manner of spirit<sup>9</sup> ye are of.

56 For<sup>2</sup> the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save <sup>19</sup>them. And they went to another village.

57 ¶ And<sup>h</sup> it came to pass, that, as they went in the way, a certain <sup>20</sup>man<sup>1</sup> said unto him, Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

58 And Jesus said unto him, Foxes have holes, and birds of the air <sup>21</sup>have nests; <sup>22</sup>but the Son of man hath not where to lay <sup>23</sup>his head.<sup>2</sup>

59 And he said unto another, <sup>24</sup>Follow me. But he said, <sup>25</sup>Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.

60 Jesus said unto him, <sup>26</sup>Let the dead bury their dead; <sup>27</sup>but go thou and preach the kingdom of God.

61 And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but <sup>28</sup>let me first go bid them farewell which are at home at my house.

62 And Jesus said unto him, <sup>29</sup>No man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

CHAPTER X.

1 Christ sendeth out the seventy disciples to work miracles, and to preach: 17 they return with joy; Christ sheweth them wherein to rejoice: 21 thanketh his Father for his grace: 23 magnifieth the happy estate of his church: 25 teacheth the lawyer how to attain eternal life, and to take every one for his neighbour that needeth his mercy: 41 reprehendeth Martha, and commendeth Mary her sister.

AFTER these<sup>a</sup> things the Lord appointed other <sup>b</sup>seventy<sup>1</sup> also, and sent them two and two before his face into every city and place, whither he himself would come.

pride, and passion, he finds in the very best on earth! Heartily he detests them; and much more to have his gospel propagated by their means. But with great tenderness he treats the meek and humble, pities their infirmities, and cherishes their good intentions concerning him.

CHAPTER X. Ver. 30-37. In allusion, this wounded man may be viewed as an emblem of a lost sinner, to whom neither moral nor ceremonial laws can afford relief, and whom Jesus alone can tenderly pity and save by means of his gospel. But the real scope of the parable is to show that whatever provocations we have met with, we ought cordially to love, and kindly to help and relieve, our very enemies, even when their own professed friends overlook them.

Ver. 2. The labourers furnish the true emblem of a genuine minister of the gospel. The labourer must be early, punctual, attentive to his employer's orders; diligent, patient, and eat and

STREET SCENE IN TIBERIAS [LUKE, ix: 51.]—While we have no knowledge that our Savior was in Tiberias, we know that He often passed in sight of it, because He could not go from Nazareth to Capernaum, or from Jerusalem to Capernaum, without going by it. While there is no record of his entering it, we must think there are many things which He did of which we have no record, because St. John said if all the things He did were recorded the world itself would not contain the books, so that we have but little doubt but what our Savior was often in the city of Tiberias. He loved the haunts of men, and wherever men assembled He was in the midst of them. This was the greatest city of the time on the Sea of Galilee, the home of the Roman governor, and the center of interest about the lake. The people here now are very poor.

PLOWING AT JEZREEL—THE RICHEST VALLEY IN PALESTINE. [LUKE, ix : 52.]—
In going from Nazareth to Jerusalem, our Savior, if he followed the most direct route, would pass through the plains of Jezreel. This is a valley that runs across the whole of Palestine from near the Jordan to the Mediterranean Sea, and is not only the richest valley in the Holy Land, but perhaps one of the most fertile plains on the face of the earth. Notwithstanding it has been cultivated from the days of Abraham, yet without ever being fertilized it produces still the finest wheat. This plain belongs now to a Christian who lives at Beyrout, and is interesting because of the memories and associations and traditions connected with it. It has been the great battle field of the world, and the mountains Carmel, Tabor, Little Hermon, and Gilboa are all within or in sight of this plain. It was upon the edge of this plain, at Jenin, that the messengers who went before our Savior, as referred to in verse 52 of the ninth chapter of St. Luke, were turned back.

2 Therefore said he unto them, 'The harvest truly is great, but the labourers are few: pray ye therefore the 'Lord of the harvest, that 'he would send forth labourers into his harvest.'

3 Go<sup>a</sup> your ways: 'behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves.

4 Carry<sup>i</sup> neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes: and salute no man by the way.'

5 And<sup>j</sup> into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house.

6 And if the <sup>k</sup>son of peace<sup>4</sup> be there, your peace shall 'rest upon it: if not, it shall turn to you again.

7 And<sup>n</sup> in the same house<sup>5</sup> remain, eating and drinking such things as they give: for the labourer is 'worthy of his hire. 'Go not from house to house.

8 And into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you, eat such things as are set before you:

9 And 'heal the sick that are therein, and say unto them, 'The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

10 But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say, 11 Even<sup>r</sup> the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you: notwithstanding,<sup>s</sup> be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

12 But I say unto you, that 'it shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city.

13 ¶ Woe<sup>u</sup> unto thee, Chorazin!<sup>6</sup> woe unto thee, Bethsaida! for if the mighty works had been done in Tyre and Sidon which have been done in you, they had a great while ago 'repented, sitting in sackcloth and ashes.

14 But* it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the judgment, than for you.

15 And thou, Capernaum, 'which art exalted to heaven, shalt be thrust down to hell.

16 He<sup>z</sup> that heareth you, heareth me; and he that despiseth you, despiseth me; and he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me.

17 ¶ And the 'seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name.

18 And he said unto them, I beheld <sup>b</sup>Satan as lightning fall from heaven.

19 Behold, 'I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy: and nothing shall by any means hurt you.

f The discourse addressed to the seventy is in substance the same as that to the twelve, as the similarity of their errand would lead us to suppose it would be. But there is, as Stier has well remarked, this weighty difference. The discourse in Mat. x., in its three great divisions, speaks plainly of an office founded, and a ministry appointed, which was to involve a work, and embrace consequences, coextensive, both in space and duration, with the world. Here we have no such prospective view unfolded. The whole discourse is confined to the first division there, and relates entirely to present duties' (Alford).—P.

7 It is a natural tendency for man to glory in the exercise and exhibition of power, whether that power is inherent or conferred. The apostles and disciples of our Lord sometimes showed a disposition to glory in their success. This arises from pride, and may result in neglect of the real work which God had committed to them. Against all such feelings Christ here solemnly warns them.—P.

21 ¶ In that hour Jesus 'rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank thee, O Father, 'Lord of heaven and earth, that thou 'hast hid these things<sup>8</sup> from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes: even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight.

22 'All<sup>9</sup> things are delivered to me of my Father: and no man knoweth who the Son is, but the Father; and who the Father is, but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him.

23 ¶ And he turned him unto his disciples, and said privately, 'Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see:

24 For I tell you, <sup>k</sup>that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

25 ¶ And, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, 'Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?

26 He said unto him, 'What is written in the law? how readest thou?

27 And he answering said, 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself.

28 And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right: 'this do, and thou shalt live.

sleep but to gain fresh strength for new employment. May the Lord send forth many such to reap and to gather in his harvest! C.

Ver. 11. We do wipe off against you. Rather, 'we do wipe off for you;' the act not implying a threat, such as the Authorized Version seems to convey, but visibly to represent their disinterestedness; as if they had said, 'we came not for yours—no, not even to a particle of your dust, which we thus wipe off and leave with you—but we came for you, that by grace we might translate you to that heavenly kingdom of which we are the messengers.' C.

Ver. 18. Like lightning. Visibly, swiftly, portentously, destructively. The destructive throes of Satan, when falling from his throne in the world he had usurped and governed, may be well illustrated by his efforts to destroy some of those miserable demoniacs from whom he was cast out, Mar. 9.20, 22; Lu. 9.42.—The word heaven is not merely applied to the place and state of glory, 2 Co. 5.1, 2, but also to the powers and dignities of this world, Is. 13.10, 13, comp. with ver. 19; see also note on Mat. 24.29, 30. The meaning therefore seems to be that our Lord saw Satan, either in his own person or in the persons of his angels, falling from that supremacy over the world which he had so long usurped. He saw him actually beginning to fall, and, prophetically, he saw him totally fallen before the preaching of the gospel. C.

Ver. 19. The promise, 'nothing shall by any means hurt you,' being expounded by comparison with such scriptures as Mat. 10.16-22, and by the actual history of the apostles, will be seen to insure, not exemption from temporal, but from spiritual injury; and the superiority conferred 'over all the power of the enemy' (Satan) seems to lead to the conclusion that by 'serpents and

INN OF THE GOOD SAMARITAN. [LUKE, x : 34.]—About half-way between Jerusalem and Jericho there stands to-day an inn that is said to occupy the site of the ancient inn where the good Samaritan carried the man who had fallen and been beaten among the thieves. This is the place where travelers take dinner on their way from Jerusalem to Jericho. This region of country still abounds with thieves, thus making it necessary for every one who passes this way to go under guard. This guard is furnished travelers by the sheik of the country, whose headquarters is at the Apostle's Fountain, about four miles east of Jerusalem. Our Savior seized upon the event of the man falling among thieves and being shunned by the priests and Levites, but ministered to by the good Samaritan, to teach the world charity, and to treat every one as his neighbor.

he took out two pence,<sup>4</sup> and gave them to <sup>the</sup> host, and said unto him, Take care of him; and whatsoever<sup>a</sup> thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee.

36 Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves?

37 And he said, <sup>b</sup>He that showed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, <sup>c</sup>Go, and do thou likewise.

38 ¶ Now it came to pass, as they went, that he entered into a certain village:<sup>5</sup> and a certain woman, named <sup>d</sup>Martha, received him into her house.<sup>6</sup>

39 And she had a sister called Mary, which also <sup>e</sup>sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his word.

40 But Martha was <sup>f</sup>cumbered<sup>7</sup> about much serving, and came to him and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? bid her therefore that she help me.

41 And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art <sup>g</sup>careful<sup>8</sup> and troubled<sup>9</sup> about many things:

42 But <sup>h</sup>one thing is needful:<sup>1</sup> and Mary hath chosen that <sup>i</sup>good part, which shall not be taken away from her.

CHAPTER XI.

<sup>1</sup> Christ teacheth to pray, and that instantly: 11 assuring that God so will give us good things. 14 He, casting out a dumb devil, rebuketh the blasphemy of the Pharisees: 28 and sheweth who are blessed: 29 preacheth to the people, 37 and reprehendeth the outward show of holiness in the Pharisees, scribes, and lawyers.

AND it came to pass, that as he was <sup>a</sup>praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said unto him, <sup>b</sup>Lord, <sup>c</sup>teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples.<sup>1</sup>

2 And he said unto them, When ye pray, say, <sup>d</sup>Our<sup>e</sup> Father which art in heaven, <sup>f</sup>hallowed be thy name. <sup>g</sup>Thy kingdom come. Thy<sup>i</sup> will be done, as in heaven, so in earth.

3 Give<sup>j</sup> us day by day<sup>2</sup> our daily bread.

4 And<sup>k</sup> forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us. And lead<sup>l</sup> us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil.

scorpions' are here to be understood, not the animals so named, but satanic agents, more poisonous to the soul than they to the body. That the promise of exemption from the power of serpents may, however, be also literally understood, is manifest from Mar. 16. 18; Ac. 28. 3, 5. C.

Ver. 33. Samaritan. The object of our Lord in selecting a Samaritan was to show how a people whom the Jews hated and despised were capable of kind and generous actions, that thereby he might soften down national prejudices, and prepare the way for the union of all nations under one King. C.

Ver. 37. Go and do likewise. That is, neighbour includes not merely our friends by the ties of nature or grace—two points the lawyer never questioned; but also every one, friend or stranger, countryman or alien, who may stand in any need of our aid, and whom we have the means and the opportunity to serve. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great are the difficulties of faithful gospel ministers, and proportionate their assistance. Alas! that so few should be laborious, skilful, and faithful, or successful! If their authority, qualifications, help, and success depend wholly on Christ, with what earnestness should their ministrations be attended to and improved! and cheerfully ought their hearers to provide them a subsistence. Ministers ought to appear altogether disentangled from carnal cares and pursuits. And dreadful is their case who reject a purely-preached gospel and the faithful preachers of it.

—Happy is it to be instrumental in advancing the kingdom of Christ, and depressing that of Satan. But more so to be enrolled in heaven, as the loving people of God and heirs of his glory. How exhilarating are the views of that divine grace which, by the almighty influence of the Holy Ghost, God bestows on all the world the saving blessings and distinguished honours of the new kingdom! But it is absurd for men to seek righteousness and life by a law which they can never fulfil; or to attempt reducing the broad law of God to the standard of their own heart and life. Never ought any to inquire concerning eternal salvation from a captious or even curious intention, but with the most serious concern. And it is comely when love to God and to men streams powerfully through every action of life, and the miseries of strangers and enemies awaken our tender compassion. Never should ministers or others make visits without leaving a savour of Christ behind them. Everywhere they should labour to render men wise unto salvation. And no secular cares should ever hinder spiritual concern. Thrice happy are they who have the saving knowledge of, and an interest in, Christ! If once we have this, neither none but ourselves can deprive us of it; and Jesus will encourage our solicitous care about it, and seek our eternal possession of it.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 2-4. The prayer here is an abridged form of that contained in the sermon on the mount, Mat. 6. 9-12, but was delivered on a very different occasion. This was revealed to one applicant for instruction, the former as an example, in the course of the sermon, Mat. 5. 9, equally addressed to all. C.

Ver. 5. Midnight. The call 'at midnight,' that would appear so unlikely in the colder northern climates, would be perfectly natural in the warmer latitudes, in which, during summer, journeys are often taken at night, for avoidance of the oppressive and even dangerous heat of the day.—Three loaves may appear a large and unnecessary quantity, but the Jewish loaves were merely thin biscuit, each weighing but a few ounces. While it is also to be recollected that eastern hospitality required an amount of provision for a friend far beyond his necessity. See Ge. 43. 34. C.

Ver. 12. Scorpion. The scorpion is generally about two inches in length, and in structure resembles a lobster. It has a jointed tail, said to increase with its age, at the end of which is a small curved sharp-pointed sting, capable of inflicting a most poisonous and often deadly wound. Ælian, Avicenna, and others, describe a white species, of an oval form, and much resembling an ordinary egg. C.

Ver. 45. Lawyers. That scribes and lawyers are sometimes used indiscriminately is certain, from comparing Mat. 22. 35 with <sup>4</sup> This is an evil generation, because, instead of hearing the word of God, and keeping it in memory or in practice, they 'seek a sign,' which they do not need, and which, if it were shown to their utmost wish, they would still disregard. Note, This implication is founded on the principle that he who from prejudice or love of sin rejects sufficient argument addressed to the understanding, would continue to reject evidence addressed to the senses. He that will not believe the Bible to be the word of God will assuredly deny a miracle to be the work of God. Of this the Jews gave sufficient example when they ascribed our Lord's miracles to Satan, and paid for a falsehood to impugn his resurrection.—C.

putteth it in a secret place, neither under a bushel, but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light.

34 The<sup>v</sup> light<sup>5</sup> of the body is the eye: therefore when thine eye is single, thy whole body also is full of light; <sup>w</sup>but when thine eye is evil, thy body also is full of darkness.

35 Take heed, therefore, <sup>x</sup>that the light which is in thee be not darkness.

37 ¶ And as he spake, <sup>b</sup>a certain Pharisee besought him to dine with him: and he went in, and sat down to meat.

38 And when the Pharisee saw it, he marvelled that <sup>c</sup>he had not first washed before dinner.

39 And the Lord said unto him, <sup>d</sup>Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter; but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness.

40 Ye <sup>e</sup>fools,<sup>8</sup> did not he that <sup>f</sup>made that which is without make that which is within also?

41 But<sup>9</sup> rather give alms<sup>1</sup> of such things as ye have;<sup>2</sup> and, behold, all things are clean unto you.

42 But<sup>h</sup> woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

43 Woe<sup>i</sup> unto you, Pharisees! for ye love the uppermost seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets.

44 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for <sup>j</sup>ye are as graves which appear not, and the men that walk over them are not aware of them.

45 Then answered one of the lawyers, and said unto him, Master, thus saying thou reproachest us also.

46 And<sup>k</sup> he said, Woe unto you also, ye lawyers! for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers.

47 Woe<sup>l</sup> unto you! for ye build the sepulchres of the prophets, and your fathers killed them.

Mar. 12.28. But 'scribes and Pharisees' being both already mentioned, ver. 44, and the lawyer here concluding that he and his brethren were thus condemned by implication, it is evident there was a class of the learned professions specially called lawyers who yet were not called scribes. From ver. 52 it is probable some of 'the lawyers' were teachers in the colleges; and, from the influence ascribed to them, ver. 46, 47, that others were magistrates or judges. C.

REFLECTIONS.—There is great need that Jesus Christ should teach us to pray to God, as our gracious and heavenly Father, for all temporal, and especially spiritual blessings, with holy reverence and adoration; with firm faith, strong fervour, and persevering importunity; and with a charitable and forgiving temper of spirit, that God in all things may be glorified. If we thus pour out our requests in the name of our Redeemer, it is impossible they should fail of a gracious answer. But while some learn to pray, how many, contrary to all means used with them, reject and learn to blaspheme the glorious Deliverer from sin and Satan. None are held neuter in religion, but are either Jesus' friends or enemies. They, therefore, who seemed to be once reformed, often become the vilest apostates and distinguished slaves of Satan. How ready are others to imagine real happiness to consist in outward connections with Christ. But it is only they who believe and obey the gospel that are happy indeed. How dark is the gospel to persons destitute of faith and depraved in judgment! But aggravated is their guilt, and inexpressible their misery, who remain wilfully blinded by pitiful prejudices amidst the clearest gospel light, and who are influenced by a superstitious, hypocritical, and persecuting temper. Fearful sorrow awaits them who prefer external ceremonies to the substantial duties of love and obedience; or who are zealous of fair shows of religion while they secretly indulge themselves in the vilest abominations; or who, 48 Truly ye bear witness that ye allow<sup>3</sup> the deeds of your fathers: for they indeed killed them, and ye build their sepulchres.

49 Therefore also said the wisdom of God, I<sup>1</sup> will send them prophets and apostles, and some<sup>2</sup> of them they shall slay and persecute:

50 That<sup>3</sup> the blood of all the prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation:

51 From the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, which perished between the altar and the temple: verily I say unto you, "It shall be required of this generation.

52 Woe<sup>4</sup> unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge: ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered.<sup>5</sup>

53 And as he said these things unto them, the scribes and the Pharisees began to urge him vehemently, and to provoke him to speak of many things:

54 Laying<sup>6</sup> wait for him, and seeking to catch something out of his mouth, that they might accuse him.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Christ preacheth to his disciples to avoid hypocrisy, and carefulness in publishing his doctrine: 13 warneth the people to beware of covetousness, by the parable of the rich man who set up greater barns. 22 We must not be over-careful of earthly things, 31 but seek the kingdom of God, 33 give alms, 36 be ready at a knock to open to our Lord whensoever he cometh. 41 Christ's ministers are to see to their charge, 49 and look for persecution. 54 The people must take this time of grace, 58 because it is a fearful thing to die without reconciliation.

IN the mean time, when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude<sup>1</sup> of people, insomuch that they trode one upon another, he began to say unto his disciples first of all, Beware<sup>2</sup> ye of the leaven<sup>3</sup> of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy.

2 For<sup>4</sup> there is nothing covered,<sup>3</sup> that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known.

3 Therefore whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light; and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets shall be proclaimed upon the house-tops.<sup>4</sup>

4 And I say unto you my friends, Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do.

5 But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: Fear him, which after he hath killed, hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him.

6 Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God?

condemning ancient persecutors, do themselves rage against and persecute Christ, his gospel, and followers. Perseverance in national sins certainly issues in national ruin. And it is highly criminal and dangerous to hate, conceal, or misinterpret the Scriptures, or to hate reproof, and rage against Jesus Christ and his Word for condemning our faults.

7 But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not therefore: ye are of more value than many sparrows.

8 Also I say unto you, Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God:

9 But he that denieth me before men shall be denied before the angels of God.

10 And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost<sup>5</sup> it shall not be forgiven.

11 And when they bring you unto the synagogues, and unto magistrates, and powers, take ye no thought how or what thing ye shall answer, or what ye shall say:

12 For the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say.<sup>6</sup>

13 ¶ And one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me.

14 And he said unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?

15 And he said unto them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.

16 And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully:

17 And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?

18 And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits<sup>8</sup> and my goods.

19 And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

20 But God said unto him, Thou fool! this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided?

21 So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God.

22 ¶ And he said unto his disciples, Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought<sup>2</sup> for your life, what ye shall eat; neither for the body, what ye shall put on.

23 The life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment.

24 Consider the ravens: for they neither regard to which unmeaning portents (of superstition begotten, and by superstition expounded) God expressly forbids. See Je. 10. 2. A literal translation would stand thus:—'Neither be ye meteorized,' carried about as clouds 'by every wind of doctrine,' tossed up and down between hope and fear of the means of support. C.

Ver. 32. Even nominal Christians are still a 'little flock'—only about 175,500,000; while 482,000,000 are heathens, 140,000,000 Mohammedans, and 2,500,000 Jews. But of these 175,500,000 nominal Christians, how (comparatively) few can even charity reckon as real followers of the Lamb! Yet, however few, it is their Father's good-will to prevent them now, by grace, from following a multitude to do evil, and to make them the founders of that spiritual kingdom that shall yet obtain dominion over all the earth. C.

Ver. 35. Let your loins be girded about. This direction is generally considered an allusion to the order of the passover, Ex. 12. 11, and to the long, flowing, and entangling robes of the Orientals, which, however graceful in domestic use, required to be bound around the loins before a journey. But on considering ver. 37, where the master, it is said, 'will gird himself,' and recollecting the act of our Lord, when he 'girded himself with a towel,' Jn. 13. 4, it would seem rather to refer to the preparation of servants to wait at their master's table, than to the preparation of travellers to set out upon a journey. C.

Ver. 51. Our Lord was not the author, but the innocent occa-sow nor reap; which neither have storehouse nor barn; and God feedeth them: how much more are ye better than the fowls?

25 And<sup>i</sup> which of you with taking thought can add to his stature<sup>3</sup> one cubit?<sup>4</sup>

26 If ye then be not able to do that thing which is least, why take ye thought for the rest?

27 Consider the lilies, how they grow; they toil not, they spin not: and yet I say unto you, that <sup>i</sup>Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.

28 If then God so clothe the grass, <sup>k</sup>which is to-day in the field, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, how much more will he clothe you, <sup>l</sup>O ye of little faith?

29 And <sup>m</sup>seek not ye what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, neither be ye of doubtful mind.<sup>5</sup>

30 For<sup>o</sup> all these things do the nations of the world seek after: <sup>n</sup>and your Father knoweth that ye have need of these things.

31 But<sup>a</sup> rather seek ye the kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you.<sup>6</sup>

32 Fear<sup>r</sup> not, <sup>s</sup>little flock, for <sup>t</sup>it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom.

33 ¶ Sell<sup>u</sup> that ye have, and give alms: <sup>v</sup>provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth.

34 For<sup>w</sup> where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

35 ¶ Let<sup>y</sup> your loins be girded about, and your lights burning;

36 And<sup>z</sup> ye yourselves like unto men<sup>7</sup> that wait for their lord, when he will return from the<sup>a</sup> wedding; that, when <sup>b</sup>he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately.

37 Blessed<sup>c</sup> are those servants, whom the lord, when he cometh, shall find watching: verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them.

38 And if he shall come in the second watch,<sup>8</sup> or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants.

sion of division. The division was produced by the perversity of men, who loved darkness rather than the light, and therefore hated the light, and persecuted every one that followed it. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How absurd is hypocrisy, seeing God is omniscient, and will in the last judgment publicly expose our whole conduct! It is highly becoming to distrust his care for, and assistance of, us in every duty, or to fear men more than him; and infinitely dangerous not to prefer the care of our soul to everything else. There is great need of watchfulness and fidelity in religion, since Christ will certainly own or reject us in the other world as we do him in this. And with humble confidence may we commit our souls to that Saviour who eagerly desired to undergo the worst of deaths for the salvation of sinners; and to that diligence that thou mayest be delivered from him; lest he hale thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and the officer cast thee into prison.<sup>1</sup>

59 I tell thee, <sup>b</sup>thou shalt not depart thence, till thou hast paid the very last <sup>2</sup>mite.<sup>3</sup>

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Christ preacheth repentance upon the punishment of the Galileans, and others. 6 The fruitless fig-tree may not stand. 11 He healeth the crooked woman: 18 sheweth the powerful working of the word in the hearts of his chosen, by the parable of the grain of mustard-seed, and of leaven: 23 exhorteth to enter in at the strait gate, 31 reproveth Herod, and lamenteth over Jerusalem.

THERE were present at that season some that told him of the <sup>a</sup>Galileans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices.<sup>1</sup>

2 And Jesus answering said unto them, <sup>c</sup>Suppose ye that these Galileans were sinners above all the Galileans, because they suffered such things?

3 I tell you, Nay: but <sup>d</sup>except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.<sup>2</sup>

4 Or those eighteen, upon whom the tower in Siloam fell, and slew them, think ye that they were sinners<sup>3</sup> above all men that dwelt in Jerusalem?

5 I tell you, <sup>e</sup>Nay: but except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.

6 ¶ He spake also this parable: A certain man had <sup>a</sup>a fig-tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none.

7 Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, <sup>b</sup>Behold, these three years I come seeking fruit on this fig-tree, and find none: <sup>c</sup>cut it down; why cumbereth it the ground?

8 And he answering said unto him, Lord, let <sup>d</sup>it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it, and dung <sup>e</sup>it:

9 And if it bear fruit, <sup>f</sup>well: and if not, <sup>g</sup>then after<sup>k</sup> that thou shalt cut it down.

heavenly Father whose kind providence extends to the meanest creature, and has prepared for us an everlasting kingdom. Surely this is worthy to be sought for as our principal treasure, and prepared for as our inexpressible happiness. Why should we set our hearts on worldly portions, which only procure envy and contention; or which, by their abundant increase, precipitate their owners into everlasting perdition? And it is base and shameful when ministers neglect their infinitely-important work, and perplex their minds, or waste their time, in civil affairs. Yea, the more light men set against, the greater will be their punishment. Alas that, while Jesus Christ died to reconcile men to God, and to one another, men's lusts, passions, and prejudices should make his conciliating gospel an occasion of strife and confusion! But if we be persecuted for a prudent and disinterested adherence to truth, he will enable us to defend our conduct. How perversely men are set against the Saviour, when they hate and persecute their nearest relations for his sake! And many are very prudent with respect to temporal, and fools with respect to spiritual and eternal concerns. Sinners are in unceasing danger of falling into the hand of God's displeasure. And if, in their present day of grace, they do not, through faith, obtain reconciliation with him, unavoidable, unsupportable, and endless must be their ruin. Alas, who amongst us can abide with deep anguish, or dwell with everlasting remorse!

1 These Galileans are by some supposed to have been the followers of Judas of Galilee (Ac. 5:37), who endeavoured to excite the Jews against the Romans, and to prevent the payment of tribute to Caesar. To this supposition, however, the chronological objections seem insuperable. But that the Galileans were a most ungovernable and seditious people, and that they excited several insurrections, Josephus testifies; and to some well-known instance of their crime and their punishment our Lord here alludes.—C.

5 Whom Satan hath bound. Newcomers and others have attributed this and similar expressions (as Ac. 10:38. 1 Co. 5:5. 2 Co. 12:7. 1 Ti. 1:20) to the popular language of the Jews, by which diseases and infirmities were attributed to Satan or the devil. Now if by 'popular language' be meant language derived from the Old Testament, the popular book of the Jews, there can be no objection to the statement; but if by 'popular language' is meant the language of vulgar ignorance, prejudice, or superstition, then is the statement to be altogether repudiated. It is the glory of the Jews that, in this case, their 'popular language' was the language of truth, immediately derived from the revelation of God. Till this hour, and till the last enemy shall be destroyed, Satan has the power of death (He. 2. 14), and consequently, as in the case of Job and his family (Job 1:12; 19. 2, 6, 7), in some sense of reality, the power overall that produces it.—C.

10 ¶ And<sup>1</sup> he was teaching in one of the synagogues on the sabbath.

11 And, behold, there was a woman which had a <sup>a</sup>"spirit of infirmity"<sup>4</sup> eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up <sup>b</sup>herself.

12 And when Jesus saw her, <sup>c</sup>he called <sup>d</sup>her to him, and <sup>e</sup>said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity.

13 And he <sup>f</sup>laid his hands on her: <sup>g</sup>and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God.

14 And <sup>h</sup>the ruler of the synagogue answered <sup>i</sup>with indignation, <sup>j</sup>because that Jesus had healed on the sabbath-day, and said unto the people, <sup>k</sup>There are six days in which men ought to work: in them therefore come and be healed, and not on the sabbath-day.

16 And ought not this woman, being <sup>a</sup>a daughter of Abraham, whom <sup>b</sup>"Satan hath <sup>5</sup>bound, lo, these eighteen years, <sup>b</sup>be loosed from this bond on the sabbath-day?

17 And when he had said these things, <sup>c</sup>all his adversaries were ashamed: <sup>d</sup>and all the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by him.

18 ¶ Then said he, Unto what is the <sup>e</sup>'kingdom of God like? <sup>f</sup>and whereunto shall I resemble it?

that of the Galileans and the Jews crushed by the tower of Siloam, most sudden and dreadful, chiefly occasioned by their attendance on their ceremonial services, and near to the temple.—The parable of the fig-tree imports, that notwithstanding their long-continued barrenness of good tempers and works, yet, by means of the intercession of Christ and his ministers, they should, for about forty years, enjoy a gospel dispensation, and afterwards be fearfully destroyed on account of their unfruitfulness and wickedness.

Ver. 24. And shall not be able. The reasons of this inability are:—(1) They 'seek' when they ought to 'strive.' (2) They seek at the wrong time—not when the Master (Christ) was sitting in intercession, but when he had risen up to judgment, He. 7:25; 10:12, 13. (3) They 'seek' in the wrong place, for they 'stand without,' Jn. 15:2, 6—that is, not in Christ's faith, name, and righteousness. (4) They seek upon the wrong plea—not that they had submitted to him and trusted in him, Ep. 1:12; He. 5:9—but merely that they had followed him in eating and drinking—that is, professed his gospel as far as it was pleasant and profitable, and belonged to a Christian land where he had taught in their streets; but affording, by their ignorance and presumption, a melancholy evidence that the Spirit of truth and holiness had not taught in their hearts, Jn. 14:26. Ver. 32. That fox. According to modern ideas, the fox is the emblem of cunning, hypocrisy, and robbery; and, consequently, its application to Herod has been considered as a condemnatory allusion to his crooked and unrighteous policy. For this interpretation, however, the Scriptures furnish no foundation. The fox is mentioned in Scripture, (1) As employed by Samson, Ju. 15:4, to burn the corn of the Philistines. (2) As destroying the vines, Ca. 2:15. (3) As inhabiting desolate ruins, La. 5:18. (4) As burrowing in holes, Mat. 8:20. Out of these facts, therefore, and not from any modern ideas, must the meaning of the title be collected. A political firebrand to his kingdom; the destroyer of her agriculture and commerce; the desolator of her cities, and a houseless exile (all which things were literally true of this Herod), is, most probably, the scriptural interpretation of the message of our Lord—a message at once descriptive of the past, and prophetic of the future. C.

REFLECTIONS.—With great care should we guard against uncharitable censures of those whom God hath sorely afflicted, remembering that his strokes on them are warnings to us, and that nothing short of evangelical repentance can prevent our eternal ruin. Severe censures of others but prepare ourselves for unmixed wrath from God. He takes the most exact notice of every season and means of grace we enjoy, and of our unprofitableness under the same. The opportunities of his mercy and patience are often unexpectedly lengthened out through the mediation of his Son and the prayers of his ministers. And if he spare, ministers ought to be diligent. The most unfruitful sinners may be renewed and turned to God by the gospel: but the obstinate abuse of this will at last issue in men's just and inexpressible ruin. Cries for mercy will then become vain, hopes and pleas from external privileges will be defeated, and there will be none to intercede for the sinner. Let not therefore curious inquiries about the number of the saved, but earnest care about my own believing in Jesus Christ, be the labour of my soul. And to quicken my diligence, let me remember that few comparatively are saved; and to raise my admiration, and encourage my faith, let me think how often the most improbable in appearance are converted, while others choose to perish in their sins. And let me behold how ready Jesus was to instruct the ignorant, 20 ¶ And again he said, Whereunto shall I liken the kingdom of God?

21 It<sup>h</sup> is like leaven,<sup>7</sup> which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

22 And<sup>i</sup> he went through the cities and villages, teaching, and journeying towards Jerusalem.<sup>8</sup>

23 ¶ Then said one unto him, Lord, <sup>k</sup>are there few<sup>9</sup> that be saved? And he said unto them, 24 'Strive<sup>1</sup> to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, <sup>n</sup>will seek to enter in, and shall not be able.

25 When<sup>o</sup> once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are:

26 Then shall ye begin to say, <sup>p</sup>We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets.

27 But<sup>a</sup> he shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence ye are; depart from me, all <sup>ye</sup> workers of iniquity.

28 There<sup>r</sup> shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out.

29 And<sup>s</sup> they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God.

30 And<sup>t</sup> behold, there are last which shall be first, and there are first which shall be last.

31 ¶ The same day there came certain of the Pharisees, saying unto him, <sup>u</sup>Get thee out, and depart hence: for Herod will kill thee.

32 And he said unto them, Go ye, and tell that <sup>v</sup>fox, Behold, <sup>w</sup>I cast out devils, and I do cures to-day and to-morrow, and the third day I shall be <sup>x</sup>perfected.

33 Nevertheless, <sup>y</sup>I must walk to-day, and to-morrow, and the day following: <sup>z</sup>for it cannot be that a prophet perish out of Jerusalem.

34 O<sup>b</sup> Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; <sup>a</sup>how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and <sup>d</sup>ye would not!

alarm the careless, and heal the diseased. Indefatigable was he in his labours. Highly he regarded his Father's ordinances, and contemned the terrors of wicked men; and was even ready to die for his people. Carefully was he preserved by Providence till his hour came. And the most tremendous ruin has or will overtake his obstinate opposers. Yea, the greater our privileges abused, the greater the miseries we shall incur.

CHAPTER XIV. REFLECTIONS.—There is great need of divine instruction how to observe the weekly Sabbath, and how to connect works of necessity and mercy with acts of devotion. And at our meals, and

To say that they were many might have encouraged a false hope; to say that they were few might have begotten despondency or despair. But at once he reveals the fearful truth that many are lost—a revelation calculated to awaken salutary fear, and warn thoughtless sinners to flee from the wrath to come—while he turns away the mind of the questioner from profitless speculation about others, and fixes his attention upon the salvation of his own soul.—C.

<sup>s</sup> That our Lord does not mean to forbid hospitality among equals, is manifest from the case of Matthew (ch. 5. 29), and of the marriage in Cana (Jn. 2. 2). His object is merely to inculcate that the claims of charity to the poor are to take decided precedence of the exercise of hospitality to the rich; and that, if there are not means for both, hospitality, even to friends, must be laid aside, that charity to the poor may be more amply exercised. Note, The difficulty in expounding the commandment depends, in a great degree, on the translation. The word translated 'call' (ver. 12) signifies to 'call, hail, or summon, with a loud voice'—that is, ostentatiously;—whereas the word translated 'call' (ver. 13) signifies merely to 'invite' (as in Jn. 10. 3) with gentleness or affection.—C.

35 Behold,<sup>e</sup> your house is left unto you desolate: and verily I say unto you, <sup>9</sup>Ye shall not see me, until the time come when ye shall say, <sup>h</sup>Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

CHAPTER XIV.

2 Christ healeth the dropsy on the sabbath: 7 teacheth humility: 12 to feast the poor: 15 under the parable of the great supper, sheweth how worldly-minded men, who condemn the word of God, shall be shut out of heaven. 25 Those who will be his disciples, to bear their cross must make their accounts beforehand, lest with shame they revolt from him afterward, 34 and become altogether unprofitable, like salt that hath lost its savour.

AND it came to pass, <sup>a</sup>as he went into the house of one of the <sup>b</sup>chief Pharisees, to eat bread on the sabbath-day, that they <sup>c</sup>watched him.<sup>1</sup>

2 And, behold, there was a certain man before him, which had the dropsy.<sup>2</sup>

3 And Jesus answering spake unto <sup>a</sup>the lawyers and Pharisees, saying, <sup>e</sup>Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath-day?

4 And <sup>9</sup>they held their peace. And he took him, and healed him, and let him go;

5 And answered them, saying, <sup>h</sup>Which of you shall have an ass or an ox fallen into a pit, and will not straightway pull him out on the sabbath-day?

6 And<sup>i</sup> they could not answer him again to these things.

7 ¶ And he put forth a parable to those which were bidden, when he marked how <sup>i</sup>they chose out the chief rooms;<sup>3</sup> saying unto them,

8 When thou art bidden of any man to a wedding, sit not<sup>4</sup> down in the highest room; lest a more honourable man than thou be bidden of him;

9 And he that bade thee and him come and say to thee, Give this man place; and thou begin with shame to take the lowest room.

10 But<sup>k</sup> when thou art bidden, go and sit down<sup>5</sup> in the lowest room; that when he that bade thee cometh, he may say unto thee, Friend, go up higher: then shalt thou have worship<sup>6</sup> in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee.

11 For<sup>l</sup> whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

12 ¶ Then said he also to him that bade him, When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy <sup>n</sup>rich neighbours;<sup>7</sup> lest every other season, our talk ought to turn upon the important points of religion, and tend to the glory of God. Nor should the presence of enemies, who watch for our halting, deter us from our duty. In their nature and tendency, how base is pride, and how valuable humility, both before God and men! And earthly honours and esteem are contemptible when compared with the honours of humble souls at the last day and in the eternal state. Luxurious feasting marks men's pride and sensuality, robs the poor, and abuses the bounty of God. But astonishing is the grace of God in preparing a feast, a gospel dispensation, and an eternal happiness, on the flesh and blood of his Son and the fulness of his promise; and in inviting and beseeking sinners, Gentile sinners, even the chief, to share thereof! And however many Jews or others, on the highest carnal pretences, reject it, multitudes, even of the most unlikely, shall come in, till Christ's church on earth and mansions in heaven be found. With great faithfulness and labour ought ministers to teach every man, and warn every man, and call every man, for this effect. For strict is the account they must give of their conduct and success. But redoubled misery, and tremendous exclusion from God's mercy, await those who refuse Christ. And if we would be interested in his blessings, he must have the highest preference in our heart above self and everything earthly. And practical religion must begin and

JEWISH WAILING PLACE. [LUKE, xiii : 35.]—Every Friday afternoon the Jews gather at this place, turn their faces to these big stones in the wall—which are supposed to be part of the very building material that entered into the structure of Solomon's temple—and bewail their fate. This is just outside of the wall that encloses the Mosque of Omar. Travelers passing this way during the hours devoted by the Jews to wailing are solicited to make contributions, which they usually do. One can not help but observe in Jerusalem to-day the devotion of the Jews for their city. All the years of change and war and bloodshed and fire and persecution have not been able to destroy the affection which this ancient people of God have for their Holy City. They have been scattered over all the world, but continue to love Jerusalem, the city of the Great King.

they also bid thee again, and a recompense be made thee.

13 But when thou makest a feast, <sup>o</sup>call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind:

14 And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee: <sup>p</sup>for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just.

15 ¶ And when one of them that sat at meat with him heard these things, he said unto him, Blessed <sup>q</sup>is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.<sup>8</sup>

16 Then<sup>r</sup> said he unto him, A certain man made a great supper, and bade many:

17 And<sup>s</sup> sent his servant at supper-time to say to them that were bidden, Come; for all things are now ready.

18 And <sup>t</sup>they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee have me excused.

19 And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused.

20 And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come.

21 So that servant came, and showed his lord these things. Then the master of the house, <sup>v</sup>being angry, said to his servant, <sup>w</sup>Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the <sup>x</sup>poor, and the maimed, and the <sup>y</sup>halt, and the blind.

22 And the servant said, Lord, <sup>z</sup>it is done as thou hast commanded, <sup>a</sup>and yet there is room.

23 And the lord said unto the servant, <sup>b</sup>Go out into the highways and hedges, and <sup>c</sup>compel them to come in,<sup>9</sup> that my house may be filled.

24 For I say unto you, That <sup>d</sup>none of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper.

25 ¶ And there went great multitudes with him: and he turned, and said unto them, such consideration and principles as will dispose us to endure everything for his sake. Dreadful and eternal shame shall cover those professors who are at last found empty and graceless. How valuable are the doctrines and graces of our Redeemer, when lodged in the heart and practised in the life! and what a preserving, purifying, and savoury blessing they render us to all around! But very pernicious are all errors; and unprofitable and hurtful now, and miserable hereafter, are loose, carnal, corrupt, careless, and erroneous ministers and professors of the true religion. O my soul, consider these things, and take heed that I never draw back unto perdition! And if I think I stand, let me take heed lest I fall.

CHAPTER XV.—The scope of all these parables is to represent the exceeding riches of God's grace to sinners, especially the Gentiles. The lost sheep brought back represents them assought and restored to Christ, the chief Shepherd, to be saved by him; but stupidly wandering on in deserts of ignorance, idolatry, and other wickedness and misery, but followed after by a laborious and faithful dispensation of the gospel, apprehended by Christ's Spirit, and by his power and grace converted to God, instated in his promise, and made members of his church. The lost piece of silver recovered represents them as dear and precious in God's account, and wholly incapable of doing anything for their own relief; but, by means of shaking providences, the gospel dispensation, and conscience-convincing and heart-renewing influences, converted to Christ. The prodigal son reformed represents them as God's honoured creatures apostatizing from him, and perverting their natural powers and the blessings of Providence to the basest purposes of iniquity, till they had rendered themselves slaves and worshippers of Satan, wicked and miserable to the last degree; but at last, by strokes of affliction and convictions of conscience, encouraged by gospel invitations, made to apply to God for his free and full salvation—choosing him and received by him, clothed with the everlasting love of Christ, endowed with his Spirit and grace, as a pledge of their eternal inheritance; helped by gospel promises and influences to walk in God's ways; and feasted on the flesh, blood, and fulness of Christ, and made glad with the light of his countenance. The joy attending the recovery of the lost sheep, piece of silver, or prodigal son, imports that God is more glorified in the redemption of men than in the preservation of angels who never sinned—in the conversion of the Gentiles than in the preservation of the Jewish church—in the conversion of notorious sinners than of such as have been always civilized—and in the conversion of all ranks and degrees of sinners than in the pretended religion of self-righteous persons; and that he and his angels more rejoice therein. The elder son denotes the Jews,

From these gross ideas, our Lord seeks to lead him, by showing him that, whereas all men would willingly partake of a temporal feast, his is a kingdom whose spiritual banquets are contended, and whose tables nothing but divine compulsion can fill.—C.

CHAPTER XV.

3 The parable of the lost sheep: 8 of the piece of silver: 11 and of the prodigal son.

THEN drew near unto him <sup>n</sup>all the publicans and sinners<sup>1</sup> for to hear him.

2 And the Pharisees and scribes <sup>b</sup>murmured, saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them.

3 ¶ And he spake this parable unto them, saying, particularly the scribes and Pharisees, who took such offence at God's calling the Gentiles into his gospel church, and honouring them above themselves, who had long been his peculiar people, that they obstinately refused to embrace the gospel, and unite with them in one church. He may also represent all self-righteous professors, and even peevish believers, who take offence at God's vouchsafing his singular favours to persons converted from notorious wickedness.

Ver. 30. This thy son. Unkind man! He is 'thy father's son!' but is he not 'thy brother?'—Thy living! No! ungenerous accuser of thy erring brother! whatever he has wasted was his own, freely, but legally, conveyed to him by his father, ver. 12.—Note, How great the need of watchfulness! The world has its snares, but, alas! so has the closet. The one leads to forgetfulness of God, the other betrays to an overestimate of self, and an undervaluing of others. The Lord guard his sons from turning either to the right or left to do evil! C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great is the grace and condescension of Jesus Christ to the very chief of sinners, and base the heart that rages against his love. Alas! how bent are sinners to wander from God, and expose themselves to danger and ruin! Unable to recover themselves, they are plunged in, and covered with, wretchedness and guilt. Yet, madly prodigal, and haters of God's presence and government, they are puffed up with a self-conceit of their excellency and merit; and imagining all that they have their own, covetous of a present portion, and regardless of every-sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it?

5 And when he hath found it, <sup>a</sup>he layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing.

6 And when he cometh home, he calleth together <sup>b</sup>his friends and neighbours, saying unto them, Rejoice with me; for I have found my sheep which was lost.

7 I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine <sup>c</sup>just persons, which need no repentance.<sup>2</sup>

8 ¶ Either what woman having ten pieces of silver,<sup>3</sup> if she lose one piece, doth not light a candle, and sweep the house, and <sup>d</sup>seek diligently till she find it?

9 And<sup>i</sup> when she hath found it, she calleth <sup>e</sup>her friends and <sup>f</sup>her neighbours together, saying, Rejoice with me; for I have found the piece which I had lost.

10 Likewise, I say unto you, <sup>j</sup>there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.

11 ¶ And he said, A certain man had two sons:<sup>4</sup>

12 And the younger of them said to <sup>h</sup>his father, <sup>k</sup>Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. <sup>l</sup>And he divided unto them <sup>m</sup>his living.

13 And not many days after, the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a <sup>n</sup>far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living.

14 And<sup>o</sup> when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want.

15 And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his fields to <sup>p</sup>feed swine.

16 And<sup>q</sup> he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat: and <sup>r</sup>no man gave unto him.<sup>5</sup>

17 And when <sup>s</sup>he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger!

18 I<sup>t</sup> will arise and go to my father, and will Even such as have repented already, because they believed the gospel (2 Co. 7. 9, 10. He. 6. 1). But why this preference of 'one' repenting now to 'ninety' that had repented before? Because joy is chiefly a sudden emotion, arising from victory, or some great blessing just obtained (1 Ch. 12. 40. Ezr. 3. 12, 13; 6. 16, 22. Job 38. 7). There is, no doubt, a permanent joy over all that the Lord has wrought; but the joy of victory just achieved over sin and Satan, produces a louder song than any that is raised to the triumphant Lamb, Re. 5. 9, 14; 19. 7.—C.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 The parable of the unjust steward. 14 Christ reproveth the hypocrisy of the covetous Pharisees. 19 The rich man, and Lazarus the beggar.

AND he said also unto his disciples, <sup>a</sup>There was a certain rich man, which had a steward; thing eternal, they apostatize more and more from God, and become slaves to their lusts, abusing every gift of God to their service. Yea, though destitute of everything holy, honourable, or gladdening, they are quickly involved in disappointment, perplexity, and wretchedness, and exposed to everlasting destruction; yet still obstinately will they pursue every folly, however base or ruinous, rather than return to a gracious God!—Infinite is the love of God in seeking the lost and unconverted prodigals! Quicksighted is his mercy to espy our necessities and mark our cares and desires, and alert in hastening to our relief. Active and generous is he in drawing us to himself, embracing the polluted, pardoning our iniquity, accepting us in the Beloved, giving us his Spirit, renewing our nature, shedding abroad his love in our hearts, and supplying all our wants with his benefits.—What a change his grace makes! The most thoughtless consider their ways, and become wise unto salvation; the proud become humble; the lost are recovered to everything useful and glorious; and the dead in trespasses and sins are made alive to God and his service! What ground of inexpressible joy is this to saints, to ministers, to angels, to God himself! But detestable is it, from a principle of malice and self-conceit, to take offence at the freedom, extent, and universality of his grace; or to murmur at the happiness of sinners by means of it. Marvellous is it that God should count such froward transgressors with overtures of mercy! But woe, woe, woe, to their souls if they obstinately reject them!

CHAPTER XVI.—In the parable of the steward we are taught that God will call us to an account for our use of every temporal enjoyment; and that, by a Christian foresight of this, we ought so to improve our uncertain riches in acts of piety and charity, as that, when we die, God and his angels may conduct us, as faithful stewards, to everlasting mansions of happiness; and the saints, whom we had relieved, may honourably welcome us thither, as an answer to their prayers for us: and that, if we be not faithful in using the perishing enjoyments of this world, which God has merely committed to us as a trust, to be used for his glory and the good of others, we can have no proper evidence of our possessing the more excellent and substantial riches of true grace, which God gives men for their own, never to be taken from them.

In the parable of the rich man and Lazarus Christ teaches us that, let true saints be as poor and contemned as they may in this world, they shall have an honour-and the same was accused unto him that he had<sup>b</sup> wasted his goods.

2 And he called him, and said unto him, How<sup>c</sup> is it that I hear this of thee? <sup>d</sup>give an account of thy stewardship; for thou mayest be no longer steward.<sup>1</sup>

3 Then the steward said within himself, What shall I do? for my lord taketh away from me the stewardship: <sup>e</sup>I cannot dig; to beg I am ashamed.

4 I<sup>g</sup> am resolved what to do, that, when I am put out of the stewardship, they may receive me into their houses.

5 So he called every one of his lord's debtors unto him, and said unto the first, How much owest thou unto my lord?

6 And he said, An hundred measures<sup>2</sup> of oil. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and sit down quickly, and write fifty.

7 Then said he to another, And how much owest thou? And he said, An hundred measures<sup>3</sup> of wheat. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and write fourscore.

8 And the lord commended the unjust steward, because he had done <sup>h</sup>wisely: <sup>i</sup>for the children of this world are in their generation wiser than <sup>j</sup>the children of light.

9 And I say unto you, <sup>k</sup>Make to yourselves friends of the mammon<sup>4</sup> of unrighteousness; that, when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations.<sup>5</sup>

10 He<sup>l</sup> that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much: and he that is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much.

11 If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon,<sup>6</sup> who will commit to your trust the <sup>m</sup>true riches?

12 And if ye have not been faithful in <sup>n</sup>that which is another man's,<sup>7</sup> who shall give you that <sup>p</sup>which is your own?

13 No<sup>q</sup> servant can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other: or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. <sup>r</sup>Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

14 ¶ And the Pharisees also, <sup>s</sup>who were covetous, heard all these things: and they <sup>t</sup>derided him.

15 And he said unto them, Ye are they which <sup>p</sup> The main point and lesson of this difficult parable is, the wisdom of worldly men in their own sphere, an example and incentive to Christians in their sphere. It is the far-seeing wisdom of the steward which is alone commended. The right or wrong of the act is not taken into account at all, but merely the object he had in view, and the end he accomplished. There is no commending of dishonesty; but there is a lesson taught from an example of worldly prudence. The special lesson seems to be this:—We are all stewards of God, to whom belongs our worldly goods. These worldly goods are called 'Mammon of unrighteousness,' because the source of so much sin. We are to make ourselves friends by a right use of our means—charity to the deserving poor, support of the people and work of the Lord, so that when we die those godly people whom we assisted on earth, and have gone before us to heaven, may receive and welcome us into their everlasting habitations.—P.

<sup>16</sup> This is a most touching picture, and its painful truthfulness, often, alas! exemplified around us, makes it one of the most impressive of our Lord's parables. The rich man—his raiment, regal; every meal, a banquet. The poor man—with-out a home, lying helpless at the gate, full of sores; his food, stray crumbs that had fallen from the table of others; his clothing, rags; his only companions and sympathizers, the street dogs. This is the earthly picture. Contrast it with the heavenly. Lazarus carried to heaven by angels, laid full of peace and joy in Abraham's bosom. The rich man buried—consigned to the rottenness and corruption of the sepulchre. His soul in torment; and there, in the agony of suffering, asking that the poor despised beggar might be sent with a drop of water to cool his tongue.—P.

justify yourselves before men; but <sup>v</sup>God knoweth your hearts: <sup>w</sup>for that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God.

16 The law and the prophets <sup>x</sup>were until <sup>y</sup>John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it.

17 And<sup>y</sup> it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tittle<sup>9</sup> of the law to fail.

18 Whosoever<sup>z</sup> putteth away his wife,<sup>1</sup> and marrieth another, committeth adultery: and whosoever marrieth her that is put away from <sup>her</sup> husband committeth adultery.

19 ¶ There<sup>a</sup> was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day:

20 And<sup>b</sup> there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, <sup>c</sup>full of sores,

21 And<sup>d</sup> desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table: moreover <sup>e</sup>the dogs came and licked his sores.<sup>2</sup>

22 And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and <sup>f</sup>was carried by the angels into Abraham's <sup>g</sup>bosom: <sup>h</sup>the rich man also died, and <sup>i</sup>was buried;

23 And<sup>j</sup> in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments, and <sup>k</sup>seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom.

24 And he cried and said, <sup>l</sup>Father Abraham, <sup>m</sup>have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that <sup>n</sup>he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame.

25 But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime <sup>p</sup>receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented.

26 And beside all this, between us and you there is a <sup>q</sup>great gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; <sup>r</sup>neither can they pass to us, that <sup>s</sup>would come from thence.

27 Then he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house:

28 For I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment.

29 Abraham saith unto him, <sup>t</sup>They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them.

able entrance into, and station in, heaven with him; and that rich men, who wallow in sensual pleasures here, shall, in the other world, fall into the most aggravated miseries; and that, however damned men may wish to prevent their partners in guilt coming thither to torment them, no means of conversion but the Scripture shall ever be allowed them.—Perhaps, too, he represented to these Pharisees that, however much they now contemned him in his poor and debased estate, he should quickly be exalted to glory; and they who now rioted in wealth and honour be thrust down into hell, and the generality of their nation be reduced, for many ages, to the most deplorable and unpitied wretchedness on earth, in which they should earnestly wish for the now contemned appearances of the Messiah, but they should be utterly denied them.

Ver. 6. Measures of oil. Measures called baths in the Old Testament, 1 Ki. 7. 26. According to Godwin, the bath held four gallons and a half. Some think nine gallons and three quarts.—Take thy bill, &c. Hence it would appear that at least one evidence of an account was, not as in modern times, the name of the debtor attached to the bill, but the account itself being in his current handwriting. And if this bill, as some suppose, was a lease for a term of years, securing payment in produce, and of which the superior held a copy in the tenant's handwriting, and the tenant a copy in the steward's, then the obligation of the tenant to the steward must have been increased, because the iniquitous benefit was to continue for years. C.

Ver. 7. Measures of wheat. Measures, or cors, the same as the homer, Eze. 45. 14. Godwin calculates this measure at five bushels and five gallons; others, at fourteen bushels and two quarts. C.

Ver. 9. Make to yourselves friends. How? By repenting of your sins, whether in coveting, getting, loving, holding, or expending (see ver. 13, 14), whereby there will be 'joy in heaven, in presence of the angels of God' (ch. 15. 7, 10), by whom, 'when ye fail, ye shall be received into everlasting habitations.' See ver. 32.—Mammon of unrighteousness. The 'unrighteous mammon' (ver. 11) being opposed to 'true riches,' and to 'everlasting habitations,' ver. 9, the conclusion seems probable that it should be translated 'mammon of deceitfulness,' or 'deceitful riches' (see Mat. 13. 22), either because they are often deceitfully acquired, deceitfully expended, or that they deceitfully 'make to themselves wings and flee away.' C.

Ver. 19. This appears to be a narrative of facts, and not a parable, else why is the very name of the beggar, 'Lazarus,' introduced, ver. 20? Lazarus signifies 'the help of God.' C.

Ver. 21. Crumbs. Whether the rich man gave or denied the crumbs, does not appear; one thing is certain, the beggar (rather, 'the destitute man') expected no better; and how unfit this food of dogs (Mat. 15. 27) was for such a patient, it requires not medical skill, but humanity, to discover. The rich man was, therefore, deeply culpable, even though he granted the crumbs, for he could have afforded better, and rich and generous diet was essential to the comfort, or, humanly speaking, to the recovery of the miserable sufferer. C.

Ver. 22. Abraham's bosom, being interpreted as a figure for heaven, is supposed to establish the parabolic character of the narrative. But without having recourse to the Hebrew method of naming places, it is sufficient to remark, that until we know more of heaven, it behoves us to use much caution as to what we

30 And he said, Nay, father Abraham: but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent.

31 And he said unto him, 'If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead.'

THEN said he unto the disciples, 'It is impossible<sup>1</sup> but that offences will come: but woe unto him through whom they come!

2 It<sup>b</sup> were better for him that a millstone<sup>2</sup> were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones.

3 ¶ Take<sup>c</sup> heed to yourselves: If thy brother trespass<sup>3</sup> against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him.

4 And<sup>d</sup> if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn again to thee, saying, I repent; thou shalt forgive him.

5 ¶ And the apostles said unto the Lord, Increase<sup>e</sup> our faith.

6 And<sup>f</sup> the Lord said, If ye had faith as a grain of mustard-seed, ye might say unto this sycamine-tree,<sup>4</sup> Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the sea; and it should obey you.

7 But which of you, having a servant<sup>5</sup> plowing, or feeding cattle, will say unto him by and by, when he is come from the field, Go, and sit down to meat?<sup>6</sup>

8 And will not rather say unto him, Make ready wherewith I may sup, and gird thyself, and serve me, till I have eaten and drunken; and afterward thou shalt eat and drink?

9 Doth he thank that servant because he did the things that were commanded him? I trow not.

10 So likewise ye, when ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you,

6 The object of this parable is to illustrate the necessity and extent of Christian duty. God is our Master. As our Creator, Preserver, and Benefactor, we are bound to serve him; as our Redeemer, we are bound by even a deeper and holier obligation. Everything we can do, we are bound to do. There is no merit in it, for it is only the discharge of a duty. Considering the relation in which we stand to God, our service ought not merely to be one of duty, but of love.—P.

say, We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty to do.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, as he went to Jerusalem, that he passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee.<sup>7</sup>

12 And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, which stood <sup>k</sup>afar off:<sup>8</sup>

13 And they lifted up their voices, and said, 'Jesus, Master, have mercy on us.

14 And when he saw them, he said unto them, 'Go show yourselves unto the priests. And<sup>o</sup> it came to pass, that, as they went, they were cleansed.<sup>9</sup>

15 And <sup>p</sup>one of them, <sup>q</sup>when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God, 18 There<sup>u</sup> are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger.

19 And he said unto him, 'Arise, go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole.

21 Neither shall they say, 'Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is <sup>v</sup>within you.<sup>2</sup>

23 And<sup>a</sup> they shall say to you, See here; or, see there: go not after them, nor follow them.

pronounce figurative, and what literal, in its constitution. That, however, there is a spiritual kindred and genealogy in heaven, different from natural kindred and genealogy on earth, appears unquestionable (see 1 Co. 4. 15; 1 Th. 2. 19), and that this may present a specimen of it, it is neither wise to deny nor affirm. The Lord knoweth; and secret things belong to the Lord. C.

Ver. 24. This is the only example in Scripture of prayer to a dead saint. Let those therefore who teach the doctrine of prayer to the saints consider this, and be ashamed of their miserable, hopeless, and forbidden refuge. C.

Ver. 27, 28. The anxiety of this man is not for the salvation of his brethren; but as he had initiated and educated them in his own luxury and debauchery, he dreads the increase of misery their condemnation and reproaches may bring on him through eternity. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Whatever things we enjoy in this world are but a trust committed to us by God to do good with. We cannot long hold them; but quickly, in an hour we think not, our reckoning for them must come. O that we may then be found faithful! It is self-contradicting and absurd to pursue earthly riches with more earnestness and industry than eternal treasures, and dangerous to neglect a single opportunity or advantage in favour of everlasting happiness. It is necessary to watch against all unfaithfulness and injustice in worldly enjoyments, which so many make instruments of unrighteousness. Lesser sins lead to greater, and pride and laziness often plunge men into the vilest dishonesty. The abuse of less important trusts provokes God to withhold what is more excellent. And as none can serve both God and the world, it is wise to prefer God in due time. But proud covetous hypocrites, enslaved by their own lusts, hate and scoff at instruction.—What is most esteemed and desired by men is generally abominable before God. His gospel dispensation does not make void, but establish the law. And blessed be God that both Jews and Gentiles have with earnestness crowded into the New-Testament church. Happy are the poorest of its true members: their adversities will quickly issue in everlasting honour and unutterable delight. God lightly values the wealth and honour of this world, which often absorbs the attention and claims the time of even those who profess Christ. Awful thought! to have only uncertain and unsatisfying enjoyments, which shall quickly issue in insupportable and everlasting emptiness! Inexpressibly different, and irreversibly fixed, is the future state of both saints and sinners. How delightful is it for the one to review his conversion to, and walking with, Christ; and how dreadful for the other to remember in what an absurd manner he lost his soul for the sake of sensual or carnal trifles! And terrible companions will they make in hell who had been partners in sin upon earth. With great diligence should we now earnestly search, believe, and practise God's Word; for, if it be neglected, no other means of salvation will ever be afforded us.

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 20, 21. The kingdom of the Messiah will not be erected by temporal authority or force, nor make any pompous appearance in temporal riches or grandeur. Nor will he confine his throne and court to any particular place or nation; but his kingdom, being spiritual in its nature, power, and tendency, suited to the benefit of the soul, and for another world, works inwardly in men's hearts and consciences; and is already begun in the preaching of the gospel and conversion of some among you.

Ver. 5. Note (1), The petition for increase of faith plainly intimates the belief of the apostles that our Lord possessed power over the spirits as well as over the bodies of men. (2) Our Lord's reply proceeds upon the principle that it is our duty more to use what measure of faith we have, than to desire or pray for any 26 And<sup>e</sup> as it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man.

27 They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and the flood came, and destroyed them all.

28 Likewise<sup>9</sup> also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded;

29 But<sup>h</sup> the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all.

30 Even<sup>i</sup> thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed.

CHAPTER XVIII.

AND he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought always to pray,<sup>1</sup> and not to faint;

2 Saying, There was in a city a judge,<sup>b</sup> which feared not God, neither regarded man:

3 And there was a widow in that city; and she came unto him, saying, Avenge me<sup>2</sup> of mine adversary.

4 And he would not for a while: but afterward he said within himself, Though I fear not God,<sup>3</sup> nor regard man;

5 Yet <sup>a</sup>because this widow troubleth me, I increase. (3) That the least amount of living faith is, from its nature, an increasing faith, and is, at all times, equal to whatever work the believer has to do, or whatever trial he has to endure. C.

Ver. 19. Thy faith hath made thee whole. Had not faith then made the nine whole? It appears questionable whether the nine really believed, or whether they superstitiously sought a cure; yet the Lord cleansed them all—even as he fed all Israel in the wilderness, though few of them regarded the work of his hands. What advantage, then, had the tenth that the nine had not? All were healed in body—he, through faith, was healed in body and spirit. C.

Ver. 22. One of the days of the Son of man. Days of such quiet, peace, and opportunity as ye now enjoy, of instructing the ignorant in the knowledge of Jesus; days of his power to cast out devils and do other wonderful works, such as ye have so often witnessed; and, finally, days of his power to destroy all the works of the devil, all which things (being sorely afflicted in the world) ye shall earnestly desire for your own and the world's deliverance, but shall not see. By which delay he will try your faith and that of his whole church, till the 'set time' shall come, when he 'will take to himself his mighty power and reign.' C.

Ver. 32. She was killed by the sulphureous vapour, and lost by a single look backward!—Note. If those who are commanded to flee, and who are, moreover, angel-led, be so endangered, what is the danger of those 'who have put their hand to the plough,' if they should 'look back!' C.

Ver. 37. Eagles—generally taken to represent the Roman armies, whose standards were eagles. But the origin of the emblem seems rather to be Eze. 17. 3, 7, where Babylon and Egypt are both represented as eagles, into whose nests came the Roman empire, and whose armorial bearing and device, as it were, they possess, together with their persecuting and enslaving spirit. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! that so many offences and injuries should be found among professed Christians! Many are grieved, stumbled, and eternally ruined by means of them. And tremendous woes must fall on their heads whose corrupt principles or practices occasion such things. How prone are most to offend God, and cause their neighbour to stumble out of his way! Yet most offenders are very averse to repent, and, if offended, to forgive injuries. Yea, it is impossible to perform self-denying duties without strong faith; and great is the need that Jesus should be daily increasing it. With great humility ought we to perform every commanded duty, and with great gratitude to receive distinguished mercies. And yet often both are wanting where they might have been most, and found where they could have been least expected. How many amuse themselves about the circumstances of Jesus' kingdom, instead of earnestly receiving him into their heart, that he may subdue their lusts and govern their spirits! But the erection of his spiritual kingdom in the world is generally attended with some fearful judgments on its opposers. Self-indulgence in sensual gratifications is a common forerunner of fearful and sudden destruction. And none are more certainly exposed than hardened apostates who refuse to take warning from the calamities of others before them. But if men will not heartily part with the world as their portion, they must perish with it.—In great wisdom and mercy the spread of God's anger among the obstinate Jews was made a mean of spreading the gospel among and of saving the Gentiles. Fearfully he resents the injuries done to his faithful servants, and pities and rewards them that suffer for his sake. Yea, marvelously he distinguishes them in his protections here and his eternal glories hereafter.

CHAPTER XVIII. Ver. 35. Luke and Mark mention but one blind man; Matthew (ch. 20. 30) describes two. This variety, however, presents no contradiction. Matthew records the fact of two blind men having been cured; Luke, writing at a time when it is most probable only one of them survived, mentions but that one; and Mark (ch. 10. 46) mentions one by name as authentic and living evidence of the miracle he narrates. The apparent contradiction lies in the assertion of Matthew (ch. 20. 29) that the miracle took place 'as they (Jesus and his disciples) departed from Jericho,' and of Mark (ch. 10. 46), that it occurred 'as he (Jesus) went out of Jericho,' while Luke assigns it to the time 'when he (Jesus) was come nigh unto Jericho.' The attempt to reconcile these contradictions by changing the translation 'when he was come nigh' to 'when he was nigh' seems utterly unsupported by any sufficient authority. The reconciliation must therefore be sought for from another source, and that source is opened in a modern example. London, as a general geographical name, includes Westminster, Southwark, &c. &c. One historian accordingly, in speaking of a public occurrence, affirms it took place 'as some one departed from London,' though, in another geographical sense, he really departed from Westminster. Another, relating the same event, affirms it occurred as the party described 'was come nigh to London,' meaning thereby, not London inclusive of Westminster, &c., but London as specially commencing at Temple-bar. Now, is there any contradiction here? None whatever. Why then are the Scriptures condemned where a secular historian is acquitted? Besides, Jericho consisted of an old and a new town, as Josephus records. Our Lord therefore may have performed his miracle as he 'departed' from Jericho, the one town, and as he 'was come nigh' to Jericho, the other. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The fervent and importunate prayer of faith is always effectual at last. A gracious answer cannot be delayed beyond the best time. And all the injuries done to the saints shall be fearfully resented, though God often patiently delays his justice till religion be almost utterly extirpated. What a mixture is in our worshipping assemblies on earth! Different tempers, manners, and ends have different effects on the very same duty. Pride, formality, and hypocrisy indulged, render men's persons and worship detestable to God. But not the greatest sinner, who humbly asks mercy through Jesus' righteousness, shall be denied a full justification unto eternal life. It is criminal for professors to withhold children from Christ, who delights to bless them. And very honourable to be like them in teachableness and humility.—No external privileges or duties are in the least to be rested in.

Men may go inconceivable lengths in apparent holiness, and yet their hearts remain unrenewed and attached to the world. Awful is the state when God's law does not convince men that they need a better righteousness than their own to justify them! and when love to Christ cannot wean their hearts from the world. Earthly enjoyments indeed often entangle and ensnare men to their everlasting ruin. And there is need of almighty power to deliver us from a carnal mind, and to make us content to forego all for Christ. But everything suffered for his sake, from principles of faith and love, will be gain at last. And nothing is too much to suffer for him, who suffered so much for us. Yet, alas! how slow of heart are men to conceive aright of his sufferings and glory! It is a great mercy to be awakened to prayer by curiosity or any means. Jesus is ready to take notice of, and grant relief under, all our troubles. And a deep sense of sin and earnest desires of mercy will quickly issue in grateful praise and holy obedience.

CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 3. And he sought to see Jesus who he was. Rather, 'what kind of person he was.' It is a fact that we scarce can hear or think of any remarkable person without forming in our minds an imaginary likeness of him, or desiring to know his bodily appearance. On this point the Scriptures afford not the least shadow of information. Of stature, of complexion, of expression, of voice, of manner, they breathe not a word, either for the painter or historian. His moral portrait they draw at full length, but of his bodily appearance believers shall know nothing till 'they see him as he is,' and themselves be 'fashioned into the image of his glorious body.' Yet as the desire of Zaccheus to see 'what kind of person Jesus was' on earth brought salvation to his house, so the desire to 'see him as he is' in heaven still continues to bring salvation to the souls of believers and their children, Phi. 3. 21; 1 Jn. 3. 2. C.

Ver. 23. At my coming. The object of the parable was to correct the fond imagination of the immediate restoration of the kingdom of David in Jerusalem (see ver. 11); wherefore our Lord represents its restoration by a candidate for a kingdom—not taking immediate possession, but going into a 'far country,' and followed by the opposition of his citizens; then finally returning after a successful solicitation, and adjudging—not to servants sustained and stimulated by his presence, but to servants tried and confirmed during his absence—their several rewards, according to their works, Mat. 16. 27. C.

Ver. 40. It is spiritually as impossible for these to be silent as for the stones naturally to speak.—Note. There is a spiritual necessity, perfectly consistent with the freedom of an accountable agent, which yet is absolutely certain in its results, because it is dependent upon the very nature of God and of man—his intellectual and moral image; whereas all that is called a physical necessity, being dependent upon the mere will of God, and the relations he has established between unintelligent and unaccountable agents, may be superseded in a moment, and give place to a new order of things, the very reverse of that which preceded it. See 1 Co. 15. 44. 51; 2 Pe. 3. 7, 11, 13. C.

Ver. 43. Cast a trench. Rather, 'a rampart,' which, it would appear, from the exact meaning of the original, was supported by a strong paling, or stockade, in front. This prophecy was literally fulfilled by Titus, who, finding it impossible to take the [LUKE, xvii, : 29.]—"But the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all." The part of the Dead Sea upon which we look, which is the northern inlet of it, is supposed to occupy the place upon which once stood the celebrated cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. these cities is under the sea and part on the shore. The mountains we see in the distance are the mountains of Judea. We are looking toward the west. To the east of us are the mountains of Moab. will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me.

6 And the Lord said, 'Hear what the unjust judge saith.

7 And<sup>g</sup> shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, <sup>4</sup>though he bear long with them?<sup>5</sup>

8 I tell you that <sup>h</sup>he will avenge them speedily. Nevertheless, when<sup>6</sup> the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?<sup>7</sup>

9 ¶ And he spake this parable unto certain which <sup>i</sup>trusted in themselves that they were righteous,<sup>8</sup> and despised others:

10 Two men went up into the temple to pray; the<sup>j</sup> one a Pharisee,<sup>9</sup> and the other a publican.

11 The<sup>k</sup> Pharisee stood<sup>1</sup> and prayed thus with himself: God, I thank thee that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican:

12 I fast<sup>2</sup> twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess.

13 And<sup>3</sup> the publican, <sup>l</sup>standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful<sup>4</sup> to me a sinner.

14 I tell you, this man went down to his house <sup>m</sup>justified<sup>5</sup> rather than the other: <sup>n</sup>for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased, and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

15 ¶ And <sup>o</sup>they brought unto him also infants,<sup>6</sup> that he would touch them: but when his disciples saw it, <sup>p</sup>they rebuked them.

16 But<sup>r</sup> Jesus called them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.

17 Verily<sup>s</sup> I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein.

18 ¶ And<sup>t</sup> a certain ruler asked him, saying, Good Master,<sup>7</sup> what shall I do to inherit eternal life?

19 And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? <sup>u</sup>none is good, save one, that is, God.

20 Thou<sup>v</sup> knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Honour thy father and thy mother.

21 And he said, <sup>w</sup>All these have I kept from my youth up.

22 Now when Jesus heard these things, he said unto him, <sup>x</sup>Yet lackest thou one thing: sell<sup>8</sup> all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come, follow me.

city by assault, surrounded it by a line of circumvallation, cut off all supplies, and reduced the garrison by famine (Josephus' Bell. Jud. vi. 13). C.

find faith in 'the land of Israel?' (as the word translated 'earth' in such circumstances generally signifies). A question fully illustrated by the fact, that comparatively few of the Jews believed, even when our Lord had risen from the dead, and these few were scattered abroad by the persecutions of Herod and the Pharisees (Ac. 7. 59; 8. 1, 2, 3), so that when the Lord came to 'avenge his elect,' whose voice and whose blood cried to him day and night, there were but few believers in the land of Judea, and his apostles had been directed by the Spirit and providence of God to 'turn to the Gentiles.'—C.

Having formed the opinion that Messiah must be a temporal conqueror, and possess a temporal kingdom, they could not reconcile with this opinion the revelation of his death. 23 And when he heard this, he <sup>z</sup>was very sorrowful: for he was very rich.

24 ¶ And when Jesus saw that he was very sorrowful, he said, <sup>a</sup>How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!

25 For it is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

26 And they that heard it said, <sup>b</sup>Who then can be saved?

27 And he said, <sup>c</sup>The things which are impossible with men are possible with God.

28 ¶ Then<sup>d</sup> Peter said, Lo, we have left all, and followed thee.

29 And he said unto them, <sup>e</sup>Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake, 30 Who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come life everlasting.

31 ¶ Then<sup>g</sup> he took unto him the twelve, and said unto them, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and all things that are written by the prophets concerning the Son of man shall be accomplished.<sup>9</sup>

32 For<sup>h</sup> he shall be delivered unto the Gentiles, <sup>i</sup>and shall be mocked, and spitefully entreated, and spitted on:

33 And they shall scourge him, and put him to death: and the third day he shall rise again.

34 And<sup>j</sup> they understood none of these <sup>l</sup>things: and this saying was hid from them, neither knew they the things which were spoken.

35 ¶ And<sup>k</sup> it came to pass, that as he was come nigh unto Jericho, a certain blind man sat by the way-side, begging:

36 And hearing the multitude pass by, he asked what it meant.

37 And they told him, that <sup>l</sup>Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

38 And he cried, saying, <sup>m</sup>Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me.

39 And they which went before <sup>n</sup>rebuked him, that he should hold his peace: but <sup>o</sup>he cried so much the more, Thou son of David, have mercy on me.

40 And <sup>p</sup>Jesus stood, and commanded him to be brought unto him: and when he was come near, he asked him, 41 Saying, <sup>q</sup>What wilt thou that I shall do unto thee? And he said, Lord, that I may receive my sight.

may issue in saving faith and repentance. Christ ever seeks to save men wherever they are; and in rich mercy he seeks them out, and touches their hearts, however hard: and his spirit and grace, accepted therein, quickly makes great reformation. The covetous, cruel, and haughty oppressor is rendered humble, honest, and merciful; and the power of grace is clearly discovered by deadness to the world, and by the affections being weaned from its pursuits. But pardon ought never to be expected without restitution of our

THE PLAIN OF JERICHO—OVER WHICH MOSES LOOKED FROM NEBO INTO THE PROMISED LAND. [LUKE, xix: i.]—“And Jesus entered and passed through Jericho. And behold, there was a man named Zacchæus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich.” The view we behold was taken at the foot of the Judean hills and furnishes us the opportunity of looking over the whole plain of the Jordan between the mountains of Judea and the mountains of Moab which we see rising in the distance. At the foot of the mountains in the far distance flows the River Jordan. The little village to the left of the picture is Jericho, and the plain lying before us is perhaps the most historic portion of the world. Over this plain Moses looked from Nebo into the promised land.

32 And they that were sent went their way, and found even as he had said unto them.

God's gifts, they must be deprived of them. And if Jews and others dare to reject an ascended Redeemer, they must be destroyed in the most public and fearful manner. Dreadful indeed is their condition whom even his compassion cannot deliver. It is strange that any should envy him a lowly triumph; that professors should hate him for purifying his temple, instructing the ignorant, and healing the diseased; and that night

MOUNT OF OLIVES, FROM JERICHO ROAD. [LUKE, xix:37.] Our Savior always had to pass over the Mount of Olives in going from Jerusalem to Bethany. While coming down this mountain the whole multitude of the disciples met Christ and began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works that they had seen, saying, "Blessed be the king that cometh in the name of the Lord. Peace in heaven, and glory in the highest." The supreme interest of the road from Jericho is that it was trod by our blessed Lord when He came up to Jerusalem for the last time, passing the Mount of Olives, at the base of which He was to bow in anguish, and from whose eastern slope He was to ascend to heaven. There is infinite fascinations for tempted mortals about this lonely mount to-day.

CHAPTER XX.

33 And as they were loosing the colt, the owners thereof said unto them, Why loose ye the colt?

34 And they said, The Lord hath need of him.

35 And they brought him to Jesus: and they cast their garments upon the colt, and they set Jesus thereon.

36 And as he went, they spread their clothes in the way.

37 And when he was come nigh, even now at the descent of the mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice, for all the mighty works that they had seen;

38 Saying, "Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord; peace in heaven, and glory in the highest.

39 And some of the Pharisees from among the multitude said unto him, Master, rebuke thy disciples.

40 And he answered and said unto them, I tell you, that, if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out.

41 ¶ And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it, 42 Saying, "If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes.

43 For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side,

44 And shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation.<sup>1</sup>

45 ¶ And he went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold therein, and them that bought;

46 Saying unto them, It is written, "My house is the house of prayer: but ye have made it a den of thieves.

47 ¶ And he taught daily in the temple. But the chief priests and the scribes and the chief of the people sought to destroy him,

48 And could not find what they might do: for all the people were very attentive to hear him.<sup>2</sup> but the fear of inferiors should hinder some from murdering the divine Saviour or persecuting his people!

CHAPTER XX. REFLECTIONS.—Fear of men may restrain persecutors from murdering, but not from cavilling. Satan and his emissaries will always oppose Christ and his gospel, and his spiritual headship over his church, to their utmost. And it is but lost labour to attempt persuading such as are resolved to shut their eyes against all conviction, and who will take the most base and false evasions to avoid it. Surprising is the patience and mercy of God, that so long affords un-fruitful and rebellious sinners such means of grace which they spurn and reject. But dreadful will be their condition at last, when all the injuries they had done to Jesus and his ministers shall come back upon them, and he shall glorify his power in spite of all their sinful opposition. Faithful ministers have great need to be always on their guard against deceitful brethren. Pretences to piety, and of regard to civil rulers, and cavils of carnal reasoning, will be all tried to ensnare or expose them. But let us at once fear God and honour the king, and hold fast plain Scripture truths, in the well-grounded hope of a glorious resurrection. It is necessary that we believe God's truths with all our heart, but not that we should be able to answer every wicked cavil against them. And in the faith and contemplation of Christ as God-man in one person, let us hate hypocrisy and avoid hypocrites.

CHAPTER XXI. Ver. 11. By fearful sights and great signs from heaven, cannot be intended, as some suppose, the comet hanging over the city like a flaming sword, and other aerial appearances mentioned by Josephus (Bell. Jud. vii. 12), for God had expressly forbidden any regard to these things, Je. 10. 2. Nor can any natural or even supernatural wonder become 17 And he beheld them, and said, What is this then that is written, <sup>v</sup>The stone which the builders rejeeted, the same is become the head of the corner?

18 Whosoever<sup>z</sup> shall fall upon that stone shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder.

19 ¶ And<sup>a</sup> the chief priests and the scribes the same hour sought to lay hands on him; and they feared the people: for they perceived that he had spoken this parable against them.

20 And<sup>b</sup> they watched him, and sent forth spies, which should feign themselves just men, that they might take hold of his words, that so <sup>c</sup>they might deliver him unto the power and authority of the governor.

21 And they asked him, saying, <sup>d</sup>Master, we know that thou <sup>e</sup>sayest and teachest rightly, neither acceptest thou the person<sup>4</sup> of any, but teachest the way of God truly:<sup>5</sup>

22 Is<sup>g</sup> it lawful for us to give tribute unto Cæsar, or no?

23 But <sup>h</sup>he perceived their craftiness, and said unto them, Why <sup>i</sup>tempt ye me?

24 Show me a <sup>j</sup>penny. Whose image and superscription hath it? They answered and said, <sup>k</sup>Cæsar's.

25 And he said unto them, <sup>l</sup>Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which be Cæsar's, and unto God the things which be God's.

26 And they could not take hold of his words before the people: and they <sup>m</sup>marvelled at his answer, and held their peace.

27 ¶ Then<sup>o</sup> came to him certain of the Sadducees, which deny that there is any resurrection; and they asked him, 28 Saying, Master, Moses<sup>6</sup> wrote unto us, If any man's brother die, having a wife, and he die without children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

29 There were therefore seven brethren: and the first took a wife, and died without children.

30 And the second took her to wife, and he died childless.

31 And the third took her; and in like manner the seven also: and they left no children, and died.

* There are several points of difference between our Lord's reply, as recorded in Mat. 22. 23, and in this passage; all, however, may upon the following principles, be accounted for in perfect consistence with the doctrine of real divine inspiration: (1) One evangelist might omit what another, directed by the same Spirit, might insert—the one record being thus rendered the most valuable commentary upon the other. (2) As our Lord most probably spake in the Hebrew or Syro-Phœnician tongue, the same Spirit actuating both writers, might yet, for the purposes of exposition, direct the one to a translation into Greek, differing from that of the other. (3) Our Lord, discoursing to a people dark of understanding, and slow of heart to believe, might, for the sake of impression, repeat some parts of his exposition in new terms, and thus furnish an opportunity for an amanuensis, faithfully copying the exact words of his mouth, to differ from another who was equally exact, who had copied a varied,

8 Ver. 35 and 36 are not found in the other Gospels, and contain some things worthy of special note. 'The children of this world marry'—they must do so; it is one of those great laws necessary to the happiness and to the very existence of mankind. But after the resurrection marriage will be no longer necessary, either to secure the happiness or the continuance of the race; for (1) there will be no death; and (2) the children of the resurrection will be the companions of angels and 'children of God.' They will be partakers of the divine nature, being partakers of the divine life and love.—P.

9 Nothing offended the Pharisees more than our Lord's assertion of his deity (see Jn. 10. 30, 31, 38, 39) on the ground of his miraculous works. Here he, therefore, asserts it on the ground of Scripture; for if he were David's LORD, how could he possibly be David's SON? This difficulty, this contradiction in terms, can be solved upon no principle but one—the WORD was God, and the WORD became flesh. As God, he was David's Lord; as man, he was David's son, Re. 22. 16.—C.

32 Last of all the woman died also.

33 Therefore in the resurrection whose wife of them is she? for seven had her to wife.

34 And Jesus answering said unto them, <sup>v</sup>The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage:

35 But they which <sup>z</sup>shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage:

36 Neither<sup>r</sup> can they die any more:<sup>7</sup> for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the <sup>8</sup>resurrection.

37 Now that the dead are raised, <sup>s</sup>even Moses showed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.

38 For<sup>t</sup> he is not a God of the dead, but of the living: for all live unto him.

39 Then certain of the scribes answering said, Master, thou hast well said.

40 And after that <sup>u</sup>they durst not ask him any question at all.

41 ¶ And he said unto them, <sup>v</sup>How say they that Christ is David's son?

42 And David himself saith in the book of Psalms, <sup>w</sup>The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 43 Till I make thine enemies thy footstool.

44 David therefore calleth him Lord; <sup>x</sup>how is he then his son?<sup>9</sup>

45 ¶ Then <sup>y</sup>in the audience of all the people he said unto his disciples,

46 Beware<sup>a</sup> of the scribes, which desire to walk in long robes, and love greetings in the markets, and the highest seats in the synagogues, and the chief rooms at feasts;

47 Which<sup>b</sup> devour widows' houses, and for a show make long prayers: <sup>c</sup>the same shall receive greater damnation.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Christ commendeth the poor widow. 5 He foretelleth the destruction of the temple, and of the city Jerusalem: 25 the signs also which shall be before the last day. 34 He exhorteth them to be watchful.

AND he looked up, <sup>a</sup>and saw the rich men casting their gifts into the treasury.

2 And he saw also a certain poor widow casting in thither two mites.<sup>1</sup> a true sign to a rational being, without accurate prophetic description going before, or prophetic interpretation at the time of its appearance, without which every attention given to portents and omens is neither more nor less than superstition; and both these essentials are totally wanting in the cases related by Josephus. The really 'fearful sights' were the factious murders amongst the Jews themselves; and the 'great signs from heaven' were the Roman armies encompassing Jerusalem, ver. 20; 'the abomination that maketh desolate standing in the holy place,' as described by the prophet Daniel, and repeated by our Lord himself, C.

Ver. 17. Never was any religion introduced to the world under such repulsive announcements; and especially unacceptable must such announcements have been to disciples accustomed to all the Mosaic promises of national and individual prosperity, and whose imaginations had been fired by the glowing descriptions of the kingdom of Messiah exhibited in the prophets, and which they, instead of interpreting spiritually, had been taught to apply to a temporal sovereignty, eventuating in a universal monarchy, of which the Jews were to be the exalted functionaries, and all heathen people the vassals and tributaries. A religion received and propagated under such a heavy cloud gives sufficient evidence both of the integrity of its Founder and the sincerity of its first converts; while the event of its success, with means the most inadequate, and in the face of obstructions the most formidable, affords an evidence of its divine origin which nothing but the most blinded infidelity could fail to recognize and acknowledge. C.

Ver. 24. Fall by . . . the sword. The numbers who perished by the sword, or its auxiliaries, famine and pestilence, amount, as given by Josephus, to 1,100,000 at Jerusalem, during the siege, where, according to the same historian, who calculated the amount by the number of paschal lambs, there were at least 2,500,000 assembled at the passover; while in other places there perished, from the same causes, and about the same time, 347,490 more—and these independent of the uncalculated multitudes who perished in woods, morasses, and caves, in divers places, and in the vaults and sewers at Jerusalem.—Led away captive. The number of Jewish prisoners taken during the war amounted at least to 97,000, besides 11,000 starved through neglect or a sullen refusal of food. Of these captives some were transported to Rome—to grace, according to the barbarous custom of that people, the triumph of the conqueror; others were distributed through the cities of Syria, where many fell in combats in the theatres with wild beasts, or in compulsory conflicts with one another—others were condemned to toil in the Egyptian mines; many, including persons of the first distinction, were sold for the most trifling prices, and about 40,000 were liberated because no one would purchase them. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Christ takes exact notice of all our works, particularly those of piety and charity. But who can think of his awful predictions and their exact accomplishment without beholding him at once the Saviour and the God, without considering that the Jewish constitution is now totally destroyed, and a gospel dispensation extending to all the world established on its ruins. God permits men to go on to the most fearful lengths in sin before they bring ruin to themselves. But terrible are the judgments on earth and misery in hell which obstinate despisers of the gospel shall meet with at last.—Christ's faithful ministers and people generally share deep in tribulation. But faith and patience will infallibly carry them through all their difficulties, to his and their honour, and to the confutation of their adversaries. His gracious direction and

3 And he said, Of a truth I say unto you, that<sup>b</sup> this poor widow hath cast in more than they all.

4 For all these have of their abundance cast in unto the offerings of God: but she of her penury hath cast in all the living that she had.

5 ¶ And<sup>c</sup> as some spake of the temple, how it was adorned with goodly stones and gifts, he said,

6 As for these things which ye behold, the days will come, in the which<sup>d</sup> there shall not be left one stone<sup>2</sup> upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

7 ¶ And they asked him, saying, Master, but<sup>e</sup> when shall these things be? and what sign will there be when these things shall come to pass?

8 And he said, ¶ Take heed that ye be not deceived: for<sup>f</sup> many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and the time draweth near: go ye not therefore after them.

9 But<sup>g</sup> when ye shall hear of wars<sup>3</sup> and commotions, be not terrified: for these things must first come to pass; but<sup>h</sup> the end is not by and by.

10 Then<sup>i</sup> said he unto them, Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom:

11 And great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and famines, and pestilences; and fearful sights and great signs shall there be from heaven.

12 But before all these, they shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to the synagogues, and into prisons, being brought before kings and rulers for my name's sake.

13 And<sup>j</sup> it shall turn to you for a testimony.<sup>4</sup>

14 Settle<sup>k</sup> it therefore in your hearts, not to meditate before what ye shall answer:

15 For<sup>l</sup> I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist.

16 And<sup>m</sup> ye shall be betrayed both by parents, and brethren, and kinsfolks, and friends; and some of you shall they cause to be put to death.

17 And<sup>n</sup> ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake.

18 But<sup>o</sup> there shall not an hair of your head perish.

19 In<sup>p</sup> your patience possess ye your souls.<sup>5</sup>

20 And<sup>q</sup> when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh.<sup>6</sup>

the midst of it depart out; and let not them that are in the countries enter thereinto.

22 For<sup>u</sup> these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled.

23 But<sup>v</sup> woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck, in those days! for there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people.

24 And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.<sup>8</sup>

25 ¶ And<sup>b</sup> there shall be signs<sup>9</sup> in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth<sup>1</sup> distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring;<sup>2</sup>

26 Men's<sup>c</sup> hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken.

27 And<sup>d</sup> then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud<sup>3</sup> with power and great glory.

28 And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh.

29 And he spake to them a parable; ¶ Behold the fig-tree, and all the trees;

30 When they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand.

31 So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand.

32 Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away till all be fulfilled.<sup>4</sup>

33 Heaven<sup>j</sup> and earth shall pass away: but my words shall not pass away.

34 ¶ And<sup>k</sup> take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness,<sup>5</sup> and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares.

35 For<sup>n</sup> as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth.

36 Watch<sup>o</sup> ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man.

support attend, and his everlasting free rewards await them. Happy are they who in evil days discern the signs of the times, and with fervent prayer and persevering watchfulness avoid the dangerous snare of earthly cares and pleasures, and so attend on gospel ministration as to be ever ready for the judgment-seat! We have here no continuing city, but are in jeopardy every hour. Let us therefore watch and be sober, that we may be prepared for every dispensation of Providence, and be ready when our Lord shall come.

CHAPTER XXII. Ver. 3. How Satan entered into Judas—whether personally, as the demons certainly did into the bodies of the possessed—that is, certainly, if credit is to be given to plain Scripture narrative; or, whether, by taking advantage of his corrupt dispositions, especially his avarice, and managing to present the appropriate temptations before him, and thereby suggesting correspondent ideas to his mind—has been matter of question. Guise, Gill, Rosenmüller, &c., are of opinion that Satan entered merely by suggestion; but the identity of expression between this case and even that of the swine, Mar. 5. 1, 2, seems clearly to decide in favour of an actual entering and possession as the means whereby Satan put it into the heart of Judas to betray his Master, Jn. 13. 2. C.

Ver. 29. The kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ, God's Son, was a kingdom the entrance to which was through the suffering of death, He. 2. 9, 10; 12. 2. Such an entrance was also

CHAPTER XXII.

1 The Jews conspire against Christ. 3 Satan prepareth Judas to betray him. 7 The apostles prepare the passover. 19 Christ instituteth his last supper, 21 covertly foretelleth of the traitor, 24 checketh the ambitious strife of his disciples, 31 assurcth Peter his faith should not fail: 34 and yet he should deny him thrice. 39 He prayeth in the mount, and sweateth blood, 47 is betrayed with a kiss: 50 he healeth Malchus' ear, 54 he is thrice denied of Peter, 63 shamefully abused, 66 and confesseth himself to be the Son of God.

NOW the<sup>a</sup> feast of unleavened bread drew nigh, which is called the passover.

2 And the chief priests and scribes sought how they might kill him;<sup>1</sup> for<sup>b</sup> they feared the people.

3 ¶ Then<sup>c</sup> entered Satan into Judas sur-named Iseariot, being of the number of the twelve.

4 And he went his way, and <sup>d</sup>communed with the chief priests and captains,<sup>2</sup> how he might betray him unto them.

5 And they were glad, and <sup>e</sup>covenanted to give him money.

6 And he promised, and sought opportunity to betray him unto them <sup>3</sup>in the absenee of the multitude.<sup>4</sup>

7 ¶ Then<sup>9</sup> came the day of unleavened bread, when the passover must be killed.<sup>5</sup>

8 And <sup>h</sup>he sent Peter and John, saying, Go and prepare us the passover, that we may eat.

9 And they said unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare?

10 And he said unto them, 'Behold, when ye are entered into the city, there shall a man meet you, bearing a pitcher of water; follow him into the house where he entereth in.

11 And ye shall say unto the goodman of the house, 'The Master saith unto thee, Where is the guest-chamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples?'

12 And he shall show you a large upper room furnished: there make ready.

13 And they went, and <sup>k</sup>found as he had said<sup>6</sup> unto them: <sup>l</sup>and they made ready the passover.

14 And<sup>n</sup> when the hour was come, he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him.

15 And he said unto them, With desire I have desired<sup>7</sup> to eat this passover with you before I suffer:

16 For I say unto you, <sup>o</sup>I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled<sup>8</sup> in the kingdom of God.

17 And he took the eup, and <sup>p</sup>gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide <sup>it</sup> among yourselves:

i At the time of the passover, as appears from Josephus, the number of persons in and around Jerusalem amounted to 2,500,000—amongst whom any popular commotion—and such occurrences were frequent—must have been an object of great dread to the rulers. So wonderfully does God control wicked and lawless men, by men as wicked and lawless as themselves; and their passions, which, like pent-up waters, have thus been restrained, he can again, as a judgment against their wickedness, let loose at his will, and render wicked rulers and wicked people mutual executioners of justice upon their several or common crimes.—C.

w There is a difference between Luke and the other evangelists as to the exact time of the institution of the Lord's supper. Luke places it before our Lord pointed out the traitor, and before Judas withdrew. It would appear, therefore, from Luke's narrative as if Judas had partaken of the Lord's supper (see ver. 21). The other evangelists, however, clearly represent Judas as being denounced by our Lord before the institution of the supper; and John (13. 30) distinctly states that on being pointed out as traitor he 'went immediately out.' On a review and comparison of the whole narratives I have been led to the following conclusions as to the order of events:—1. Having taken their places at the paschal feast, the disciples contended for pre-eminence (ch. 22. 24-27). 2. As a practical reproof of such unworthy feelings Jesus washed the disciples' feet (Jn. 13. 1-20). 3. Jesus pointed out the traitor, who immediately retired (Mat. 26. 21-25; Mar. 14. 18-21; Jn. 13. 21-35). 4. He foretells the denial of Peter (Mat. 26. 31-35; Mar. 14. 27-31; Jn. 13. 36-38). 5. He institutes the Lord's supper (Mat. 26. 26-29; Mar. 14. 22-25; ch. 22. 19, 20). Luke, as we have seen, does not follow the order of time; he often groups incidents which have some logical connection. In this place he was apparently led to detail the institution of the supper immediately after the first cup of wine in the paschal feast, and thus to reverse the order of events.—P.

appointed to the disciples, who were fully warned that 'through much tribulation they should enter into the kingdom of God,' Jn. 16. 33; Ac. 14. 22. This kingdom, as it is established in the hearts of God's people, consists in 'righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost,' which are all the gifts of Christ; and as it exists in heaven, it is rest from labour, and the enjoyment of glory, Re. 14. 13; Col. 3. 4. C.

Ver. 30. That ye may eat and drink—of that righteousness after which the children of God do constantly 'hunger and thirst,' Mat. 5. 6.—And sit on thrones, &c. Even so do the apostles now sit enthroned in the church, by their testimony for Jesus, judging and condemning the twelve tribes who rejected him, Ac. 28. 23-28, adjudicating between them and the Gentiles, Ac. 15. 1-29, and, in the gospel and its ordinances, propounding those principles by which the whole world shall be finally judged, Ro. 2. 16. Whether these 'thrones' imply any special apostolic glory in the kingdom yet to be inherited, will not further appear till 'we see as we are seen, and know as we are known.' C.

Ver. 31. Satan hath desired to have you. Not thee, Peter, alone, but all of you; even as he desired to have Job, when, with two limitations, he obtained his desire, and smote him in his property, family, and person, Job 1. 12; 2. 6. Simon is specially warned, because his self-confident boldness exposed him to the greatest danger and the deepest fall. C.

Ver. 36. But now, he that hath a purse, &c. As if he had said, The time is now come when you will no longer receive hospitality, and must therefore labour, by industry, frugality, and prudent forethought, to provide for yourselves.—And he that hath no sword, &c. That our Lord did not direct the purchase of a literal sword, either for defence or attack, is evident from ver. 51; Mat. 26. 52; 2 Co. 10. 4. But, by a strong proverbial figure, he meant to prepare the hearts of the disciples for encountering, with faith and patience, the manifold dangers that were now fast closing around them, Ro. 13. 12; 2 Co. 6. 7; Ep. 6. 11, &c.: 1 Pe. 4. 1. C.

Ver. 42. The slight verbal differences in the various records of this prayer are perfectly consistent with the doctrine of complete divine inspiration; for, not to speak of the various forms of translation from Hebrew or Syro-Phœnician into Greek, which the Spirit of truth might equally and most advantageously sanction, there is no reason to conclude that our Lord uttered the petition but once, and in one form, but, on the contrary, every reason to 43 And<sup>t</sup> there appeared an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him.

44 And<sup>u</sup> being in an agony, he prayed more earnestly: and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground.<sup>8</sup>

45 And when he rose up from prayer, and was come to his disciples, he found them sleeping for sorrow, 46 And said unto them, °Why sleep ye? rise and pray, lest ye enter into temptation.

47 ¶ And while he yet spake, °behold a multitude, and he that was called Judas, one of the twelve, went before them, and drew near unto Jesus °to kiss him.

48 But Jesus said unto him, Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?

49 When they which were about him saw what would follow, they said unto him, Lord, shall we smite with the sword?<sup>9</sup>

50 ¶ And<sup>z</sup> one of them smote a servant of the high-priest, and cut off his right ear.

51 And Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far.<sup>1</sup> And he touched his ear, and healed him.

and captains of the temple, and the elders, which were come to him, Be ye come out as against a thief, with swords and staves?

53 When I was <sup>b</sup>daily with you in the temple, ye stretched forth no hands against me: but this is <sup>c</sup>your hour, and the power of darkness.

54 ¶ Then<sup>a</sup> took they him, and led him, and brought him into the high-priest's house. ° And Peter followed afar off.

55 And when they had kindled a fire in the midst<sup>2</sup> of the hall, and were set down together, Peter sat down among them.

56 But <sup>a</sup>a certain maid beheld him as he sat by the fire, and earnestly looked upon him, and said, This man was also with him.<sup>3</sup>

57 And he <sup>b</sup>denied him, saying, Woman, I know him not.

58 And<sup>i</sup> after a little while another saw him, and said, Thou art also of them. And Peter said, Man, I am not.

59 And about the space of one hour after, <sup>j</sup>another confidently affirmed, saying, Of a truth this fellow also was with him; for he is a <sup>k</sup>Galilean.

60 And Peter said, Man, I know not what thou sayest. And immediately, while he yet spake, the cock crew.

61 And the Lord turned, and looked upon Peter. And Peter remembered the word of the Lord, how he had said unto him, 'Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice.

62 And<sup>n</sup> Peter went out, and wept bitterly.

63 ¶ And<sup>o</sup> the men that held Jesus <sup>m</sup>mocked him, and smote him.

64 And when they had blindfolded him, they struck him on the face, and asked him, saying, Prophecy, who is it that smote thee?

65 And many other things blasphemously spake they against him.

66 ¶ And<sup>a</sup> as soon as it was day, the elders of the people and the chief priests and the scribes came together, and led him into their council, saying,

67 Art<sup>r</sup> thou the Christ? tell us. ° And he said unto them, If I tell you, ye will not believe:

68 And if I also ask you,<sup>4</sup> ye will not answer me, nor let me go.

69 Hereafter<sup>5</sup> shall the Son of man <sup>t</sup>sit on the right hand of the power of God.

conclude that, as he recurred to the same petition in three successive prayers, he also recurred to it more than once, and in various forms, in each prayer—any one of which forms would be equally true, and verbally exact. C.

Ver. 53. This is your hour—when you are permitted to have power over me, 'and this (your successful violence) is the power of darkness' over you, Jn. 3. 10, whereby 'the god of this world has blinded your eyes,' and so brought you under 'the power of darkness' that you can neither see nor acknowledge my divine mission, 2 Co. 4.4; Col. 1. 13. C.

Ver. 61. The Lord turned and looked upon Peter. Note, How ready are believers to forget their Saviour, when, as it were, his back is toward them—he is absent from them. But as one look of sight sent Peter out to weep, surely such a 'walk by faith, and not by sight,' will not forget, when they are tempted, that each should meet the temptation with, 'Thus it is written'—'Thou, Lord, seest me!' C.

Ver. 70. Ye say that I am. This being that very thing which the Jews most obstinately denied, how did they say it? Might not the words be better translated, interrogatively, 'Do ye say (admit or deny) that I am?' The subsequent neglect or refusal of reply practically verifies, at the moment, the prophetic accusation, ver. 68. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Whether should I here most admire the lengths in wickedness to which sinners will go when left to themselves—the covetousness, treachery, unbelief, hardness of heart, malice, and malignity, manifested in plotting against, betraying, apprehending, condemning, reviling, and murdering the Son of God and Saviour of mankind—or his love, in patiently undergoing everything severe and shameful; in fasting, warning, directing, and comforting his disciples; in solemn resignation of himself to his sufferings and death; in miraculously healing one of his miscreant apprehenders; in graciously converting him who most criminally denied him; and in avowing himself a divine person, at the hazard of his life!—How extensive were his sufferings in soul—in body—in character! And yet all the malice of his enemies was so overruled as only to accomplish the fulfilment of prophecies, the honour of God, and the salvation of men. Marvelously he changed the ancient passover into a crucified Redeemer, and a delightful feast on his fulness. Let us always then observe it in the faith of his institution, in obedience to his authority, and aiming at his honour. It is an awful thing for professed disciples and dignified clergymen to betray their Master; and highly shameful to indulge carnal pride and ambition in the presence of a suffering Redeemer, whose kingdom is not of this world. But seasonably preserved, highly honoured,

THE SPOT WHERE CHRIST PRAYED—GARDEN OF GETHSEMANE [LUKE, xxii: 41].—
The Garden of Gethsemane is inclosed by a wall. To the north of the Garden and outside of it there is a spot pointed out as the place where Christ uttered the last prayer. A lamp hangs here and burns all the day and all the night long. It is a sad and touching scene to stand in the presence of this place and to watch the reverent and devoted saints stand and look upon it with sympathy and love. Many looking upon this scene do not pretend to conceal the tears which flow down their cheeks. This serves to bring before their imagination the agony and grief of the last hours of our Savior's life when He uttered that last prayer for his disciples and for the world. Of Himself He never seemed to think ; it was of those He came into the world to teach and redeem.

70 Then said they all, Art thou then the Son of God? And he said unto them, Ye say that I am.<sup>6</sup>

71 And they said, What need we any further witness? for we ourselves have heard of his own mouth.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Jesus is accused before Pilate, and sent to Herod. 8 Herod mocketh him. 12 Herod and Pilate are made friends. 13 Barabbas is desired of the people, and is loosed by Pilate, and Jesus is given to be crucified. 27 He telleth the women, that lament him, the destruction of Jerusalem: 34 prayeth for his enemies. 39 Is reviled by one of the malefactors, but confessed by the other. 46 His death. 50 His burial.

AND the<sup>a</sup> whole multitude of them arose, and led him unto Pilate.

2 And they began to<sup>b</sup> accuse him, saying, We<sup>c</sup> found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Cæsar, saying that he himself is Christ a King.<sup>1</sup>

3 And Pilate asked him, saying, <sup>d</sup>Art thou the King of the Jews? And he answered him, and said, Thou sayest it.

4 Then said Pilate to the chief priests and to the people, <sup>e</sup>I find no fault<sup>2</sup> in this man.

5 And <sup>f</sup>they were the more fierce, saying, He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, beginning <sup>h</sup>from Galilee to this place.

6 When Pilate heard of Galilee, he asked whether the man were a <sup>i</sup>Galilean.

7 And as soon as he knew that he belonged unto <sup>j</sup>Herod's jurisdiction, he sent him to Herod,<sup>3</sup> who himself also was at Jerusalem at that time.

8 ¶ And when Herod saw Jesus, he was exceeding glad: for he was <sup>k</sup>desirous to see him of a long season, because he had heard many things of him; and <sup>l</sup>he hoped to have seen some miracle done by him.

9 Then he questioned with him in many words; but <sup>m</sup>he answered him nothing.

10 And the chief priests and scribes stood and <sup>n</sup>vehemently accused him.

11 And <sup>p</sup>Herod with his men of war set him at nought, and mocked <sup>him</sup>, and arrayed him in a <sup>q</sup>gorgeous robe,<sup>4</sup> and sent him again to Pilate.

12 ¶ And the same day <sup>r</sup>Pilate and Herod were made friends together: for before they were at enmity between themselves.

13 ¶ And <sup>s</sup>Pilate, when he had called together the chief priests and the rulers and the people,

14 Said unto them, Ye have brought this man unto me, <sup>t</sup>as one that perverteth the people; and, behold, I, having examined <sup>him</sup> before you, <sup>u</sup>have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him:

15 No, nor yet Herod: for I sent you to him;

f I find no fault. The Roman government now was too strong to be moved with jealousy at our Lord's claim to be King of the Jews. Pilate, therefore, disregarded the implied charge of rebellion against Cæsar. It is not improbable that Pilate was also moved by the sight of what he would consider fallen greatness. But, by whatever moved, his feelings were overruled by Providence to produce a judicial Gentile testimony to the innocence of our Lord, and an abiding record of the injustice and cruelty of his persecutors. —C.

s Father, forgive them. This gracious prayer seems, first, to include the Roman soldiers, the chief agents in the crucifixion — then the thoughtless multitude, ignorantly acting under the undue influence of their rulers. Whether it included those rulers themselves, who, knowingly, and with malice prepense, urged on the multitude that coerced Pilate, is not so evident. One thing, however, is certain, the prayer was heard, and of those who actually joined in the crucifixion, many believed, repented, and were saved. Ac. 2, 23, 37, 41. —C.

and, lo, nothing worthy of death<sup>5</sup> is done unto him.<sup>6</sup>

16 I<sup>v</sup> will therefore chastise him, and release him.

17 (For<sup>w</sup> of necessity<sup>7</sup> he must release one unto them at the feast.)

18 And<sup>y</sup> they cried out all at once, saying, Away with this man, and release unto us Barabbas:

19 (Who for a certain sedition made in the city, and for murder, was cast into prison.)

20 Pilate therefore, willing to release Jesus, <sup>z</sup>spake again to them.

21 But<sup>a</sup> they cried, saying, Crucify him, crucify him.

22 And<sup>b</sup> he said unto them the third <sup>8</sup>time, Why, what evil hath he done? I have found no cause of death in him: I will therefore chastise him, and let him go.

23 And<sup>c</sup> they were instant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified. And the voices of them and of the chief priests prevailed.

24 And<sup>d</sup> Pilate gave sentence<sup>9</sup> that it should be as they required.

25 And he released unto them him <sup>e</sup>that for sedition and murder was cast into prison, whom they had desired; but he delivered Jesus to their will.

26 ¶ And<sup>f</sup> as they led him away, they laid hold upon one Simon, a Cyrenian, coming out of the country, and on him they laid the cross, that he might bear it after Jesus.

27 And there followed him a great company of people, and of women,<sup>1</sup> which also bewailed and lamented him.

28 But Jesus turning unto them, said, Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children.

29 For, <sup>h</sup>behold, the days are coming, in the which they shall say, Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the paps which never gave suck.<sup>2</sup>

30 Then<sup>i</sup> shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us.

31 For<sup>j</sup> if they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?<sup>3</sup>

32 ¶ And <sup>k</sup>there were also two others, malefactors,<sup>4</sup> led with him to be put to death.

33 And when they were come to the place which is called <sup>5</sup>Calvary, <sup>l</sup>there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

34 ¶ Then said Jesus, Father, <sup>m</sup>forgive <sup>6</sup>them; for they know not what they do. <sup>n</sup>And they parted his raiment, and cast lots.

and plentifully rewarded, are they who continue faithful in times of trouble. Great is the danger of pride, self-confidence, and unwatchfulness; or of rashly entering into temptation; and there is need of Jesus' intercession to preserve his people's faith when it is sorely shaken. And if we experience his influences, let us improve them for the warning and strengthening of our fellow-Christians. But sins of infirmity in his saints greatly differ from the presumptuous rebellion of hardened sinners. How shocking it is for men to interrogate Jesus concerning his person, doctrine, or work, merely to strengthen their own and others' prejudices against him! For soon will he appear in great glory and majesty, to the confusion and ruin of every obstinate despiser, and to the unspeakable comfort of every cordial believer.

35 ¶ And the people stood beholding. And the rulers also with them derided him, saying, He saved others; let him save himself, if he be Christ,<sup>a</sup> the chosen of God.

36 And the soldiers<sup>7</sup> also mocked him, coming to him, and offering him vinegar, 37 And saying, If thou be the king of the Jews, save thyself.

38 And<sup>s</sup> a superscription also was written over him, in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew, THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

39 ¶ And<sup>t</sup> one of the malefactors which were hanged railed on him, saying, If thou be Christ, save thyself and us.

40 But the other, answering, rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation?

41 And<sup>y</sup> we indeed justly; for we receive the due reward of our deeds: but this man hath done nothing amiss.

42 And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom.<sup>8</sup>

43 And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise.<sup>9</sup>

44 ¶ And<sup>d</sup> it was about the sixth hour, and there was a darkness over all the earth<sup>1</sup> until the ninth hour.<sup>2</sup>

45 And the sun was darkened, and the veil of the temple was rent in the midst.

46 ¶ And<sup>w</sup> when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit: and having said thus, he gave up the ghost.

47 ¶ Now<sup>t</sup> when the centurion saw what was done, he glorified God, saying, Certainly this was a righteous man.

48 And all the people that came together to that sight, beholding the things which were done, smote their breasts, and returned.

49 And<sup>k</sup> all his acquaintance, and the women

At first the two joined the crowd in their unseemly taunts; but one of them, when he saw the meekness of the sufferer, when he heard his words of love and pity, and when he witnessed the events which occurred, was convinced of Christ's divinity, was humbled by a sense of his own sin, and was constrained in penitence and faith to utter the prayer, 'Lord, remember me when thou comest in thy

¶ Two men. Two angels in human form.—C.
¶ Two angels are here mentioned; the English version says 'stood by them,' but the original merely signifies 'appeared to them,' without determining in what attitude. Mark mentions only one angel, who sat 'by the right side' of the tomb ch. 16. 5). Matthew also mentions one, who sat on the stone which he had rolled away from the door. The full account may be that they saw one angel outside who followed them in; they saw another inside on entering; and Luke, without stating the whole facts, mentions the two as 'appearing to them.'—P.

that followed him from Galilee, stood afar off, beholding these things.

50 ¶ And,<sup>1</sup> behold, there was a man named Joseph, a counsellor; and he was a good man, and a just:

51 (The same had not consented to the counsel and deed of them;) he was of Arimathea, a city of the Jews: who also himself waited for the kingdom of God.

52 This man went unto Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus.

53 And he took it down, and wrapped it in linen, and laid it in a sepulchre that was hewn in stone, wherein never man before was laid.

54 And<sup>a</sup> that day was the preparation,<sup>3</sup> and the sabbath drew on.<sup>4</sup>

55 ¶ And<sup>r</sup> the women also, which came with him from Galilee, followed after, and beheld the sepulchre, and how his body was laid.

56 And they returned, and prepared spices and ointments; and rested the sabbath-day, according to the commandment.<sup>5</sup>

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 Christ's resurrection is declared by two angels to the women that come to the sepulchre. 9 These report it to others. 13 Christ himself appeareth to the two disciples that went to Emmaus: 36 afterwards he appeareth to the apostles, and reproveth their unbelief: 47 giveth them a charge: 49 promiseth the Holy Ghost: 51 and so ascendeth into heaven.

NOW upon<sup>a</sup> the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulchre, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others with them.

2 And they found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre.

3 And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus.

4 And it came to pass, as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold, two men<sup>1</sup> stood by them in shining garments:<sup>2</sup>

5 And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye the living<sup>3</sup> among the dead?

6 He is not here, but is risen: remember

¶ Mat. 16. 21; 17. 22, 23; 20. 18, 19. Mar. 8. 31; 9. 31; 10. 33, 34. ch. 9. 22; 18. 33. Mat. 12. 40. Jn. 2. 22.

could work miracles, why did he not acknowledge him to be the Messiah? Because he attributed his admitted power of working miracles not to the power of God working in attestation of his divine commission, but to his knowledge of mere natural causes, and superior skill in some occult philosophy, such as the Egyptians and Persian magi were supposed to possess. Thus the Pharisees had also admitted his miraculous power, yet rejected his claims to be Messiah, because they attributed his miracles to Beelzebub. In all this, Herod and the Pharisees erred alike in looking merely at the miracles, and disregarding the prophecy by which they were preceded—which preceding prophecy is essential to the evidence of a divine commission, Re. 19. 10. C.

Ver. 33. Calvary. A little hill north-west of Jerusalem, in Hebrew called Golgotha, the place of a skull, from its resemblance, as is supposed, to a human skull. Calvary is derived from the Latin calvus, bald. Some have described it as a public cemetery; but the Jewish modes of burial, and care and avoidance of the bones of the dead, as well as the singular, 'skull,' not 'skulls,' will not countenance that opinion. C.

Ver. 43. Paradise. What differences, local or circumstantial, may be in the 'Father's house' and its 'many mansions,' it were presumptuous to inquire farther than is revealed. The meaning of 'paradise' is, however, settled by reference to 2 Co. 12. 4; Re. 2. 7, comp. with ch. 22. 1, &c., where it is evidently synonymous with heaven and its blessedness and glory, in allusion to that terrestrial paradise in which God and man dwelt together in holy intercourse, Ge. 2. 15. C.

Ver. 47. A righteous man. Instead of 'a righteous man,' Matthew has it 'the Son of God.' These two statements are both consistent with one another and with the doctrine of divine inspiration, upon the simple principle that the centurion uttered both expressions, while each evangelist chose that one which the Spirit directed as most suited to the first readers of his Gospel. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Sinners often presumptuously charge their own faults upon Jesus and his faithful servants; and many cement their friendship by contempt of him. How strong is the power of prejudice against him! It undervalues and derides him, because he will not gratify curiosity or answer unreasonable demands; it forms the falsest accusations; it prefers every temporal interest, or even a base malefactor, lust, or devil, to him—indignant that he should reign or have any honour in the world. Yea, often they who seem convinced of his excellency, through importunity and carnal fear, or other similar temptations, violate all the bonds of truth, and rights of conscience and honour, to injure him. Many have their affections touched with the cruelty or love of his death whose hearts are never renewed to believe in and love him. But O how astonishing the grace, the infinite grace, of our Lord Jesus, in thus suffering, dying, and praying for his enemies! How great is his power and sovereignty in triumphing over Satan on the cross, and forming one of his fellow-sufferers from a hardened thief into a strong believer, a bold confessor, a fervent supplicant, an immediate partaker of heaven; while the other dies contradicting and blaspheming! And great likewise was the honour with which his Father marked his sufferings.—His judge, his crucifiers, the attending women, and even the darkened sun, the quaking earth, and the rent veil, concur to attest his Messiahship!

CHAPTER XXIV. Ver. 26. 'Ought he not to have suffered,' in obedience to the divine will, in manifestation of eternal love, in fulfilment of all prophecy (Ge. 3. 15; Ps. 22. 1, &c.; Is. 50. 6; 53. 1, &c.; Da. 9. 26), and to respond to all the types by which he was represented in the history of providence and Mosaic sacrifices. C.

Ver. 30. The similarity of the expression and of the act to those of the original institution of the Lord's supper, seems to indicate that it was here again celebrated by our Lord as introductory to drawing the attention and opening the eyes of his disciples. See ver. 35. C.

Ver. 52. They worshipped him. This must have been divine worship; for, according to Ac. 1. 9, 10, they continued gazing, looking up, after him, until the angel spoke, after which no worship but divine worship could be offered to one that was absent and invisible. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How certain and sweet is the news of our Saviour's resurrection! Yea, often he surprises the most unlikely and unworthy with such discoveries of himself as they are apt to think too great or too good to be true. They who seek him early find him quickly; and they who talk of him have their eyes enlightened and hearts warmed by his presence. How seasonable are his visits! and what light his explications cast on the Scriptures, which relate to his sufferings or glory! And if men insist upon and plead for how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee,

7 Saying, The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.

8 And<sup>g</sup> they remembered his words,

9 And<sup>h</sup> returned from the sepulchre, and told all these things unto the eleven, and to all the rest.

10 It<sup>i</sup> was Mary Magdalene, and Joanna, and Mary the mother of James, and other women that were with them, which told these things unto the apostles.

11 And<sup>j</sup> their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not.

12 ¶ Then<sup>k</sup> arose Peter, and ran unto the sepulchre; and stooping down, he beheld the linen clothes laid by themselves,<sup>4</sup> and departed, wondering in himself at that which was come to pass.<sup>5</sup>

13 ¶ And,<sup>l</sup> behold, two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus,<sup>6</sup> which was from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs.<sup>7</sup>

14 And they<sup>n</sup> talked together of all these things which had happened.

15 And it came to pass, that, while<sup>n</sup> they communed together and reasoned, Jesus himself drew near, and went with them.

16 But<sup>q</sup> their eyes were holden,<sup>8</sup> that they should not know him.

17 And he said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?

18 And the one of them, whose name was Cleopas,<sup>9</sup> answering said unto him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days?

19 And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people:

20 And<sup>s</sup> how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him.

21 But we trusted that it had been he<sup>t</sup> which should have redeemed Israel:<sup>1</sup> and, beside all this, to-day is the third day since these things were done.

22 Yea,<sup>u</sup> and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre;

23 And when they found not his body, they came, saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that he was alive.

<sup>o</sup> Josephus mentions two or three places called Emmaus, the most important of which, situated near Lydda, became afterwards the seat of a Roman colony, and was then called Nicopolis. The Emmaus of Luke is situated between seven and eight miles north-west of Jerusalem, and still exists as a poor village, chiefly inhabited by Christians.—C.

<sup>p</sup> This most interesting narrative occurs only in Luke, who doubtless received his information from one of the two disciples. The incident is just referred to in a single sentence by Mark, ch. 16.12.—P.

<sup>x</sup> Alford's note on these words is most important. It accords fully with my own view and with my observations on Mat. 5.17. 'I take "the things concerning himself" to be something very different from mere prophetic passages. The whole Scriptures are a testimony to him; the whole history of the chosen people, with its types, and its law, and its prophecies, is a showing forth of him; and it was here the whole—all the Scriptures—that he laid out before them. This general leading into the meaning of the whole, as a whole, fulfilled in him, would be much more opportune to the place and time occupied than a direct exposition of selected passages. . . . Observe the testimony which this verse gives to the divine authority and Christian interpretation of the Old Testament Scriptures; so that the denial of the references to Christ's death and glory in the Old Testament is henceforth nothing less than a denial of his own teaching.—P.

EMMMAUS, SHOWING WHERE CHRIST MADE HIMSELF KNOWN TO HIS DISCIPLES AFTER THE RESURRECTION. [LUKE, xxiv:13.]—The Emmaus represented in the picture is one of the villages making special claim to be the place where Christ made himself known after his resurrection to his disciples. The particular Emmaus given in the above illustration is out about five miles from Jerusalem on the road to Jaffa.

There are some noble old olive trees here, and there is an air of repose and restfulness about the place, which somehow fall into line with our feelings as to the kind of place Emmaus ought to be. The village is built up near the top of the hill and in quietness and grace comports very well with the beautiful and divine life that was made known to the disciples in the breaking of bread, in this immediate locality.

without asking God's blessing on them, or returning him thanks for them, or without attempting to hold fellowship with Jesus in them. Astonishingly great is our Redeemer, in whom all the oracles of God are YEA and AMEN, to his glory. Endearing is his love that blesses his people, notwithstanding their manifold infirmities, and gives them his Spirit to qualify them for every trial or service to which he calls them. In abundant grace he began his work of pardon and conversion upon them who had just imbrued their hands in his blood. Delightful was his departure, blessing his disciples; and exalted and glorious is his dignity in heaven.

O that my heart and eye, my faith and hope, could closely follow him—looking after him, adoring him, blessing God for him, depending on him for all necessary blessings, and longing to be with him, that when he appears the second time, without sin, it may be unto my salvation.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF LUKE.

There can be no doubt that Luke was that "beloved physician" who forsook a respected and lucrative profession to become the companion of Paul in persecution and poverty (Col. 4. 14; 2 Ti. 4. 11; Phile. 24). The prescription which Paul gives to Timothy (1 Ti. 5. 23), for his health's sake, was most probably suggested by Luke: the Spirit of God thereby honouring the medical profession in the person of a godly physician. By some he is supposed to have been the unnamed disciple that accompanied Cleophas to Emmaus (ch. 24. 13, 18), and that, from modesty, he has suppressed his own name, as he has also done in the Acts of the Apostles, which internal evidence and history concur in ascribing to him. But whether he accompanied Cleophas or not, is a matter alike uncertain and unimportant.

The authenticity of Luke's Gospel is evidenced even by those called apostolic fathers; and its special value consists in the amount of events and discourses which he minutely records, and which are not contained in the other evangelists, as may be seen by reference to the introductory observations. C.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO SAINT JOHN.

John, the writer of this Gospel, and of three short epistles, was originally a fisherman; who, being called to be one of Christ's disciples, became his peculiar favourite. Living long after the other apostles, when the church was first plagued with the denial of our Saviour's essential Deity, he aims more expressly to establish that fundamental article of the Christian religion, and to manifest the inexcusableness of the Jews in rejecting him. What he relates in his Gospel is generally new, and related by none of the other evangelists: viz. John Baptist's directing his disciples to Christ, ch. i.; Christ turning water into wine; purging the temple of fraudulent merchants, ch. ii.; healing the nobleman's son, ch. iv.; and the infirm man at the pool of Bethesda, ch. v.; the blind man at the pool of Siloam, ch. ix.; and his raising Lazarus from the dead, ch. xi. But he especially sets before us his divine discourses—with Nicodemus, touching the new birth, ch. iii.; with the Samaritan woman and his disciples, ch. iv.; with the Pharisees, concerning his equality with the Father in Godhead, working, and worship, ch. 5. 18, 21, 23; with the Capernaumites, concerning himself as the bread of life, ch. vi.; with the Jews, touching his power over the Sabbath-day, and to save sinners, ch. vii.; and his being the Light of the world, the Son of the Father, and teacher of that truth which alone could render them free from the bondage of Satan, sin, and death, ch. viii.; and the chief and divine Shepherd of God's chosen people, ch. x.; and with his disciples, for their direction and comfort, at his last supper, ch. xiii.—xvi.; and his prayer to his Father, ch. xvii., &c.

[According to all antiquity this Gospel was written after the other three, and several years after the war with the Romans, that had terminated in the destruction of Jerusalem and the dispersion of the Jews. It is remarkable that he alone records the name of the disciple who smote Malchus with the sword; for Peter was now beyond the reach of his enemies, and that as Lazarus had, most probably, now also returned to his rest, he alone records his resurrection, which the others had omitted for fear of incensing the Jews, who had purposed to put him to death. It is also remarkable that the other evangelists record our Lord's predictions, and that John omits them; most likely because most, if not all, of them had been already fulfilled; for Jerusalem was destroyed by Titus; and John was not banished to Patmos till the 15th of Domitian his successor, A.D. 95, and was recalled from exile upon the accession of Nerva, A.D. 96, when he returned to Ephesus, where he wrote his Gospel and epistles, and survived till the third year of the emperor Trajan, when he died in the hundredth year of his age. C.]

John's Gospel is in many respects different from the others. The source and nature of its leading characteristics will be best developed by a brief notice of the author. His father was Zebedee, a fisherman of Galilee, apparently of some wealth, since he had hired servants. His son, therefore, would receive a superior education. John must have been thoughtful from boyhood, and the errors of the Jewish religion as then developed in ritual and tradition must have attracted his attention. He was a very young man when he attached himself to the Baptist, and he did not long remain under his elementary tuition. The Baptist's testimony to Jesus produced such an effect on John that he followed him. A deep attachment was formed, arising, as it appears, not merely from intellectual conviction of the truth of Christ's doctrines, but from ardent love for his person, and profound admiration of his character. John was one of the three whom Jesus admitted into the sanctuary of his inner life. They alone witnessed the transfiguration and the agony in Gethsemane. And while the three were favoured above others, John's intense love and devotion seems to have gained for him a still closer intimacy. He lay on Christ's bosom at supper; he followed him to the judgment-hall and the cross; he received from him, as the highest token of confidence and affection, the charge of Mary his mother. John had opportunities of witnessing Christ's power and glory, of seeing the depths of his love, of learning the mysteries of his nature, of observing the results of his work, such as were enjoyed by no other man. It is to this intimate communion of the beloved disciple with the loving Saviour we owe the development of those sublime truths set forth in this Gospel. It is to his profound veneration for, and appreciation of, every word that fell from Christ's lips, we are indebted for those long discourses which this Gospel alone contains. While the other disciples were attracted by his miracles, parables, and prophecies, John's philosophic mind was impressed by the mystery of his deity; by the depths of his wondrous love in assuming our nature and bearing our sin; by the triumphs of his work, in giving light to a dark, and life to a dead world; by the glories of the union established between him and his church, by the promise of the Comforter.

Such was John's training. From the moment he turned away from the Baptist, he seems never to have left the Messiah's side. He took supreme delight in the contemplation of his person and nature. He hung on every word that fell from his lips. He tried to fathom every truth embodied in his discourses. After Christ's death, too, John doubtless heard from Mary many of those displays of wisdom, power, and grace divine which the holy child had displayed from infancy to manhood, and which, as we are told, she 'treasured up in her heart.' John was taught as never man was taught.

The object of the other evangelists was mainly to give a history of our Lord; John's object was mainly to develop his theological system. The synoptists enunciated doctrines, but they did so from a historical point of view; John, on the other hand, narrated incidents, but he did so from a doctrinal point of view. The discourses of our Lord which he reports are all developments of the most sublime and profound doctrines. In this Gospel there is no biography of Jesus, properly so called; 'but there is, in historical form, a representation of the Christian faith, in relation to the person of Christ as its central point; and in this representation there is a picture, on the one hand, of the antagonism of the world to the truth revealed in him; and on the other, of the spiritual blessedness of the few who yield themselves to him as the Light of life.' P.]

2 The same was in the beginning with God.

3 All<sup>e</sup> things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made.

4 In<sup>g</sup> him was life; and the life<sup>h</sup> was the light of men.

5 And<sup>i</sup> the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not.<sup>5</sup>

6 ¶ There<sup>j</sup> was a man sent from God, whose name was John.

7 The<sup>k</sup> same came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe.

8 He<sup>l</sup> was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light.

9 That<sup>m</sup> was the true Light, which lighteth<sup>6</sup> every man that cometh into the world.

10 He was in the world, and<sup>n</sup> the world was made by him, and the world knew him not.

11 He<sup>o</sup> came unto his own,<sup>7</sup> and<sup>n</sup> his own received him not.

cometh after me is preferred before me: for<sup>h</sup> he was before me.

16 And<sup>a</sup> of his fulness have all we received, and grace for grace.

17 For<sup>b</sup> the law<sup>1</sup> was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.

18 No<sup>c</sup> man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

19 ¶ And<sup>d</sup> this is the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou?

20 And he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ.

21 And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, 'I am not. Art thou that prophet?'<sup>2</sup> And he answered, No.

22 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. What sayest thou of thyself?

23 He<sup>g</sup> said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias.

24 And they which were sent were of the Pharisees.<sup>3</sup>

25 And they asked him, and said unto him, Why baptizest thou then, if thou be not<sup>t</sup> that Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet?

26 John answered them, saying, 'I baptize with water: but there standeth one among you, whom ye know not;

27 He it is, who coming after me is preferred before me, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose.

28 These things were done in<sup>4</sup> Bethabara<sup>5</sup> beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing.

29 ¶ The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, 'Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh<sup>6</sup> away the sin of the world.

30 This is he of whom I said, 'After me

CHAPTER I. Ver. 1-5. From all eternity the Son of God, the great Speaker for and to men, the medium of divine manifestations to us, and to whom all the Scripture gives testimony, who may therefore properly be called the Word, existed a distinct person, equal to and the express image of his divine Father, and the same in substance with him, necessarily possessed of every excellency of Godhead; and by him were all creatures, from the highest to the lowest, formed of nothing in the beginning of time. From that life necessarily existent in him proceeded all kinds and degrees of life, knowledge, and comfort, found among men. And yet, though he, in the dictates of natural conscience and of revelation, manifests himself to men, such is the sinful ignorance and error of their minds, cometh a man which is preferred before me: for he was before me.

31 And <sup>o</sup>I knew him not: <sup>p</sup>but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water.

32 And <sup>a</sup>John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him.

33 And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, <sup>s</sup>the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.

34 And I saw, and bare record <sup>t</sup>that this is the Son of God.

35 ¶ Again, the next day after, John stood, and <sup>u</sup>two of his disciples;<sup>7</sup>

36 And looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, <sup>v</sup>Behold the Lamb of God!

37 And <sup>w</sup>the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus.

38 Then Jesus turned, and saw them following, and saith unto them, <sup>y</sup>What seek ye? They said unto him, Rabbi, (which is to say, being interpreted, Master,) where dwellest <sup>8</sup>thou?

39 He saith unto them, <sup>z</sup>Come and see. They came and saw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day: for it was about the tenth hour.<sup>9</sup>

40 One of the two which heard John speaking, and followed him, was <sup>a</sup>Andrew, Simon Peter's brother.

41 He first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the <sup>b</sup>Messias, which is, being interpreted, the Christ.<sup>1</sup>

42 And he brought him to Jesus. And when Jesus beheld him, he said, Thou art Simon the son of Jona: thou shalt be called Cephas, which is, by interpretation, A stone.<sup>2</sup>

43 ¶ The day following, Jesus would go forth into Galilee, and <sup>c</sup>findeth Philip, and saith unto him, <sup>d</sup>Follow me.

44 Now Philip was of <sup>e</sup>Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter.

45 Philip findeth Nathanael,<sup>3</sup> and saith unto him, We have found him of whom <sup>f</sup>Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, <sup>g</sup>Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph.

46 And Nathanael<sup>4</sup> said unto him, <sup>h</sup>Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth?<sup>5</sup> Philip saith unto him, <sup>i</sup>Come and see.

47 Jesus saw Nathanael coming to him, and saith of him, Behold <sup>k</sup>an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile!

48 Nathanael saith unto him, Whence knowest

CHAPTER II.

1 Christ turneth water into wine, 12 departeth into Capernaum, and to Jerusalem, 14 where he purgeth the temple of buyers and sellers. 19 He foretelleth his death and resurrection. 23 Many believed because of his miracles, but he would not trust himself with them.

AND the <sup>a</sup>third day there was a marriage in Cana<sup>b</sup> of Galilee; and the mother of Jesus was there:<sup>1</sup>

2 And <sup>c</sup>both Jesus was called, and his disciples, to the marriage.

3 And <sup>d</sup>when they wanted wine,<sup>2</sup> the mother of Jesus saith unto him, <sup>e</sup>They have no wine.

4 Jesus saith unto her, <sup>f</sup>Woman,<sup>3</sup> what<sup>h</sup> have I to do with thee? <sup>i</sup>mine hour is not yet come.

5 His mother saith unto the servants, <sup>j</sup>Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it.

6 And there were set there six water-pots of stone, <sup>k</sup>after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins<sup>4</sup> apiece.

7 Jesus saith unto them, Fill the water-pots with water. And they filled them up to the brim.

8 And he saith unto them, <sup>l</sup>Draw out now, and bear unto the <sup>m</sup>governor of the feast. And they bare it.

9 When the ruler<sup>5</sup> of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was: (but the <sup>n</sup>servants which drew the water knew;) the governor of the feast called the bridegroom,

11 This<sup>r</sup> beginning of miracles<sup>6</sup> did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory; and his disciples <sup>s</sup>believed on him.<sup>7</sup>

12 ¶ After this he went down to <sup>t</sup>Capernaum,<sup>8</sup> he, and <sup>u</sup>his mother, and his <sup>v</sup>brethren, and his disciples: and they continued there not many days.

13 ¶ And the Jews' passover<sup>v</sup> was at hand, and <sup>w</sup>Jesus went up to Jerusalem,<sup>1</sup>

the bias of their will and affections, and corruption of their practice, that they do not naturally understand, but shut their eyes against, hate, and oppose these discoveries. 6-8. John the Baptist was eminently qualified, and divinely appointed, as the forerunner of his personal appearance, to point him forth as the glorious Sun of Righteousness rising among men, that persons of all sorts, Jews and Gentiles, might believe on him for life and salvation. 9-13. And indeed he, in opposition to the false lights of heathen philosophy, the corrupted and faint typical light of the Jews, and in distinction from John the Baptist and the prophets and apostles, is the original fountain of light from which all natural and divine knowledge is communicated to men in every period of time. By his upholding and governing providence, and by his dispensations of light and grace, he has all along been present in the world, which he created; and yet neither his manifesta-

CANA OF GALILEE—THE PLACE OF THE FIRST MIRACLE. [JOHN, ii:1.]—"And the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee: and the mother of Jesus was there."—John, ii:1. Five miles from Nazareth and quietly nestling in the midst of olive and fig trees, is Cana of Galilee, accurately photographed as above. There are about two hundred families here. There is a Greek church, the dome of which you see in the picture, in which it is claimed are the water-pots which contained the water Christ turned into wine, and which was obtained from the spring shown in the foreground. These vessels are preserved with great care because of their historic and religious significance. This village, like many others in Palestine, would have passed from the memory of the human race but for the first miracle of Christ performed there.

OUR CAMP—KHAN JUBB YUSEF. [JOHN, ii: 12.]—"After this he went down to Capernaum, he and his mother, and his brethren and his disciples, and they continued there not many days." The above picture was taken on May 9th, 1894. The artist and the writer left Capernaum about twelve o'clock, noon, and reached this place about half past two. We passed over between Capernaum and Khan Jubb Yusef, the roughest road, perhaps, on earth. Our dragoman said it was called the devil's back-bone.

Yet it is the old caravan road from Egypt to Damascus, and has been traveled in all ages. On the last ridge, just before we reach Khan Jubb Yusef, we had our last glimpse of the Sea of Galilee and our first full view of Mount Hermon. Khan Jubb Yusef means the Inn of Joseph's Well, for there is a tradition among the Mohammedans that here Joseph's brethren threw him into the well. There is no doubt but that our Savior often retired into these wild and lonely regions for meditation and prayer.

14 And <sup>9</sup>found in the temple those that sold oxen<sup>2</sup> and sheep and doves, and the changers of money sitting:

15 And <sup>a</sup>when he had made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables;

16 And said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence; <sup>a</sup>make not my Father's house an house of merchandise.

17 And his disciples remembered that it was written, <sup>b</sup>The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up.

18 ¶ Then answered the Jews and said unto him, <sup>c</sup>What sign showest thou unto us, seeing that thou doest these things?

19 Jesus answered and said unto them, Destroy<sup>3</sup> this temple, and in three days I will raise it up.

20 Then said the Jews, Forty and six<sup>4</sup> years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days?

tions of himself, in providence or revelation, have been duly discerned or improved; and when, in the fulness of time, he manifested himself in human nature, preaching the gospel, and working miracles among the Jews his peculiar people, most of them wilfully rejected him, and refused to acknowledge him as their Creator and Saviour. But to all such, whether Jews or Gentiles, as heartily received him by faith as their Redeemer, Prophet, Priest, and King, he bestowed the dignified right and privilege of being the real children of God; all of whom, without any influence of natural descent, ceremonial law, or any external aid, seek a supernatural habit or principle of grace which, exercised in them, disposes them to every good word and work. 14, 16-18. And in order to effect these grand designs of our redemption, the eternal Son of God assumed our nature, in its debased appearances, into a personal union with himself; and therein, in all his fulness of Godhead, for a season dwelt among us men, particularly us disciples, as JEHOVAH did in the cloud of glory which covered the mercy-seat, full of infinite grace and kindness to men, and of all necessary blessings, to be freely communicated to them. All the laws, promises, types, and prophecies were fulfilled in him; and we, in his doctrine, miracles, transfiguration, resurrection, and ascension, by faith steadfastly considered and admired these glorious perfections, becoming him as one with, and in an inconceivable and unparalleled manner begotten by, his eternal Father; and out of his fulness of divine perfections and communicative blessings, who is infinitely preferable to John the Baptist, all of us believers, great and small, have, do, and shall receive all spiritual blessings, multiplied one upon another, according to our capacities and wants, and answerable, in nature and kind, to our faith in Jesus Christ.—Far superior to Moses, who delivered the laws of God to the Jews in a manner suited to their circumstances, in a ministration of condemnation, and in obscure types, which could not make the worshippers perfect, Jesus has brought in the richest and plainest discoveries of God's love and grace, in which all the ancient types and predictions have their full accomplishment. And being himself the beloved and only begotten Son of God, intimately acquainted with all his excellencies and purposes of grace, he alone was fit for this work, and he hath now manifested these things to men in such a manner as no other was able to do.

Ver. 13. 'Not of bloods.' Neither by right of natural descent from Abraham, nor any of the tribes.—Nor of the will of the flesh, which is simply to seek present pleasure and escape present pain, as is manifest in all the lower and mere animal natures.—Nor of the will of man, who, being compounded of flesh and spirit, can, under the influence of natural intellect, make many sacrifices of present pleasure, and endure many pains, from a calculating regard to futurity.—But of God, who, by his Holy Spirit, can alone renew man 'after the image of him that created him,' Ep. 4. 24; Col. 3. 10. C.

Ver. 16. Grace for grace. There being a fulness of grace in Christ, ver. 14, believers receive a measure of every form of grace in him. It may be illustrated by a garden in which there

CHAPTER III.

1 Christ teacheth Nicodemus the necessity of regeneration. 14 Of faith in his death. 16 The great love of God towards the world. 18 Condemnation for unbelief. 23 The baptism, witness, and doctrine of John concerning Christ.

THERE was<sup>a</sup> a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews:

2 The same came to Jesus by night,<sup>1</sup> and said unto him, <sup>2</sup>Rabbi, <sup>b</sup>we know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do and follow him. It is habitual not transient fellowship with him that will supply the need and satisfy the desires of real believers. Acquaintance with him is the best answer to all prejudices and objections against him. They who find him cannot but exult in their acquisition. And great is the honour to have his attestation of our secret devotion and universal integrity.—Our views of his glory are but beginning and will be for ever on the advance. And angels and men will eternally behold, and increasingly admire and serve him, in his kingdom above.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1. The third day from that on which Jesus had departed from Bethany 'beyond Jordan,' not Bethany near Jerusalem (so called according to high authority of MSS.), but called Bethabara, ch. 1. 28 of the received text. There is no difficulty in concluding that both names may have been given to the same town. C.

Ver. 9. Ruler of the feast. Some think the chief guest; others, the chief domestic who, in either capacity, did not sit at table, but attended to the supply of the others. That an evidently poor family had not any chief domestic to preside, appears probable: the ruler was therefore a friend, as his familiarity with the bridegroom seems to imply, one part of whose duty was to taste the wine, and then send it to the guests. C.

Ver. 15. He drove them all—that is, the dealers, whom he expelled merely by authoritative injunction, ver. 16, the cattle only he would drive with the scourge. These dealers, being very unpopular because of their extortions, and conscious that they were profaning the temple and violating the law, and seeing Jesus surrounded by so many zealous followers, yield to an authority which otherwise their avarice and self-interest would have prompted them to resist. It is, moreover, not improbable that there was something so commanding in our Lord's manner, and in his character for working miracles, which must by this time have become public, that the most reluctant felt compelled to yield implicit obedience.—Note. It is matter of question whether our Lord cleansed the temple once or twice. Matthew (ch. 21. 12) and Mark (ch. 11. 15) certainly record such a cleansing near the end of his ministry, which same act some think John has also recorded, without reference to order of time. The narratives, however, are accompanied by such notes of difference as seem clearly to indicate two distinct cleansings—the one at the opening, the other at the close of our Lord's ministry. See note on ver. 20. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Happy are those weddings which are directed by Christ's law, graced with his presence, and ratified by his blessing! With innocent pleasures friends may feast together, if they act as under his eye. Religion requires us not to be unsocial, but to rejoice with them that rejoice. In the very height of earthly comforts there is indeed something still wanting. But there are no wants in which Christ cannot supply us. And if we wish to receive his blessings, we must not prescribe to him, but follow his directions. Nor need we be discouraged by rebukes and delays; his mercies come soon enough if they come large and sweet in the end. And the more we see of his glory, the more firmly shall we believe in him, and desire to be with him. Jesus makes but a short stay where he is signally contemned. And the most heaven-daring corruptions are introduced into churches by the love of filthy lucre. But wisely Jesus manifests his glory, vindicates the honour and maintains the purity of are many plants, and a barren waste into which there is made out of it a complete transplantation, so that they, at last, answer to each other, plant for plant. C.

Ver. 18. No man hath seen God at any time. God being infinite in being and perfections, can never be perfectly seen by any finite creature. For though the Shekinah, or other visible manifestation of his presence, has been or may be seen, still that manifestation is not God.—Declared him. Educated him, brought him out to the eye of the spirit in all his perfections, purposes, promises, and works of grace, providence, and final judgment. C.

Ver. 21. John replies in the sense intended by the questioner, and denies that he is Elias in resurrection flesh. When our Lord affirms that John was Elias, Mat. 11. 14, he speaks in the sense of Malachi (ch. 4. 5), of his being in the 'spirit and power of Elias,' 'that prophet' foretold by Moses, De. 18. 15. It cannot be translated 'a prophet,' for John was even more than a prophet, Mat. 11. 11. C.

Ver. 25. The Jews were accustomed to baptize heathen proselytes, but never without an order from the Sanhedrim, or great civil and ecclesiastical council, or before three magistrates or doctors of the law; they therefore very naturally feel jealous of John, who not only baptized without their authority, but baptized Jews themselves, contrary to the practice of the Pharisees. C.

Ver. 29. Behold the Lamb. The lamb was the first sacrifice on record, Ge. 4. 4; a lamb was also the daily sacrifice in the temple. It therefore furnished an appropriate title for him who came 'to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself,' He. 9. 26.—Take away the sin of the world. Rather, 'who is taking away,' by first bearing our sins in his own body, and finally to the cross, 1 Pe. 2. 24, whereby he finished the transgression, made an end of sins, and brought in everlasting righteousness, Da. 9. 24. 'The world' of Jew and Gentile, wherein the sacrifice of Christ differed from those of the law, which were appointed exclusively for the Jews. C.

Ver. 47. Behold an Israelite indeed. Jacob obtained the name of Israel after wrestling in prayer with the Angel of the Covenant, Ge. 32. 24, 28; and it seems most probable that Nathanael, when 'under the fig-tree,' ver. 48, had been similarly engaged.—In whom is no guile, no deceit in purpose or word, grace having already so purified his heart. C.

Ver. 51. The allusion seems evidently to the ladder of Jacob's vision, Ge. 28. 12, and the meaning, that Christ is the only medium of communication between earth and heaven.—Angels ascending—bearing the spirits of departed believers, Lu. 16. 23.—Descending—to 'minister to the heirs of salvation,' He. 1. 14. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Infinite and divine are the glories of our Mediator! He is the eternal God, equal with his Father; he is the Creator of all things, and the original source of all light, life, and honour, in the world.—Marvellous is his person as God-man, and full of grace and truth for our supply! His divine nature puts the most wonderful dignity upon his condescension, and on his offering himself a sacrifice to pardon our sins. And his character and mission are gloriously attested by apostles, by John the Baptist, and by his Father and blessed Spirit. Alas! that any, especially such as enjoy his oracles and favours, should remain ignorant or obstinate rejecters of him! But happy are they whom he persuades by his grace, adopts into his family, conforms unto his image, supplies with his light and life, humbles by his influence, informs by his Spirit, instructs by his visits, and honours in his service. And the more honour God puts upon men, the more humble they ought to be. The more they know of Christ and his work, the more they ought to extol him, that others, particularly their relations, may seek these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him.

3 Jesus answered and said unto him, <sup>c</sup>Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man <sup>a</sup>be born again,<sup>3</sup> he cannot see the kingdom of God.<sup>4</sup>

4 Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?

5 Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man <sup>e</sup>be born of water, and of the Spirit, he <sup>g</sup>cannot enter <sup>h</sup>into the kingdom of God.

6 That<sup>i</sup> which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit.

7 Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again.<sup>5</sup>

8 The wind<sup>d</sup> bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound<sup>7</sup> thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit.

9 Nicodemus answered and said unto him, How<sup>j</sup> can these things be?

10 Jesus answered and said unto him, <sup>k</sup>Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?

11 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, <sup>l</sup>We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and <sup>n</sup>ye receive not our witness.

13 And<sup>p</sup> no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven.<sup>8</sup>

14 ¶ And<sup>q</sup> as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up:

'All attempts to explain away the plain sense of this verse are futile and ridiculous. The Son of man, the Lord Jesus, the Word made flesh, was in, came down from, heaven, and was in heaven (heaven about him, heaven dwelling on earth, ch. 1, 52) while here, and ascended up into heaven when he left this earth; and by all these proofs, speaking in the prophetic language of accomplished redemption, does the Lord establish, that he alone can speak of heavenly things to men, or convey the blessing of the new birth to them.—P.

lieveth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

17 For<sup>u</sup> God sent not his Son into the world to condemn<sup>1</sup> the world; but that the world through him might be saved.

18 ¶ He<sup>v</sup> that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God.

19 And<sup>w</sup> this is the condemnation,<sup>2</sup> that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil.

20 For<sup>y</sup> every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved.<sup>3</sup> divine ordinances, without injuring civil property.—He knows what is in man, and can overawe the spirits of his most powerful and presumptuous enemies. And he had a sovereign power over his own natural life, as God equal with his Father. Alas! how ill understood, much hated, or but feignedly believed, are his words of truth! Corrupt hearts little relish reforming authority. Even believers slowly comprehend the nature of Christ's kingdom. And sometimes it is not till long after they are heard that divine truths are remembered, understood, and believed. There is great need to avoid trusting in men, and to be careful whom we take for our friends. And studiously should we beware of hypocrisy, as Jesus hath an exact knowledge of our hearts.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 3, 5, 6, 8. I, who am truth itself, solemnly assure you that be a man's moral attainments, religious advantages, or external privileges what they will, he can by no means be a true member of the gospel church, or admitted into the heavenly state, except his heart and life be thoroughly changed in their principles, courses, and ends, and there be a new vital principle of holiness formed in him by the divine influence of the Holy Ghost. Whoever is born of sinful parents, though it were ever so often, must be still sinful, and so unfit for fellowship with God. But whoever has by choosing Christ a principle of grace and holiness, working by the Holy Ghost, in all the powers of his soul, and acts accordingly, is made meet for the enjoyments and duties of the gospel state, and for the inheritance of the saints in light.—Nor is it any wonder that you cannot conceive how the Holy Ghost enlightens, quickens, and sanctifies the souls of men, when you cannot even account for the causes and motions of the wind. 11-13. My forerunner and the prophets, and especially I, my Father, and the blessed Spirit, speak and attest what we understand and know to be certainly true; but, through blindness and prejudice, ye Jews neither understand, believe, nor embrace our doctrine. If therefore you do not understand nor believe the nature or necessity of that work of grace which must be experienced on earth in order to salvation, when thus familiarly illustrated to you from earthly similitudes, how could you understand or believe my declarations of the more sublime mysteries of the gospel, relative to the dignity of my person and office, the design of my works, the spiritual nature of my kingdom, and the blessedness of the future state, which no mere man can comprehend, or fully declare to others, but only the Messiah who came from heaven, and who even now is still there, in respect of his divine nature? 14-17. And yet that divine person the Messiah must be put to an ignominious death, in order to his bringing about the salvation of sinners; for as Moses lifted up the brazen serpent on a pole in the wilderness, as God's ordinance for effectually healing all the Israelites who had been mortally bitten by the fiery serpents, and looked on it for a cure, so the Messiah, who appears in the likeness of sinful flesh, though holy, harmless, and undefiled, must be lifted up on the cross, and afterwards exalted in heaven, and exhibited as God's ordinance in the gospel, for sinners to look to, by faith, for salvation; that every one, of whatever rank, degree, or nation he be, who, under an affecting sense of his own sinfulness and obnoxiousness to divine wrath, shall, according to God's appointment, look to and trust in him for salvation, may be delivered from all sin and misery, and be made a partaker of grace here and glory hereafter, however weak his faith be, or great or many his sins have been. For God, who delights in mercy, looking with compassion on the sinful and miserable state of mankind, conceived such an amazing and unparalleled design of mercy and love towards the whole of them, both Jews and likewise Gentiles, that he freely gave his only begotten to be their Mediator and atoning sacrifice, that whoeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice: <sup>o</sup>this my joy therefore is fulfilled.

30 He<sup>p</sup> must increase, but I must decrease.

31 He<sup>a</sup> that cometh from above is above all: he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth: he that cometh from heaven is above all.

32 And<sup>r</sup> what he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth; <sup>a</sup>and no man receiveth his testimony.<sup>8</sup>

33 He that hath received his testimony <sup>hath</sup> set to his seal that God is true.

34 For<sup>u</sup> he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: <sup>v</sup>for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him.

35 The<sup>r</sup> Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.

36 He<sup>y</sup> that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; <sup>z</sup>but the wrath of God abideth on him.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Christ talketh with a woman of Samaria, and revealeth himself unto her. 27 His disciples marvel. 31 He declareth to them his zeal for God's glory. 39 Many Samaritans believe on him. 43 He departeth into Galilee, and healeth the ruler's son that lay sick at Capernaum.

WHEN therefore <sup>a</sup>the Lord knew how the Pharisees <sup>b</sup>had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John,

2 (Though Jesus himself <sup>c</sup>baptized not, but his disciples,)

3 He<sup>d</sup> left Judea,<sup>1</sup> and departed again into Galilee.

4 And<sup>e</sup> he must needs go through <sup>2</sup>Samaria.

5 Then cometh he to a city of Samaria, which sooner receives him as God's free gift offered in the gospel, and depends on him for salvation, might not perish in his sins, however great or many, but obtain an everlasting life of holiness and happiness. For God sent not his Son into the world to pass and to execute a sentence of condemnation upon all others beside you Jews, as many of you think, but that persons of all nations may be really saved from sin and misery, and blessed with everlasting holiness and happiness. 18-21. And every one, Jew or Gentile, who believes on Christ, as freely offered in the gospel, is freed from the condemning sentence of God's law; but whosoever rejects or neglects him remains under the curse; yea, his guilt is increased, and his sentence of condemnation fixed and extended, through his rejecting the only Saviour and salvation by unbelief. And this will peculiarly aggravate the sin and misery of many, that, when blessed with the clearest light of the glorious gospel, they, both Jews and Gentiles, through attachment to their own corrupt courses, will prefer their vain traditions, superstitious and idolatrous notions and worship, to it. For every one that is resolved to adhere to his sins heartily hates the truths of divine revelation, which oppose and condemn them, stifles convictions, and shuns the light of that knowledge which presents his darling corruptions in their shameful, hideous, and dangerous forms; but an upright saint, who practises whatever divine truths he knows, is sincerely willing to be tried to the utmost, and to know the whole of the divine will, that his whole conduct, being regulated thereby, may evidently appear the effect of God's regenerating power, and the fruit of vital union and communion with him, and may tend to his glory. 27-30. Both Jesus and myself have our whole commission and success from God; nor can any receive our plain instructions without being enlightened and enabled by God. I appeal to you that I openly declared I was not the Christ, but only his forerunner, to prepare the nation for the manifestation of himself. As his friend, I have laboured to gain sinners to him, the glorious Bridegroom of his church; and I exceedingly rejoice to hear and see them following after and cleaving to him, whose property they are. For it is necessary that the manifestations of his glory, and the number of his disciples, should so continue and increase, that there will be no more use for me as his forerunner. 31-34. I, and every one of the ancient prophets, are but earthly in our origin and frame, and cannot of ourselves speak of divine things but in a weak, gross, and earthly manner; but he, being the Lord from heaven, and endowed with the Holy Ghost above measure, understands the whole mind of God, and speaks of heavenly things as one fully acquainted with them. And yet, alas! how few heartily believe and receive his instructions! but every one who believes them solemnly acknowledges him to be the Messiah, in whose person and work all the promises of God are, or will certainly be, fulfilled to the praise of his love. 35, 36. Nay, such is the superlative love of the Father to this his only begotten Son, who freely undertook to be our Mediator, that he has committed to his management all things relating to the kingdoms of providence, grace and glory, that he may judge and subdue the world, and distribute blessings among all people. Whosoever therefore receives his doctrine, and believes on him as the Son of God and Saviour of sinners, hath already in himself the beginnings, securities, and foretastes of eternal life, which may certainly issue in the complete enjoyment of it; and whosoever wilfully and finally rejects him lies under the most awfully righteous justice of God, which shall certainly be completed fully to the uttermost, and for ever.

Ver. 2. This case of Nicodemus is recorded chiefly for the exposition of the new birth from above; but also for the encouragement of timid believers who, in fear of men's ridicule or displeasure, have not obtained full courage to follow conscience, and openly avow their profession of truth and godliness. But 'him that was weak in the faith' Christ received without reproach, and treated with tenderness; let 'them that are strong' go and do so likewise. C.

Ver. 5. Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit. If this be spoken of what Bloomfield, Valpy, and others call 'baptismal regeneration,' then what availed the promise to the penitent thief? and what is the condition of myriads of the children of believers dying in infancy who were never baptized? Should not the passage rather be translated, 'Except a man be born of water, even of the Spirit,' of which water was the scriptural emblem? see Is. 44.3; Eze. 36.25-37. And this translation is in perfect accordance with that of many passages exactly similar in construction—such as 1 Co. 15.24; 2 Co. 1.3; Ep. 5.5; Tit. 2.13; 1 Ju. 4.9. See Middleton on Gr. Art. ch. ii. pp. 83, 84; ch. iii. p. 93. This translation seems absolutely confirmed by our Lord's immediate reference of this new birth (see ver. 6), not to water at all, but entirely to the Spirit. See Mat. 3.11, where 'water' and 'fire,' as here 'water' and 'Spirit,' denote one thing. C.

Ver. 12. Earthly things. Things that have earthly similitudes, and that take place visibly on the earth.—Heavenly things. These are: (1) The incarnation and mission of the Son, ver. 13. (2) The crucifixion, and salvation by faith, ver. 14, 15. (3) The eternal and gratuitous love of God, &c., ver. 16. (4) The condemnation of unbelievers, ver. 19. C.

Ver. 13. No man hath ascended up to heaven. Moses merely ascended to the top of Sinai—Elijah was taken up—but he that 'came down' is the Word that 'was God,' who 'became flesh' (ch. 1.14), and 'dwelt among us' as 'Son of man.'—Which is, rather, 'who is being, in heaven': whose proper dwelling-place is heaven, in 'the glory he had with the Father before the world was.' C.

Ver. 23. Enon. A town on the west of Jordan, fifty-four miles north-east of Jerusalem, and situated in the district of Samaria. No vestige of its ruins is now to be found. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The miracles of Christ were manifestly divine, and his doctrines plain and important. He was ready to cure the most inexcusable ignorance, and to instruct by night such as were ashamed to own him by day. Infinitely important is the doctrine and experience of the Spirit's gracious implantation of new habits or principles of holiness in our nature, when we choose Christ as our Savior. Yet, alas! how many ministers and others are totally ignorant of it, and prejudiced against it! And because their carnal mind cannot comprehend how or why the Spirit works on the heart; how the Saviour can be at once God and man, in heaven and on earth; or how his being crucified and offered in the gospel, and received by faith, heals and saves sinners, they condemn and deny the same! But amazing is the love of God in setting up his only begotten Son as his ordinance for the salvation of sinners, even the chief, Gentiles as well as Jews. And dreadfully criminal and dangerous is that unbelief which rejects the testimony and offer of God; which hates his glory and detests his truth, as a disturber of indwelling lusts. Nothing can save the man who perseveres in his unbelief. And nothing can damn the soul which by faith credits God's testimony concerning Christ, and receives him as a divine and well-qualified Saviour. It is absurd for professors to be more concerned about external performances of religion than about the real work of grace in their heart. And it is honourable for all, and especially ministers, to view all their gifts and graces as coming from God, and to be content to be debased to the very lowest that Jesus Christ may be exalted, answerably to his Father's love to him, and the authority which he hath given him.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 10, 14. Christ himself, in all his offices, work, and fulness, is God's gift granted freely to sinners; and the water which he gives is the Holy Ghost, in his person, operation, graces, and comforts, which solidly satisfies the soul, weans it from the cares of this world, prevents its perdition, and gradually prepares for, and seek to bring, the eternal and inexpressible holiness and happiness of the heavenly state. 35-38. The coming of yonder crowds of Samaritans to hear and believe on me, betokens the near approach of the gospel dispensation, in which multitudes, both Jews and Gentiles, will be converted to me;—as instruments in which ye shall be honourably owned and supported, and at last amply rewarded, in their and your own eternal salvation;—and shall, together with John Baptist and the ancient prophets, who sowed the good seed of the Word, rejoice in your success;—and being sent by me to preach the gospel in all the world, and having the advantage of all my labours, as also that of the preceding prophets, ye shall perfect that blessed work, which we only began, in the conversion and eternal salvation of men.

Ver. 11. Nothing to draw with. Travellers in the East frequently carry a leathern bucket, with which they draw from public wells by means of the rope and wheel.—The well is deep. Maundrell estimates the depth of the well called Jacob's at thirty-five yards, with five yards depth of water in the bottom. It is cut in the solid rock—what kind is not mentioned—and if it really be the well which Jacob dug, which can scarcely be doubted, it affords an interesting view of the engineering skill, perseverance, and expenditure of those ancient times. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Those who hate the gospel will always be exasperated at its success. And if duty do not require us to stand, it is best to avoid their resentment by flight. Alas, how our sins pained our Redeemer, hunted him to and fro as a vagabond, fatigued him with travel, pinched him with hunger and thirst, exposed him to insult, and the want even of a draught of water! But cheerfully he laboured in seeking and saving that which was lost. Freely was he given by God. Abundant was his fulness of the Spirit, of grace, and every other permanent blessing: and he is earnestly intent on the full bestowal of them! And yet how are his blessings refused, even by such as infinitely need them, and for whom they are prepared! But so pungent are his convictions, so plain his instructions, so spiritual his exhibitions of God and his worship, so attracting his discoveries of himself and his Spirit, that even a heart hardened in whoredom and prejudice could not withstand them. And yet, alas, how often is the believer's sensible fellowship with Christ interrupted when at the very sweetest! A remarkable renovation of heart produces a deep concern for the

JACOB'S WELL, WHERE JESUS TALKED WITH THE WOMAN OF SAMARIA. [JOHN, iv: 6.]—There has never been the slightest doubt in the minds of all the authorities as to the identity of Jacob's Well. Looking upon this picture we may know that we are looking at the representation of a spot where the Lord Jesus actually sat. Here he conversed with the woman of Samaria while the disciples were gone into the neighboring city to buy meat. The broken columns you see are parts of an old church probably built here in the time of the Crusaders. This is the parcel of ground which Jacob purchased and gave to his son Joseph. The well is now seventy-five feet six inches deep, and seven feet six inches in breadth. The diameter of the opening is seventeen and a half feet. Here Christ gave to the world that marvelous lesson that God was a spirit and sought such to worship him as worshiped him in spirit and in truth.

SYCHAR. [JOHN, iv:5.]—While the Savior conversed with the woman of Samaria at Jacob's well, the disciples went into the City of Sychar to buy meat for their mid-day meal. The above photograph locates the place to which they went. It was about twelve o'clock when the Savior and the disciples reached Jacob's well on their northward journey. Sychar is about two miles from Jacob's well, and in the time of our Savior was a place of importance. It is only a ruined and wretched village now and would be the last place on earth a modern tourist would expect to find anything to eat. There is not even a store in town now where anything is offered for sale. The few people now here live by farming. Joseph's tomb is between Sychar and Jacob's Well, and this whole region is historic of biblical event.

is called Sychar, near <sup>a</sup>to the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to his son Joseph.<sup>3</sup>

6 Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus therefore, being <sup>b</sup>wearied with his journey, sat thus on the well: and it was about the sixth hour.<sup>4</sup>

7 There cometh a woman of Samaria<sup>5</sup> to draw water: Jesus saith unto her, Give me to drink.

8 (For his disciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat.)

9 Then saith the woman of Samaria unto him, How is it that thou being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? for<sup>i</sup> the Jews have no dealings<sup>6</sup> with the Samaritans.

10 Jesus answered and said unto her, If thou knewest <sup>j</sup>the gift of God,<sup>7</sup> and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee <sup>k</sup>living water.

11 The woman saith unto him, Sir, <sup>l</sup>thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep: from whence then hast thou that living water?

12 Art<sup>n</sup> thou greater than our<sup>s</sup> father Jacob, which gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle?

13 Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water <sup>o</sup>shall thirst again:

14 But<sup>p</sup> whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life.

15 The woman saith unto him, <sup>q</sup>Sir, Give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Go, call thy husband, and come hither.

17 The woman answered and said, I have no husband. Jesus said unto her, Thou hast well said, I have no husband:

18 For thou hast had five husbands;<sup>9</sup> and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband: in that saidst thou truly.<sup>1</sup>

19 The woman saith unto him, Sir, I perceive that thou art <sup>r</sup>a prophet.

20 Our<sup>2</sup> fathers worshipped in this mountain; and ye say, that in <sup>s</sup>Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship.<sup>3</sup>

21 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, <sup>t</sup>when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father.

22 Ye<sup>u</sup> worship ye know not what: we <sup>v</sup>know what we worship: for salvation is of the Jews.

<sup>3</sup> The place where our Lord rested is very distinctly indicated. 'Jacob's well' still exists in the mouth of the valley which leads up between Ebal and Gerizim, to Neapolis or Shechem. Sychar was probably a name of reproach given to Shechem, derived from a Hebrew word which signifies 'falsehood.' The main road from Jerusalem to Galilee runs close to the well, across the mouth of the valley. Our Lord, wearied with the journey, sat down to rest on the large stone which covered the well's mouth, while the disciples went up the valley to the town to buy bread.—P.

Gentiles. Happy is it when the labours of one generation of ministers prepare remarkable fruitfulness for their successors. And greatly efficacious is the gospel when preached and heard as indeed the Word of Christ.

It often does most good where it could have been least expected; and helps the bitterest enemies cordially to apply Jesus as their own Saviour. But aggravated is their wickedness who misimprove the best opportu-

HORSE-SHOING IN TIBERIAS—ON THE SEA OF GALILEE. [JOHN, iv: 43.]—"Now after two days he departed thence and went into Galilee." Tiberias is a city of Galilee, and on the Sea of Galilee where Christ performed so many miracles and uttered so many of His wonderful words. During the time of Herod, Roman luxury was introduced into Northern Palestine from the Sea of Galilee to Casarea Philippi. So there are in Tiberias to-day many evidences of the fact that the Romans were here. Herod Antipas was the founder of Tiberias. It is said that he preferred the seaside to any other place of residence, and here surrounded the palace which he built with dwellings for his court, with amphitheatres, bath houses and temples. We give a picture of a horse-shoeing scene, taken in Tiberias on May 5th, 1894. The ground is so completely covered with rocks in Palestine that it is necessary to keep horses shod all the time.

PILLARS OF AHAB, SAMARIA. [JOHN, v: 43.]—In going from Jacob's Well at Shechem into Galilee, Christ would pass northward by Samaria, which is about seven miles from Shechem. There is no good reason why the columns in this picture should be called the "Pillars of Ahab," only on the account that Samaria was for a long time the capital of Ahab. These columns were really placed here by Herod in honor of Augustus, and in the days of our Savior this was doubtless a very important city. It is upon an eligible and beautiful location upon a prominence round as a sugar loaf, from the top of which one gets a sight of the great Jezreel plains and the Mediterranean Sea in the distance. The hill Samaria, upon which the city once stood, is very fertile, and is now cultivated in wheat. The day upon which this picture was taken, our dragoon led us around the city, and the wheat was so high as to be as tall in some places as the tops of our heads while we were upon our horses.

heard him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world.

43 ¶ Now<sup>a</sup> after two days he departed thence, and<sup>b</sup> went into Galilee.

44 For Jesus himself testified, that a prophet hath no honour in his own country.<sup>2</sup>

45 Then<sup>c</sup> when he was come into Galilee, the Galileans received him, having seen all the things that he did at Jerusalem at the feast: for they also went unto the feast.

46 So Jesus came again into Caná of Galilee, where he made the water wine. And there was a certain nobleman,<sup>3</sup> whose son was sick at Capernaum.

47 When he heard that Jesus was come out of Judea into Galilee, he went unto him, and besought<sup>c</sup> him that he would come down, and heal his son: for he was at the point of death.

48 Then said Jesus unto him, Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe.

49 The nobleman saith unto him, Sir, come down ere my child die.

50 Jesus saith unto him, Go thy way; thy son liveth. And the man believed the word that Jesus had spoken unto him, and he went his way.

51 And as he was now going down, his

AFTER this<sup>a</sup> there was a feast of the Jews; and Jesus went up to Jerusalem.

2 Now there is at Jerusalem by the sheep-market,<sup>2</sup> a pool,<sup>3</sup> which is called in the Hebrew tongue Bethesda,<sup>4</sup> having five porches.

3 In these lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, waiting for the moving of the water.<sup>5</sup>

4 For an angel went down at a certain season into the pool, and troubled the water: whosoever<sup>6</sup> then first after the troubling of the nities. Happy are those troubles which graciously direct sinners to him and his salvation; and when staggerings of heart issue in the firmness of faith. Happy is it when heads of families, great and small, are given to fervent prayer, and deeply concerned for the real and eternal life of children and servants; and when new favours from Christ, and a comparison of spiritual experiences, confirm men's faith; and especially when whole families are converted by his grace!

CHAPTER V. Ver. 17-23. As my Father, who instituted the Sabbath, continually performs his providential works on that as well as on other days, so I, who am his only begotten Son, partaking of the same nature and perfections, must be allowed to work along with him, as is meet.—My union with him, in nature, operation, and design, is such, that I can do nothing separately from him, but do always act in the same work, and in the same manner, and with the same divine power and authority as he does. And such is our union, will, and affection, that nothing of his counsels or operations is ever hid from me: yea, in co-operation with him, I will perform works still greater than the healing a lame man, that, if you will continue obstinate in your unbelief, ye may at least be astonished and confounded thereat. And as he at pleasure can restore the dead to life, so I, with equal power, can not only restore to natural life whoever I please, but bestow upon all who will receive me as their Savior eternal life, and give them power to resist evil. For the Father hath not reserved for himself, nor doth he exercise immediately by himself, the management of the present concerns of providence, or the future judgment of the world, but has intrusted the same to his incarnate Son; that, instead of being offended at his deep humiliation, men might be induced, by his bearing and executing this high commission, to pay the same religious worship and obedience to him as they are obliged to pay to the Father himself: and whoever neglects to honour him in this manner, is held a neglecter of the honour of the Father, who has authorized and is represented by him. 24-30. I, who am truth itself, solemnly assure you, that whosoever heartily receives my doctrine, relative to my person and office, and believes on my Father, who has constituted me Mediator, has a full title to, and the beginnings and earnest of, eternal life, and is completely translated from under the curse and condemnation of the law into a state of justification of life: and that the time is at hand when not only some, corporally dead, shall be restored to life by my word, but even they who are dead in trespasses and sins, will be regenerated and quickened to the obedience of faith, and live for ever: for as the Father has life essentially and necessarily in himself, and communicates life to every living creature, so he has constituted me, his essentially living Son, a quickening Spirit, full of life in myself as Mediator, and authorized me to communicate it to others. Nor need you think it strange that I say dead bodies and souls shall quickly be enlivened by my power; for, at the last day, the whole race of mankind shall by it be raised from the dead, and brought to my judgment-seat. The true saints, quickened by my Spirit dwelling in them, shall be adjudged to the full enjoyment of everlasting life; and they who died in their sins, raised by my power, shall receive a dreadful sentence of condemnation, to their utter and everlasting ruin.—But in all these things I neither do, nor can do, anything separately from my Father; for in all my administrations I proceed as one perfectly acquainted with his mind, and as his Messiah, instructed by him; and my whole management must necessarily be perfectly right, because I therein neither aim at nor pursue any private will of my own, different from, or opposite to, the will of my Father, but exactly discharge the commission which he hath given me in sending me into the world. 31-39. But I do not rest the matter upon my own mere testimony, as if that alone were sufficient: I appeal to that solemn testimony which John bare concerning me, and which ye cannot object against, since ye acknowledged him an eminent prophet, submitted to his baptism, and, for a time, appeared extremely fond of his instructions, till he offended you by his sharp reproofs and his attestations of my Messiahship. I mention his testimony, not as if it could establish my divine or mediatorial character, but only that I may reason with you upon your own principles, and omit nothing which may tend to your conviction and salvation.—For the miraculous and gracious works which I have performed, or will perform by my own power, are so great and good, as plainly to manifest me the Son of God and the promised Messiah. And the Father himself, in a manner which none of your nation ever before heard or saw, has, by a voice from heaven, attested me as his beloved Son, in whom he is well pleased. But it is evident, by your continued rejection of me, that neither his immediate declaration, nor the words of his prophets, make any lasting impression on you.—As ye profess to read and study the books of the Old Testament, as containing the true doctrine of eternal life, and as a mean of securing your eternal happiness, I charge you still more earnestly and impartially to search them, and observe what they teach: for they, in their types, promises, and prophecies, and the Holy Ghost by them, concur to represent me as the Son of God and the Saviour of the world. 40-47. But notwithstanding all this evidence, such is your pride, prejudice, carnality, and wilful obstinacy, that you will not apply to nor trust in me for pardon, peace, life, and salvation, in whom alone they are to be found. I neither need, have, nor seek human applause or external pomp and grandeur, but only aim at advancing the glory of God in the salvation of men. But I know that, notwithstanding all your high professions, ye are quite destitute of the love of God, and have the love of the world reigning in your heart. Hence, when I am come, authorized by JEHOVAH, and sufficiently attested to glorify him, to effect a spiritual salvation from sin and wrath, ye reject me, because I oppose your darling vices, and give you no ground to expect worldly riches, honour, power, or pleasures. But if any mere impostors should flatter you in your sins, and promise you temporal deliverances, wealth, and grandeur, ye will readily entertain and follow them, to your own destruction.—And, indeed, while your hearts are so full of carnal ambition of worldly honours and applause, and so regardless of the spiritual, substantial, and eternal honours which God alone bestows on his people, it is impossible that ye can believe on me, whose appearances are so mean and doctrines so self-denying. But though I charge not your faults upon you for your conviction, I came not to spy out, aggravate, or accuse you of your crimes to God, but to be a merciful Saviour and Advocate. Nor need I turn your accuser, when Moses, by whose law ye expect to be saved, by his writings sufficiently indicts and condemns you for your unbelief and other wickedness: and had ye believed his declarations, ye could not but have believed me, as all the types in his law, and the prophecies recorded by him, evidently point to and are fulfilled in me. But if ye will not be convinced by what he, for whom you profess so high a regard, hath said, it cannot be expected that ye will believe me, whom ye treat with contempt, and run down as an impostor.

VIEW OF JERUSALEM FROM BETHESDA. [JOHN, v: 2.]—"Now there is at Jerusalem by the sheep market a pool which is called in the Hebrew tongue Bethesda, having five porches." Jerusalem is interesting from all points of view, but, somehow the view of the Holy City takes on additional interest when we are looking at it from some point connected with our Savior. Perhaps the most suggestive view of Jerusalem is from the Mount of Olives, because looked over from this sacred height by our Lord so often. Bethesda is a very interesting place from which to contemplate the city of David, because here Christ healed an impotent man of an infirmity that had afflicted him for thirty-eight years. It was this miracle of Christ that provoked the wrath of his countrymen, because it was wrought on the Sabbath.

water stepped in, was made whole of whatsoever disease he had.

5 And a certain man was there, which had an infirmity <sup>a</sup>thirty and eight years.

6 When Jesus saw him lie, and <sup>k</sup>knew that he had been now a long time in that case, he saith unto him, <sup>w</sup>Wilt thou be made whole?

7 The impotent man answered him, Sir, <sup>h</sup>I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool: but while I am coming, another steppeth down before me.<sup>7</sup>

8 Jesus saith unto him, <sup>r</sup>Rise, take up thy bed, and walk.

9 And <sup>i</sup>immediately the man was made whole, and took up his bed, and walked: and on the same day was the sabbath.

10 ¶ The Jews therefore said unto him that was cured, It is the sabbath-day: <sup>k</sup>it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed.

11 He answered them, He that made me whole, the same said unto me, <sup>t</sup>Take up thy bed, and walk.

12 Then asked they him, What man is that which said unto thee, <sup>t</sup>Take up thy bed, and walk?

13 And he that was healed <sup>w</sup>wist not who it was: for Jesus <sup>h</sup>had conveyed himself away, a multitude being<sup>8</sup> in that place.

14 Afterward Jesus findeth him in <sup>t</sup>the temple, and said unto him, <sup>b</sup>Behold, thou art made whole: sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee.

15 The man departed, and <sup>t</sup>told the Jews that it was Jesus which had made him whole.

16 And therefore did the Jews persecute Jesus, <sup>and</sup>sought to slay him, because he had done these things on the sabbath-day.

17 ¶ But Jesus answered them, <sup>s</sup>My Father worketh hitherto,<sup>9</sup> and I work.<sup>1</sup>

18 Therefore the Jews <sup>t</sup>sought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the sabbath, but said also that God was his Father, making<sup>u</sup> himself equal with God.

19 ¶ Then answered Jesus and said unto them, <sup>v</sup>Verily, verily, I say unto you, <sup>t</sup>The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise.<sup>2</sup>

20 For<sup>u</sup> the Father loveth the Son, and sheweth him all things that himself doeth: and he will show him greater works<sup>3</sup> than these, that ye may marvel.

21 For as the Father <sup>r</sup>raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickeneth whom he will.

The principle in accordance with which the Sabbath is to be observed is thus indicated. We are not to rest in indolence, in simple cessation from manual or mental toil; but we are to follow the divine example, and engage actively in works of necessity and mercy, whether in regard to ourselves or to others.—P.

* Alford has very fully brought out the connection of this verse with the preceding context, and has shown the scope of the whole passage. My 'works are only indirect testimonies; the Father himself, who sent me, has given direct testimony concerning me. Now that testimony cannot be derived by you, nor any man, by direct communication with him; for ye have never heard his voice nor seen his shape. Nor, in your case, has it been given by that inward witness which those have in whom his word abides; for ye have not his word abiding in you, not believing on him whom he hath sent. Yet there is a form of this direct testimony of the Father accessible even to you—Search the Scriptures.—P.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Christ feedeth five thousand men with five loaves and two fishes. 15 Thereupon the people would have made him king. 16 But withdrawing himself, he walked on the sea to his disciples: 26 reproveth the people flocking after him, and all the fleshly hearers of his word: 32 declareth himself to be the bread of life to believers. 66 Many disciples depart from him. 68 Peter confesseth him. 70 Judas is a devil.

AFTER these things Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias.<sup>1</sup>

2 And a great multitude followed him, because they saw his miracles which he did on them that were diseased.

3 And Jesus went up into a mountain, and there he sat with his disciples.

4 And the passover, a feast of the Jews, was nigh.

5 When Jesus then lifted up his eyes, and saw a great company come unto him, he saith unto Philip, Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?

6 And this he said to prove him: for he himself knew what he would do.

1 A furlong is the eighth part of a mile, Lu. 24.13.

2 Job 9.8. Ps. 29.10; 93.4; 89.9.

7 Philip answered him, Two hundred penny worth<sup>2</sup> of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little.

8 One of his disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto him, 9 There is a lad here, which hath five barley-loaves, and two small fishes: but what are they among so many?

10 And Jesus said, Make the men sit down. Now there was much grass in the place. So the men sat down, in number about five thousand.

11 And Jesus took the loaves; and when he had given thanks,<sup>3</sup> he distributed to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were set down; and likewise of the fishes as much as they would.

12 When they were filled, he said unto his disciples, Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost.<sup>4</sup>

13 Therefore they gathered them together, and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley-loaves, which remained over and above unto them that had eaten.

14 Then those men, when they had seen the miracle that Jesus did, said, This is of a truth that prophet that should come into the world.<sup>5</sup>

15 ¶ When Jesus therefore perceived that they would come and take him by force, to make him a king, he departed again into a mountain himself alone.

16 And when even<sup>7</sup> was now come, his disciples went down unto the sea,

17 And entered into a ship, and went<sup>8</sup> over the sea toward Capernaum. And it was now dark, and Jesus was not come to them.<sup>9</sup>

18 And the sea arose by reason of a great wind that blew.

19 So when they had rowed about five and twenty or thirty furlongs,<sup>1</sup> they see Jesus walk-the Son, but, from the strong declaration of our Lord, both positively and negatively expressed, may be gathered the heinousness of the infidelity that denies his Godhead, involving practical atheism, inasmuch as it makes the Father a liar in the testimony he has so abundantly and frequently given to his Son, 1 Jn. 5.10. C.

Ver. 25. It is evident, since 'the hour now is,' that 'the dead' to whom our Lord here refers are 'the dead in trespasses and sins,' Ep. 2.1, whom he 'quickens' into the life of faith by his Word and Spirit. C.

Ver. 26. Given. The Godhead of the WORD, of the SON OF GOD, is eternal, and therefore undivided; but everything possessed by Jesus, as the Christ, is 'given' from the Father, whose 'Servant' he became by the incarnation, Phi. 2.6-11; Heb. 10.7-10; Ga. 4.4. C.

Ver. 37. I have neither heard his voice, &c. That the whole people of the Jews heard the 'voice' of God at Sinai—that they saw his 'shape,' rather the visible representation of his presence, in the Shekinah, is recorded by Moses—and also that many of them heard the voice of God at our Lord's baptism, is declared by Matthew.—May not the apparent contradiction, however, be fully removed by taking the word 'heard,' as it often is, to mean hearing, 'in attending, believing, and obeying.' See Ex. 6.12; De. 30.17; Is. 30.9; 55.3; Je. 11.10; Eze. 3.27; 33.31; Mat. 10.14; 18.17; Jn. 9.27; Lu. 18.21; 1 Co. 14.21; Ga. 4.21; Re. 1.3. The word 'seen' being likewise taken to signify, as it often does, to 'discern, discover, and acknowledge'—is a literal statement of fact—for when the Jews 'saw' Jesus, they neither discerned, discovered, nor acknowledged any 'form, or comeliness, or beauty, that they should desire him,' Is. 44.9; 53.2; Je. 5.21; Mat. 13.13; Jn. 3.3; 12.40; Ro. 7.23; 11.8. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is a great mercy that our world is not altogether filled with persons diseased, since sin hath introduced such a variety of evils. Marvellous, as well as numerous, were the types by which God prefigured his Messiah. And who, sensible of spiritual distempers, would not gladly wait at the pool of ordinances for relief! Jesus graciously prevents the most needy and miserable with his mercy: and his word powerfully convicts and enables to obedience. And yet much weakness and ignorance sometimes remain for a while. It is wonderful that his kindness should have occasioned to him such malicious hatred and envy. And marvellous is his wisdom, that this abuse of him should be the mean of a more clear manifestation of himself, as the Son of God and promised Messiah. How sufficient is he to save sinners who is both God and man; one with, and equal to, God; knowing, willing, and performing the same things as JEHOVAH his Father! Even in his mediatorial character he is the absolute Lord of life and death, who manages all providences, quickens the dead, examines all causes, and distributes eternal happiness according to men's deeds. Faithfully he executes his office, to the glory of God and the salvation of men. And worthy is he to be honoured and worshipped equally with the Father, that God may be glorified and worshipped in him. What ground is there for the most undoubting confidence in him who hath such attestation from prophets, from miracles, from God himself!—And it becomes us seriously to search the Scriptures, where every saving truth concerning him is to be found.—But, alas! fearful are the effects of ignorance, pride, and carnal ambition. No clear and earnest ministrations of truth can affect such as are under the power of these things.—Owning the authority of the Scriptures, they neither understand, believe, nor practise them. Pretending regard to Jesus, they will never receive him for salvation, and yet are ready to run after the vilest impostors.—It is the highest folly to lean to the broken law for happiness when it so charges us with our sins: and greatly absurd to prefer men to Christ, and yet disregard even these our human favourites when they instruct us concerning Christ.

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 27-29. Beware of laying out your principal care and labour about temporal provision or other perishing enjoyments; but chiefly inquire after, and labour to possess, those spiritual and eternal blessings which I, as anointed and miraculously attested by my Father, freely give to every one that believes in me. Your great and important work, which God commands and seeks as a source of obedience and means of acceptance, is cordially to believe on and receive me, as the SENT of God, and his unspeakable gift offered in the gospel. 30, 31. What token can you produce of your Messiahship, and superiority to Moses, who not merely multiplied provision, but for forty years miraculously nourished our fathers in the wilderness with manna from heaven? 32-59. Christ calls himself bread in allusion to the manna, and because he, in his person, offices, work, and fulness, is the mean of all our spiritual and eternal life, happiness, and comfort. He is the true bread, of which the manna and all the bread used in the ancient oblations were but a typical shadow, and which is infinitely excellent, important, and permanent in its virtue. He is living bread, having all life in himself as Son of God, and as Mediator, and as being the Author of all spiritual life to sinful

TIBERIAS, ON THE SEA OF GALILEE. [JOHN, vi: 23.]—"Howbeit there came other boats from Tiberias nigh unto the place where they did eat bread, after the Lord had given thanks."—John, vi: 23. Before us is a picture of this same Tiberias as it appears to-day. We see the little boats out on the sea, doubtless like those used in the time of our Lord. We see the fishermen's nets drying. We see the cactus and the palm trees, and the scattering fig and olive trees. We have in this picture all the things well nigh representative of Tiberias as it is to-day—sea, boats, nets, palm tree, fig tree, olive tree and one new building. Once the magnificent expression of Roman power and Roman taste in architecture, Tiberias is now the broken and desolate home of about four thousand Jews, who themselves seem also to be desolate and without heart.

ing on the sea, and drawing nigh unto the ship: and<sup>u</sup> they were afraid.

20 But he saith unto them, It is I; be not afraid.

21 Then <sup>u</sup>they willingly received him into the ship: and immediately the ship was at the land whither they went.

22 ¶ The day following, when the people which stood<sup>2</sup> on the other side of the sea saw that there was none other boat there, save that one whereinto his disciples were entered, and that Jesus went not with his disciples into the boat, but that his disciples were gone away alone;

23 (Howbeit there came other boats<sup>3</sup> from Tiberias,<sup>4</sup> nigh unto the place <sup>u</sup>where they did eat bread, after that the Lord had given thanks:)

24 When the people therefore saw that Jesus was not <sup>u</sup>there, neither his disciples, they also took shipping, and came to Capernaum,<sup>5</sup> seeking for Jesus.

25 And when they had found him on the other side of the sea, they said unto him, Rabbi, when camest thou hither?

26 Jesus answered them and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, <sup>u</sup>Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles,<sup>6</sup> but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled.

27 Labour not<sup>7</sup> for <sup>u</sup>the meat which perisheth, but for <sup>b</sup>that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which <sup>e</sup>the Son of man shall give unto you: <sup>d</sup>for him hath God the Father sealed.<sup>8</sup>

28 Then said they unto him, <sup>e</sup>What shall we do, that we might work the works of God?

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, <sup>u</sup>This is the work of God, that ye believe<sup>9</sup> on him whom he hath sent.

30 ¶ They said therefore unto him, <sup>b</sup>What sign<sup>1</sup> shonest thou then, that we may see, and believe thee? what dost thou work?

31 Our<sup>a</sup> fathers did eat manna in the desert; as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat.

32 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily,

<sup>67</sup> ch. 10.3.13.16.17.

I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven;<sup>2</sup> but my Father giveth you <sup>u</sup>the true bread from heaven.

33 For<sup>k</sup> the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world.

34 Then said they unto him, Lord, <sup>u</sup>evermore give us this bread.<sup>3</sup>

35 And Jesus said unto them, <sup>u</sup>I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.

36 But I said unto you,<sup>4</sup> <sup>u</sup>That <sup>o</sup>ye also have seen me, and believe not.

37 All<sup>p</sup> that the Father giveth me<sup>5</sup> shall come to me; <sup>u</sup>and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out.

38 For <sup>u</sup>I came down from heaven, <sup>u</sup>not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me.

39 And<sup>t</sup> this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day.

40 And this is the will of him that sent me, <sup>u</sup>that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day.

41 The Jews then <sup>u</sup>murmured at him, because he said, I am the bread which came down from heaven.

42 And they said, <sup>u</sup>Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? how is it then that he saith, I came down from heaven?

43 Jesus therefore answered and said unto them, Murmur not among yourselves.

44 No<sup>q</sup> man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw<sup>6</sup> him: and I will raise him up at the last day.

45 It<sup>z</sup> is written in the prophets, And they shall be all taught of God. <sup>u</sup>Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me.

men. He is bread of life, which gives spiritual life to dead souls, and nourishes them up in knowledge and grace, comfort and holiness, to eternal life; and none that receive him by faith shall ever perish with hunger, or thirst for any necessary blessings. His flesh is meat indeed, and his blood drink indeed. His person God-man Mediator, and his righteousness, with the blessings secured by it, are eminent and gracious means of our spiritual and eternal life. To eat his flesh and drink his blood, is by faith to receive and rest on him for salvation, as God in our nature, who has fulfilled the law, and secured, and bestows all heavenly blessings upon us;—and by means hereof Christ dwells in us and we in him. There is the closest union and communion between him and us;—he dwelling in us by his Spirit, and we dwelling in him by the permanent habit of faith, and holding fellowship with him by repeated acts of it. 63, 64. Why do ye conceive prejudice against my saying that I came down from heaven, when in a short time some present shall see me ascend back to it? And the eating of my flesh and drinking of my blood must be understood in a spiritual, not in a carnal sense. It is only the operation of the Spirit of God that quickens souls to a spiritual and eternal life. The carnal eating of my flesh could profit no one. My words, which I have spoken unto you, relate to spiritual things; and are the means of conveying the Holy Ghost, and his enlivening influences, into men's hearts. But some of you, who profess to be my disciples, do not heartily believe in me; and are therefore ready to cavil at my doctrine, and put the most absurd construction on my words.

REFLECTIONS.—Worthy of repeated remembrance are the great works of our Redeemer. He often graciously perplexes his people, that he may have the honour of kindly answering their doubts. And if we have him with us, we can never want any good thing. The more liberal we are to others, from a principle of faith and love, the more liberal God will be to us. But we must never waste anything in hopes of his miraculous supply. Carnal minds greatly mistake the nature of Christ's kingdom. And his ministers ought earnestly to avoid every political office and work. Dark nights of desertion, temptation, and distress often quickly succeed the most delightful seasons of fellowship with Christ, and even himself is suspected for Satan. But under all our distresses his word alone can relieve and comfort. And his presence is doubly precious after fearful storms of darkness and grief. Powerfully do his visits hasten forward his people to the haven of glory. They therefore who truly love him, will grudge no pains to find him: and often they meet with him sooner, and more easily, than they expected. But, alas, that ever he should be sought, not from love, but for some carnal advantages!—What a wonderful, well furnished, and divinely authorized Saviour is Jesus Christ! Heavenly and divine is his original;—deep was his debasement, even unto death;—and high his exaltation to his Father's throne. He hath in himself, and gives to our souls, the living, life-giving, substantial, and abundant provisions of his grace.—And freely granted by himself and his Father to sinful men are all the blessings of his love. Yea, even the weakest act of faith on him secures permanent grace, a glorious resurrection, and eternal life! Every poor sinner is invited to him; and no one who comes, however weak or wicked, shall be neglected or turned away. But none either will or can come till they hear the gospel of Christ, and are 46 Not that any man hath seen the Father,<sup>7</sup> save he which is of God, he hath seen the Father.

47 Verily,<sup>b</sup> verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life.

48 I<sup>c</sup> am that bread of life.

49 Your<sup>d</sup> fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead.

50 This<sup>e</sup> is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

51 I<sup>f</sup> am the living bread<sup>8</sup> which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give is <sup>h</sup>my flesh, which I will give for the <sup>i</sup>life of the world.

52 The<sup>j</sup> Jews therefore strove among themselves, saying, <sup>k</sup>How can this man give us <sup>his</sup>flesh to eat?

53 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, <sup>l</sup>Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood,<sup>9</sup> ye have no life in you.

54 Whoso<sup>n</sup> eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life;<sup>1</sup> and I will raise him up at the last day.

55 For <sup>o</sup>my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.

56 He<sup>p</sup> that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, <sup>q</sup>dwelleth in me, and I in him.

57 As<sup>r</sup> the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father: <sup>s</sup>so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me.

58 This<sup>t</sup> is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead: he that eateth of this bread shall live for ever.

59 These things said he in <sup>u</sup>the synagogue, as he taught in Capernaum.

60 ¶ Many<sup>v</sup> therefore of his disciples, when they had heard <sup>this</sup>, said, This is an hard saying; who can hear it?

It was so called because during its celebration the people were enjoined to live in tents or booths outside their houses, so as to commemorate the wilderness journey, i.e. 23. 42, 43. It was also called the feast of ingathering, because it took place at the close of the harvest. The time of celebration was from 15th to 22d Tisri, which corresponded with our September.—P. <sup>e</sup> Kinsmen, Mat. 12. 46. Mar. 3. 31. Ac. 1. 14. <sup>f</sup> there.

CHAPTER · VII.

1 Jesus reproveth the ambition and boldness of his kinsmen: 10 goeth up from Galilee to the feast of tabernacles: 14 teacheth in the temple. 40 Divers opinions of him among the people. 45 The Pharisees are angry that their officers took him not, and chide with Nicodemus for taking his part.

AFTER these things Jesus <sup>a</sup>walked in Galilee: for he would not walk in Jewry, <sup>b</sup>because the Jews sought to kill him.

2 Now<sup>c</sup> the Jews' feast of tabernacles was at hand.<sup>1</sup>

quicken and convicted by the Holy Spirit.—Awful is the thought that many should prefer earthly enjoyments to him and his everlasting salvation;—should ignorantly or maliciously cavil at the declarations of his grace; should apostatize from him, offended with his spiritual doctrines or necessary reproofs; or should adhere to him in profession while carnal lusts are indulged in their heart. Never, O my soul, cavil at his words who is the wisdom of God! Never attempt to deceive him who searches the heart. Never neglect him who is thy food and thy life, and the length of thy days. Never refuse him who is the free, the unspeakable gift of God. Never doubt of that salvation which is intrusted to his care, who shuts out none, and turns away none who accept him as Savior. And never desert him who is Christ the quickening Son of the living God, full of grace and truth.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 3, 4. Stay no longer in this poor obscure country, but go preach and work miracles at Jerusalem, that you may make the great and learned men your disciples; and that, their number being increased, they may, on such a public occasion, favour your designs to set up your kingdom; for if you can do any wonderful works, it is proper you should establish and spread your fame by doing them in the most public manner, and in the most famous places, and on the most public occasions, that men of learning and authority may see and be convinced by them. 6, 7. However safely ye who have the favour of worldly men, being like them in your principles, tempers, and designs, may go up at the very beginning of the feast, it is not proper that I, whom they seek to kill, should go up so early, and give them an opportunity to concert measures against me. 16–18. I did not learn my doctrine which I preach by any human assistance; nor is it an invention of my own. But God hath sent me as Mediator, and qualified me to publish it to the world, not to gain applause to myself, but for the advancement of his honour and glory. And whosoever will, by humble, serious, and impartial reading, hearing, meditation, and prayer, labour to understand the will of God, in order to practise it, he shall experience such delight and power in my doctrine as shall prove it really divine. He will perceive that impostors suit their doctrines to the carnal inclinations of men in order to establish their own reputation and carnal interests; and that, as an evidence of my sincerity, and of the truth of my doctrine, I am wholly intent upon promoting the glory of God, who authorized me, and publish only what tends to humble mankind, and reform them from their errors and corruptions. 19–24.

When ye profess such zeal for the laws of Moses, why do ye so universally break them? Why, in direct contradiction to an unalterable precept, do ye seek to murder me? When on the Sabbath-day ye circumcise children, and apply cures to the wounded, how absurd is it to seek to murder me, because on the Sabbath I perfectly cured the man who had long been infirm at the pool of Bethesda? Beware therefore of partially indulging prejudices against me on account of my mean appearances, or in favour of your chief priests and rulers, on account of their specious pretences and authority over you; but carefully examine things, and judge according to truth and equity. 28, 29. Ye indeed know my earthly parentage, but my office and original are much higher than ye apprehend. My Father, of whom ye are grossly ignorant, hath, in the faithful fulfilment of his love and promises, sent me into the world.—I have a perfect knowledge of his mind and will, for I am from him, by a peculiar and eternal generation; and as the anointed Mediator, I am authorized by him to reveal the way of salvation to men. 33, 34. It is but a short time that I shall continue preaching and working miracles among you; and then I shall, in my ascension, return to my Father. Then, in your miserable extremities, ye shall earnestly, but in vain, wish for my presence and favour; but ye shall 4 For<sup>d</sup> there is no man that doeth any thing in secret, and he himself seeketh to be known openly. If thou do these things, show thyself to the world.

5 For<sup>e</sup> neither did his brethren believe<sup>4</sup> in him.

6 Then Jesus said unto them, <sup>9</sup>My time is not yet come: but your time is alway ready.

7 The<sup>h</sup> world cannot hate you; but me it hateth, because I testify of it, that the works thereof are evil.

8 Go ye up unto this feast: <sup>i</sup>I go not up yet unto this feast; for my time is not yet full come.

9 When he had said these words unto them, he abode still in Galilee.

10 But when his brethren were gone up, then<sup>j</sup> went he also up unto the feast, <sup>k</sup>not openly, but as it were in secret.<sup>5</sup>

11 ¶ Then<sup>l</sup> the Jews sought him at the feast, and said, Where is he?

12 And<sup>n</sup> there was much murmuring among the people concerning him: for some said, He is a good man: others said, Nay; but he deceiveth the people.

13 Howbeit,<sup>o</sup> no man spake openly of him, for fear<sup>6</sup> of the Jews.

14 ¶ Now about the midst of the feast, Jesus went up <sup>2</sup>into the temple, and taught.

15 And the Jews marvelled, saying, <sup>9</sup>How knoweth this man letters, <sup>7</sup>having never learned?<sup>8</sup>

16 Jesus answered them, and said, <sup>r</sup>My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.

17 If<sup>s</sup> any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.

18 He<sup>t</sup> that speaketh of himself seeketh his own glory: <sup>u</sup>but he that seeketh his glory that sent him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in him.

19 Did<sup>v</sup> not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law? <sup>x</sup>Why go ye about to kill me?<sup>9</sup>

20 The people answered and said, <sup>y</sup>Thou hast a devil: who goeth about to kill thee?

21 Jesus answered and said unto them, I have done one work, and ye all marvel.

22 Moses<sup>z</sup> therefore gave unto you circumcision; (not because it is of Moses, but of the fathers;) and ye on the sabbath-day circumsise a man.

<sup>a</sup> The connection of this clause with the preceding is very intimate. Christ charged them with violating the law which they professed to respect. In that law Moses prophesied of him and his work. The Jews sought to kill him; and in this guilty purpose they violated the law in the grossest way.—P.

25 Then said some of them of Jerusalem, Is not this he whom they seek to kill?

26 But, <sup>b</sup>lo, he speaketh boldly, and they say nothing unto him. <sup>c</sup>Do the rulers know indeed that this is the very Christ?

27 Howbeit <sup>d</sup>we know this man whence he is: but when Christ cometh, no<sup>3</sup> man knoweth whence<sup>4</sup> he is.

28 Then cried Jesus in the temple as he taught, saying, <sup>e</sup>Ye both know me, and ye know whence I am: <sup>9</sup>and I am not come of myself, but he that sent me is true, whom ye know not.

29 But I know him: for I am from him, and he hath sent me.

30 Then<sup>h</sup> they sought to take him: but no man laid hands on him, <sup>i</sup>because his hour was not yet come.

31 And<sup>j</sup> many of the people believed on him, and said, When Christ cometh, will he do more miracles than these which this man hath done?

32 ¶ The Pharisees heard <sup>k</sup>that the people murmured such things concerning him; and the Pharisees and the chief priests sent officers to take him.

33 Then said Jesus unto them, <sup>l</sup>Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that sent me.

34 Ye<sup>n</sup> shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come.

35 Then said the Jews among themselves, Whither will he go, that we shall not find him? will he go unto the <sup>o</sup>dispersed among the Gentiles,<sup>5</sup> and teach the Gentiles?

36 What<sup>p</sup> manner of saying is this that he said, Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come?

37 In<sup>q</sup> the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, <sup>r</sup>If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink.<sup>6</sup>

38 He<sup>s</sup> that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.

39 (But<sup>t</sup> this spake he of the Spirit, which neither find me to your comfort, nor ever follow me to heaven, where even now I am in my divine nature, either to enjoy or persecute me. 37-39. Let every destitute sinner among you who wishes after happiness believe on me, as the only Saviour, that he may be refreshed and satisfied with an abundant, increasing, and continued supply of blessing, which may flow out from his heart, in plentiful streams of good works, for his own and others' edification and comfort.—This signified that all who cordially believed in and received and rested on him for salvation, should, after his ascension to glory, receive an abundant communication of the gifts, graces, and comforts of the Holy Ghost, to refresh and cleanse their souls, and render them fruitful in good works and useful to others; which communication was not to be granted till Christ should have the honour of sending the Spirit to attest his exaltation and influence in heaven, and the Spirit could glorify Christ in the numerous conversions and remarkable holiness and comfort of both Jews and Gentiles.

REFLECTIONS.—It is a mournful case when the Saviour is banished. And base when men, even in religious duties, chiefly aim at <sup>z</sup>their own carnal advantages. It wears but a very suspicious appearance when professors of religion are the darlings of wicked men. And it is highly shameful when the near relations of faithful ministers, or they who have most means of instruction, are the most careless or carnal. Faithful ministers must expect to go through various scenes of good and bad treatment, and the more faithful they are the more of the world's hatred will they experience. Men who hate the truth will always find something to quarrel with. But no malice can destroy them till their life be ended. They may therefore proceed boldly but cautiously in it.—Ignorance of Christ and his doctrines will make men doubt their divinity, or they that believe on him should receive: "for the Holy Ghost was not yet given;<sup>7</sup> because that Jesus was not yet glorified.)

40 ¶ Many of the people therefore, when they heard this saying, said, "Of a truth this is the prophet.

41 Others said, "This is the Christ. But some said, "Shall Christ come out of Galilee?

42 Hath<sup>2</sup> not the scripture said, That Christ cometh of the seed of David, and out of the town of Bethlehem, "where David was?

43 So<sup>b</sup> there was a division among the people because of him.

44 And some of them would have taken him; but "no man laid hands on him.

45 ¶ Then came the officers to the chief priests and Pharisees; and they said unto them, Why have ye not brought him?

46 The officers answered, "Never man spake like this man.<sup>8</sup>

47 Then answered them the Pharisees, Are ye also deceived?

48 Have<sup>e</sup> any of the rulers or of the Pharisees believed on him?

49 But this people, who knoweth not the law, are cursed.

50 Nicodemus saith unto them, (He that came to Jesus<sup>9</sup> by night, being one of them.)

51 Doth<sup>h</sup> our law judge any man before it hear him, and know what he doeth?

52 They answered and said unto him, Art thou also of Galilee? Search and look: "for out of Galilee ariseth no prophet.

53 And<sup>j</sup> every man went unto his own house.

7 By comparing this verse with ch.10.7, it will appear that 'sent,' rather than 'given,' should be the word supplied. And that he could not be sent until Christ had first been glorified, will further appear from ver.14, which declares one part of his office to be to 'take the things of Christ and show them' to believers. But 'the things of Christ' are, mainly, his incarnation, death, sacrifice, and resurrection — with none of which could he fully be sent until Christ had died, and risen, and ascended to glory.—C.

unto him a woman taken in adultery; and when they had set her in the midst, 4 They say unto him, Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act.

5 Now<sup>d</sup> Moses in the law commanded us that such should be stoned: but what sayest thou?

6 This they said, "tempting<sup>2</sup> him, that they might have to accuse him. But <sup>3</sup>Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, as though he heard them not.

7 So when they continued asking him, he lifted up himself, and said unto them, "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone<sup>3</sup> at her.

8 And again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground.

9 And<sup>i</sup> they which heard it, being convicted by their own conscience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldest, even unto the last: and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst.<sup>4</sup>

10 When Jesus had lifted up himself, and saw none but the woman, he said unto her, Woman, where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee?

11 She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, "Neither do I condemn<sup>5</sup> thee: go, <sup>k</sup>and sin no more.

12 ¶ Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

13 The Pharisees therefore said unto him, Thou bearest record of thyself; thy record is not true.

14 Jesus answered and said unto them, "Though I bear record of myself, yet my record is true: "for I know whence I came, and whither I go; but ye cannot tell whence I come, and whither I go.<sup>6</sup> raise cavils against them. Prejudice against him will render them blind to the clearest means of conviction, make them reckon appearances realities, and pretend great zeal for God's law while they indulge themselves in the grossest violation of it, and condemn in others what they approve in themselves. But delightfully Jesus vindicates his character, doctrine, and work, to his own and his Father's honour, and to the confusion of his enemies. And serious attention will either convince or confound his opposers. Astonishing are the riches of his grace in offering a full and free salvation to his contemners and murderers. And abundant are the communications that flow from an exalted Redeemer. And it is most dreadful to seek occasions and raise cavils against his kindness. It is dangerous to enjoy ordinances without his presence. And his despisers shall be awfully deprived of him, and all the means of his grace, in a little time. But it is a great mercy that the poor embrace and enjoy him when most men of rank and learning condemn both him and them. Wicked men readily curse whom the Lord loveth blessed. But Christ can easily overawe, if not convert, the most stubborn, and render them witnesses for his honour. Easily he can embolden the most cowardly in a time of need, and disappoint and dispirit the crafty. And nothing more plainly manifests a bad cause than that its friends have recourse to persecution rather than to arguments.

CHAPTER VIII. Ver. 3-6. If he had encouraged them to stone her they might have reproached him with cruelty, in partially ordering a severe punishment against one no worse than the publicans and sinners with whom he conversed, or they might have accused him to the Roman governor as an usurper of judicial authority and an abettor of tumults. If he had declared against stoning her, or bade them refer the matter to the Roman governor, they hoped to incense the people against him as an enemy to the law of Moses and their liberty. 12. Having in myself all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, I am come into the world to direct both Jews and Gentiles into the way of life and salvation by my Word and Spirit. And whosoever believeth on me, and follows my direction and pattern, shall not go on in ignorance, error, sin, or misery, but have the saving light and comfort of a spiritual life here and eternal life hereafter. 13-19. Though in ordinary cases a man's testimony concerning himself avails nothing, yet it is otherwise in the case of one who is light and truth itself, and whose original and commission are from God, and whose return is to him; of all which things ye are wilfully ignorant. Ye judge and condemn me only from carnal considerations and appearances; but I interfere with no civil judgment, and at present condemn or punish no man, but call sinners to repentance and salvation; and yet, though I were to pass or execute judgment, my sentence would be just and valid, on account of my oneness with, and commission from, my Father. Nor is my Messiahship destitute of sufficient attestation, since I myself, as a divine person, assert it; and my Father, by his prophets, and by his immediate declarations from heaven, as well as by many other signs, hath attested it. Notwithstanding repeated instructions, ye continue wilfully ignorant of my person and office, and of my heavenly Father, from whom I come to you. If ye had considered me as one in nature, counsel, and operation with him, ye would have seen his perfections shining forth in me, and discerned the relation in which he stands to me, as his Son and mediatorial Servant. 21-26. 19 Then said they unto him, Where is thy Father? Jesus answered, <sup>u</sup>Ye neither know me, nor my Father: <sup>v</sup>if ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also.

20 These words spake Jesus <sup>in</sup> the treasury, as he taught in the temple: and <sup>no</sup> man laid hands on him; for his hour<sup>9</sup> was not yet come.

21 Then said Jesus again unto them, <sup>z</sup>I go my way, and ye shall seek me, and shall <sup>die</sup> in your <sup>1</sup>sins: <sup>b</sup>whither I go, ye cannot come.

23 And he said unto them, <sup>d</sup>Ye are from beneath; <sup>e</sup>I am from above: ye are of this world; I am not of this world.

24 I <sup>g</sup>said therefore unto you, that ye shall die in your sins: for if ye <sup>h</sup>believe not that I am <sup>he</sup>, ye shall die in your sins.

25 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? And Jesus saith unto them, <sup>i</sup>Even the same that I said unto you from the beginning.

26 I<sup>j</sup> have many things to say and to judge of you: but he that sent me is true; and <sup>k</sup>I speak to the world those things which I have heard of him.

27 They<sup>l</sup> understood not that he spake to them of the Father.

Father hath not left me alone; for <sup>i</sup>I do always those things that please him.

30 As he spake these words, <sup>many</sup> believed on him.

31 ¶ Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, <sup>if</sup> ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed;

32 And<sup>u</sup> ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.

33 ¶ They<sup>3</sup> answered him, <sup>v</sup>We be Abraham's seed, and <sup>w</sup>were never in bondage to any man: how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free?

34 Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, <sup>y</sup>Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.

35 And<sup>z</sup> the servant abideth not in the house for ever: <sup>a</sup>but the Son abideth ever.

36 If<sup>b</sup> the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed.

37 I know that ye are <sup>c</sup>Abraham's seed: <sup>d</sup>but ye seek to kill me, because my word hath no place in you.

38 I<sup>e</sup> speak that which I have seen with my Father: and ye <sup>f</sup>do that which ye have seen with your father.

39 They answered and said unto him, <sup>h</sup>Abraham is our father. Jesus saith unto them, <sup>i</sup>If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham.

40 But<sup>j</sup> now ye seek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God: this did not Abraham.<sup>4</sup>

41 Ye<sup>k</sup> do the deeds of your father. Then said they to him, We be not born of fornication; <sup>l</sup>we<sup>l</sup> have one Father, even God.

42 Jesus said unto them, <sup>m</sup>If God were your Father, ye would love me: for <sup>n</sup>I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of myself, but he sent me.

43 Why<sup>p</sup> do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word.<sup>6</sup>

44 Ye<sup>q</sup> are of your father the devil, and the Father, Jesus said to them, I will soon ascend back to my Father, and ye shall earnestly wish to have me among you to deliver you from your miseries, but shall die under the power and guilt of your sin, especially your rejection of me, and be rendered inexpressibly wretched, both in time and through eternity. Nor shall it be in your power to follow me into the heavenly state, either to bring me back, or to partake of my glory.—Being not only of an earthly origin, but of unregenerate hearts and carnal tempers, ye cannot have fellowship with me, who am divine, and whose affections are perfectly set on heavenly things; but on account of your obstinate refusal to embrace and acknowledge me as the promised Messiah and only Saviour, and other sins attending it, your city and nation shall be fearfully destroyed in this world, and yourselves for evermore terribly lost in hell. I still insist on it that I am the Son of God and promised Messiah. I could easily charge you with a multitude of crimes, and condemn you for them; but as that is not my present work, I only tell you that my Father infallibly performs all his promises concerning me and to me, and them that believe in me, and all his threatenings against those that reject me; and whatever I say to men is exactly according to the commission which I have received from his uncontrollable and awful authority. 28, 29. But however ignorant ye now are of me, when once ye have crucified me, and occasioned my exaltation to glory, either the happy influences of my Spirit, or the miseries on yourselves and nation, shall convince you that I act by my Father's authority, and have faithfully declared his doctrines, promises, and threatenings.—And meanwhile my Father, who is one with me in essence, continues with me the unmeasurable unction of his Spirit, and the tokens of his favour to me, as one who always acts agreeably to his will and for his honour. 31, 32. Jesus said to these weak or pretended believers, If ye really embrace and adhere to my holy doctrine, and subject your whole souls to it, ye shall be proved and owned to be my disciples in truth as well as in name; and ye shall be still further enlightened and confirmed in the certainty, excellency, and importance of my gospel; and by means of it be honourably delivered from everything intruding, mean, or miserable. 34—36. Notwithstanding your haughty, and even notoriously false boasts of civil and religious freedom, I assure you that, be whose descendants you will, if ye indulge yourselves in the practice of wickedness, ye are slaves under the power of your lusts and the guilt of your sins; and as such all unbelieving Jews, though the natural seed of Abraham, shall be quickly excluded from God's church and favour; while I, the Son of God and eminent seed of Abraham, shall continue as Head of the church, and all true believers abide therein as members. If therefore I, who am the Son of God and Lord of my church, grant you my spiritual freedom, ye shall be really and eminently free from the guilt and dominion of sin, and from the law, as a covenant, and from burdensome ceremonies; and, in fine, free from all evil, and fully possessed of everything glorious and comfortable. 37—41. I know that ye are the natural descendants of Abraham; but ye are so far from being like him in his faith or obedience, that ye seek to murder me, merely because your own proud and carnal hearts cannot relish nor receive the holy, spiritual, and self-humbling doctrine which I preach unto you. I speak and act as one intimately acquainted with, and obedient to, God my Father; and ye act as under the influence of, and in communion and concert with, the devil as your true Father—a very sure evidence that ye are not the genuine and believing children of Abraham. 45—47. Not only do ye discredit the proofs of my Sonship and Messiahship, and the doctrines which I preach, but because I tell you truths which are spiritual and holy, disagreeable to your corrupt inclinations and interests, ye reject both me and them; and so perverse are you, that though lusts of your father ye will do. <sup>r</sup>He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it.

45 And <sup>a</sup>because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not.

46 Which<sup>t</sup> of you convinceeth me of sin?<sup>7</sup> And if I say the truth, why do ye not believe me?

47 He<sup>u</sup> that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God.

48 ¶ Then answered the Jews, and said unto him, Say we not well that thou art <sup>a</sup>a Samaritan,<sup>8</sup> and hast a devil?

49 Jesus answered, <sup>a</sup>I have not a devil; but I<sup>v</sup> honour my Father, and ye do dishonour me.

50 And<sup>z</sup> I seek not mine own glory: <sup>a</sup>there is one that seeketh and judgeth.

51 Verily, verily, I say unto you, <sup>b</sup>If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death.

52 Then said the Jews unto him, Now we know that thou hast a <sup>a</sup>devil. <sup>c</sup>Abraham is dead, and the prophets; and thou sayest, If a man keep my saying, he shall never taste of death.

ham, which is dead? and the prophets are dead: whom makest thou thyself?

54 Jesus answered, <sup>a</sup>If I honour myself, my honour is nothing: <sup>a</sup>it is my Father that honoureth me; of whom ye say, that he is your God:

59 ¶ Then<sup>l</sup> took they up stones to east at him: <sup>n</sup>but Jesus hid himself,<sup>3</sup> and went out of the temple, going through the midst of them, and so passed by.<sup>4</sup>

CHAPTER IX.

1 The man that was born blind restored to sight. 8 He is brought to the Pharisees. 13 They are offended at it, and excommunicate him: 35 but he is received of Jesus, and confesseth him. 39 Who they are whom Christ enlighteneth.

AND, as Jesus passed by,<sup>1</sup> he saw a man which was blind from his birth.

2 And his disciples asked him, saying, Mas-ye cannot point out the smallest fault in my behaviour or doctrine, ye obstinately persist in your unbelief. From this it is evident that ye are not lovers of God, who are all of them desirous to know, and ready to receive and observe, whatever he speaks. 49-51. My continual and earnest study to advance the glory of my Father in the salvation of the people, fully manifests that in my work I am no way influenced or directed by the devil; nor am I solicitous about either your reproaches or your applause, as I know that my Father will secure me the regard of all faithful people, and will effectually vindicate my character, and punish all the indignities offered to it. And I solemnly assure you that whosoever heartily embraces and holds fast my spiritual and holy doctrine, in faith and obedience, shall be delivered from every real misery, and enjoy everlasting happiness. 56-58. So highly did your father Abraham esteem me, that he earnestly desired to see my appearance in the flesh, and exceedingly rejoiced in the foresight of it. How young soever I be with respect to my human birth, yet I existed from eternity as the unchangeable I AM.

Ver. 25. From the beginning. The original presents a greater difficulty than appears in the translation, John's customary phrase for 'from or at the beginning' being of very different construction. See ch. 6. 64; 8. 44; 15. 27; 16. 4; 1 Jn. 1. 1; 2. 7, &c. Paul, no doubt, uses a phrase for 'at the beginning' similar to that in the text; but the phraseology of John should rather be interpreted by his own writings. If so, the view of Augustine seems preferable: 'Believe me (ver. 24) to be the beginning, head, or chief of all principality and power (see Col. 1. 18; Re. 1. 8; 21. 6)—that which now I declare myself to you.' C.

Ver. 33. We . . . were never in bondage. Some consider this statement a gross historical falsehood, as the Jews had been in bondage to the Egyptians, Philistines, Moabites, Babylonians, and now were subject to the Romans. But such glaring historical facts even Pharisees could not have ventured publicly to deny. The meaning is therefore to be sought in giving a distinctive emphasis to we; and, in point of fact, up till this period the Romans were rather arbitrators and protectors than masters. The Roman bondage did not properly commence till several years after our Lord's resurrection. C.

Ver. 51. These words of our Lord are as literally true of the first as of the second death. That the believer never sees the second death, is unquestioned; but neither does he see the first. Death is literally not death to him. It is a serpent unstung, an enemy conquered, a power destroyed. He thinks not of the world he is to leave behind, but the heaven to which he is removing, and the crown of righteousness and glory. He does not die, he but departs; he falls asleep in Jesus, and awakes in the morning of the resurrection, when death is swallowed up in victory, Ac. 7. 60; 1 Co. 15. 51-57; 2 Ti. 4. 6-8; He. 2. 14, 15. C.

REFLECTIONS.—There is great need of caution in dealing with malicious hypocrites. Very abominable is adultery, and richly deserving of capital punishment. But those who indulge themselves in it, or any like wickedness, are very unfit to be zealous prosecutors of the guilty. Many fear shame on account of sin more than damnation; and by fleeing from Christ, the merciful Saviour, wilfully destroy themselves. Now he is ready to pardon the greatest transgressions; but he will quickly be an inexorable judge. He is come into our dark world to reveal the method of salvation by the gospel, and to illuminate our hearts by his Spirit. Ignorant of and far from him, we shall certainly wander into everlasting perdition. But under his enlightening influence we shall avoid dangerous errors, be freed from spiritual slavery, and safely arrive at eternal life. Being a divine person, one with and sent by the Father, we may safely rest in and abide by his testimony. But no external evidence is sufficient to persuade a carnal heart. Many were the blasphemous contradictions which he endured in the cause of mercy and truth. While he was horribly insulted by the wicked, the hypocritical, the proud, and malicious children of Satan, as if he had been diabolical and mad. And great was the forbearance and meekness which he manifested in his own vindication. It looks ill when men are enraged by reproof. Unprofitable is descent from the most godly parents if we continue strangers to their faith and holiness. And it is base to boast of such while we obstinately persevere in our sins. It is impossible either to know or believe Christ's words while we remain hardened in carnal lusts and under the power of the devil. Yea, an empty profession of the true religion but tends to make our case still the more miserable. And if we drive Jesus the Saviour from us now, he will at last leave us in our sinfulness and ruin. But happy they who know his truth and have it abiding in their heart, who are conformed to his image, and desire after and delight in him! Thrice glorious their gospel-liberties, and unspeakable their eternal felicities.

CHAPTER IX. Ver. 3, 4. It was not on account of any particular crime, either of his own or his parents, more than others, that this man was born blind; but that, by opening his eyes, I might manifest my Father's love, and prove myself to be the Messiah, in miraculously curing him. I must therefore improve the present opportunity of giving him his sight as an emblem of my enlightening blind souls. And since the day of my mortal life hastens to a period, as long as I am in the world I must cure not only corporal blindness, but instruct, enlighten, and comfort them that are spiritually blind. 39-41. I am come to establish a rule of judgment; to alter the present state of the church; to try men's spirits; and, by distinguishing grace, to separate the precious from the vile; to open blind eyes, and teach ignorant souls; and to manifest and occasion the increase of their stupidity and perverseness who, through self-conceit, shut their eyes against the light of my word. If you Pharisees, who pretend to so much knowledge and ability to instruct others, were either grossly ignorant or as sensible of your ignorance as many of the common people, your sin in rejecting me would be far less heinous, and there would be hopes of your deliverance from it; but while you are so self-conceited your sin is highly aggravated, and it is most probable that you will remain under its guilt and power for ever.

REFLECTIONS.—We ought to be extremely cautious in our interpretations of providences. Men's sins are not to be judged of from their sufferings. It is enough that God is righteous, and will make all things turn out to his own glory. We have great need to be diligent in working out our salvation while we have life and opportunity to walk in Christ's light. Marvellous is his power and ready his grace towards the unworthy and distressed. He works the most gracious salvation by means the most unlikely. It is his appointment, not any natural virtue, that renders them powerful. And only in obedience to his authority can we justly expect benefit by them.—What blessed experience of his mercy he gives to the obedient! and with cheerful thankfulness it should be acknowledged to his love. He can easily make the weakest of his followers wiser than their teachers—bold confessors of his name, and humble adorers of his majesty. And if men reject and abuse them for his sake, he will reward them with repeated manifestations of his glory. But, alas! how desirous are some to avoid owning him, even after he hath bestowed singular favours upon them. The fear of men causeth a snare. The censures of the church are often turned against her best friends. But inexcusable are they who, through self-conceit, contemn all means of conviction, and upbraid Jesus and his followers. Rage against reproof most plainly discovers real ignorance. But hopeful is the case of such as perceive their own weakness and sinfulness, and dan-

POOLOF SILOAM. [JOHN, ix:7.]—Siloam, is mentioned but three times in the Scriptures. Isaiah, vii:6, 7, refers to the waters of Siloam, which “go softly” in contrast with the sweeping current of the Euphrates. In Nehemiah, third chapter and fifteenth verse, allusion is made to Siloam where it speaks of the rebuilding of the gate of the fountains by the hands of Shallum. And in the third place we have the reference to Siloam in Jno. ix:7, where our Lord tells the man born blind to “go wash in the Pool of Siloam,” etc. Luke mentions a tower of Siloam, which by its fall occasioned the death of eighteen men. This tower stood by the Pool of Siloam. Jerome says the Spring of Siloam lies at the base of Mt. Zion. Josephus alludes to Siloam. Its sweet water flows to-day just as in ancient times.

ter, who <sup>a</sup>did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?<sup>2</sup>

3 Jesus answered, <sup>b</sup>Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents:<sup>3</sup> but <sup>c</sup>that the works of God should be made manifest in him.

4 I must work the works of him that sent me, <sup>d</sup>while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work.

5 As long as I am in the world, <sup>e</sup>I am the light of the world.

6 When he had thus spoken, <sup>f</sup>he spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay,<sup>4</sup>

7 And said unto him, <sup>g</sup>Go, wash in the <sup>h</sup>pool of Siloam, (which is, by interpretation, <sup>i</sup>Sent.) He went<sup>5</sup> his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing.

8 ¶ The neighbours therefore, and they which before had seen him that he was blind, said, Is not this he that sat and begged?

9 Some said, This is he: others said, He is like him: but he said, I am he.

10 Therefore said they unto him, How were thine eyes opened?

11 He answered and said, A man that is called <sup>k</sup>Jesus made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam,<sup>6</sup> and wash: and I went and washed, and I received sight.

12 Then said they unto him, Where is he? He said, I know not.

13 ¶ They brought to the Pharisees him that aforetime was blind.

14 And it was <sup>l</sup>the sabbath-day when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes.

15 Then<sup>m</sup> again the Pharisees also asked him how he had received his sight. He said unto them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I washed, and do see.

16 Therefore said some of the Pharisees, This man <sup>n</sup>is not of God, because he <sup>o</sup>keepeth not the sabbath-day. <sup>p</sup>Others said, How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles? And there was a division among them.

17 They say unto the blind man again, What sayest thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He said, <sup>q</sup>He is a prophet.

18 But the <sup>r</sup>Jews <sup>s</sup>did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his sight, until they called the parents of him that had received his sight.

<sup>5</sup> The sending of the blind man, and his ready compliance, without any mention of a guide, when contrasted with the reference to the common practice of leading the blind (Mat. 15. 14), furnishes a striking internal proof of the truth of the narrative, and that it was written by an eye-witness of the fact; for men 'born blind' do frequently acquire the most wonderful local knowledge, so that they can find out any place as readily as those who see.

But the inventor of a 'cunningly-devised fable' would never have omitted to add to the verisimilitude of the miracle the accompaniment of a guide.—Note, The use of the clay, and washing in Siloam, may perhaps represent that incrustation of worldliness (Hab. 2. 6) which the water of life 'sent' from above must wash away before the eyes of a sinner can be spiritually opened; and the act of washing, in obedience to the word of the Lord, may well represent the 'discreet use of the outward and ordinary means whereby Christ communicateth to us the benefits of redemption.'—C.

into a living infant—a doctrine prevalent among the Egyptians, and at least to some extent among the Greeks. But had it been their object to obtain information concerning this doctrine, it seems scarcely possible our Lord should have neglected or refused to answer. Their meaning, therefore, seems rather to be—'Who hath sinned? this man, that he is become blind? or his parents, that he was born blind?' for, being generally Galileans, they knew nothing about the man or his parents. 19 And they asked them, saying, Is this your son, who ye say was born blind? how then doth he now see?

20 His parents answered them and said, We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind:

21 But by what means he now seeth, we know not; or who hath opened his eyes, we know not: he is of age; ask him: he shall speak for himself.

22 These words spake his parents, <sup>1</sup>because they feared the Jews: for the Jews had agreed already that <sup>2</sup>if any man did confess that he was Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue.

23 Therefore said his parents, He is of age; ask him.

24 Then again called they the man that was blind, and said unto him, <sup>3</sup>Give God the praise: we know that this man is <sup>4</sup>a sinner.<sup>8</sup>

25 He answered and said, Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not: one thing I know; that, whereas I was blind, now I see.

26 Then<sup>9</sup> said they to him again, What did he to thee? how opened he thine eyes?

27 He answered them, I have told you already, and <sup>10</sup>ye did not hear: wherefore would ye hear <sup>11</sup>it again? will ye also be his disciples?

28 Then they <sup>12</sup>reviled him, and said, Thou art his disciple; but we are <sup>13</sup>Moses' disciples.

29 We know that <sup>14</sup>God spake unto Moses: <sup>15</sup>as for <sup>16</sup>this fellow, <sup>17</sup>we know not from whence he is.<sup>9</sup>

30 The man answered and said unto them, Why <sup>18</sup>herein is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, and <sup>19</sup>yet he hath opened mine eyes.

31 Now<sup>20</sup> we know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth his will, him <sup>21</sup>he heareth.<sup>1</sup>

32 Since the world began was it not heard <sup>22</sup>that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind.

33 If this man were not of God, he could do nothing.

34 ¶ They answered and said unto him, <sup>23</sup>Thou wast altogether born in sins, and <sup>24</sup>dost thou teach us?<sup>2</sup> And they cast him out.<sup>3</sup>

35 ¶ Jesus heard that they had cast him out; <sup>25</sup>and when he had found him, he said unto him. <sup>26</sup>Dost thou believe on the <sup>27</sup>Son of God?

36 He answered and said, <sup>28</sup>Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him?

gerous is theirs who are proud of their knowledge and religion.

CHAPTER X. Ver. 1-5. I, who am truth itself, solemnly assure you that whoever they are who enter into any office in God's church not according to his appointment, but by methods of their own devising, are intruders and seducers, who, instead of feeding and governing his people, attempt to rob God of his authority over and property in them, and to pervert and destroy their souls. But he who, from right principles and ends, and in the manner appointed by God, enters upon the work of feeding and guiding the church, hath a proper right to take care of his people—those cleanly and tractable, meek, patient, harmless, and cautious, but timorous and exposed, social and useful, fearers of God. And having invested him with all proper authority, God, by his Spirit and the ministry of his servants, opens the hearts of his people to receive him, and they are taught to understand and distinguish his voice in the gospel; while he, by his grace, calls them to himself, in the most blessed manner, and leads them into the good pastures of his Word and ordinances.—In so doing, he, by his instruction and example, shows them the way; and they, understanding and approving the same, willingly yield up themselves to his authority, and tread in his steps. But the true and faithful people of God have a fixed aversion to the unscriptural doctrines and bad example of false teachers, because they perceive their tendency to lead them away from the right way of salvation. 6-9. Finding that, through their self-conceit, the Pharisaic teachers did not comprehend his meaning, Jesus added, I am the only door

37 And Jesus said unto him, 'Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee.

38 And he said, 'Lord, I believe. And he worshipped him.

39 ¶ And Jesus said, 'For judgment I am come into this world, that they which see not might see;<sup>4</sup> and that they which see might be made blind.

40 And some of the Pharisees which were with him heard these words, and said unto him, 'Are we blind also?

41 Jesus said unto them, 'If ye were blind, ye should have no sin: but now ye say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth.<sup>5</sup>

1 Christ is the door, and the good shepherd. 19 Divers opinions of him. 25 He proveth by his works that he is Christ the Son of God: 39 escapeth the Jews, 40 and goeth again beyond Jordan, where many believe on him.

VERILY, verily, I say unto you, 'He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber.

2 But he that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep.

3 To him the porter openeth; and the sheep hear his voice: and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out.

of salvation and way to eternal life, and the only one by whom ministers can have admission to office in the gospel-church, or people have access to spiritual privileges and saving benefits. All that, before me, pretended to Messiahship, and all that oppose me and teach other methods of salvation, are but mere intruders into their office, who rob my Father and me of our honour and property, and destroy men's souls; but God's people, by the use of their enlightened consciences, shall be able to detect their errors. I therefore insist on it, as a matter of infinite importance, that I am the only true door of the church, and entrance to eternal life. Whosoever therefore enters upon religion by faith in me as the only Saviour, shall certainly be protected from spiritual enemies, delivered from misery of every kind, and obtain eternal blessedness; and shall, under the conduct of my Word and Spirit, find access to, liberty in, and spiritual support, nourishment, and comfort, by my divine ordinances. 10—13. False teachers come only to seduce church-members, murder their souls, or plunder and persecute them; but I am come to manifest the method of obtaining spiritual and eternal life, yea, to secure it for them, and to bestow it upon them, in the most universal, unexpected, eminent, inconceivably large, and everlasting manner. I am the eminently and infinitely good Shepherd of the church foretold by the prophets, and who not only lead, protect, and feed, but give my very life, soul, and self, in the stead of the faithful, to secure their eternal happiness.—But they who from selfish views commence pastors in the church, having no real affectionate concern for their people, are unwilling to hazard their life, reputation, or secular interests in their service; but are always ready to shift for themselves, and leave the people to be seduced or perverted as Satan and his emissaries please. No wonder they are so careless of their hearers' spiritual and eternal advantage when they only entered on their office from a regard to secular advantage. 14—18. And being the infinitely good and the chief Shepherd of the church, I perfectly know, exactly observe, and tenderly care for all faithful people, who are, by my Father's gift, my own sacrifice, and their self-dedication, my peculiar property; and they spiritually know me and my doctrine, and faithfully and affectionately embrace me and hearken to it. And as the Father perfectly knows, loves, approves, and confides in me, I also am perfectly acquainted with him and all his mind, and trust in him, and delight to do his will. Such is my love to him and to all the world that I am willing and ready to lay down my life in its stead, that all may obtain eternal salvation. And besides those Jews which I have called, or will surely call, into my church, I must, in pursuance of my eternal engagements, and in justice to my sacrifice for them, seek to bring in multitudes also of heathen Gentiles, and unite them with those Jews in the gospel-church, new-covenant, or heavenly state, under my tender care, influences, and government.—And not only doth my Father love me as his only begotten Son, but even on account of my zeal for the manifestation of his glory in the salvation of sinful men, in so cheerfully dying for the pardon of their sins, that I might rise again for their justification.—No man, by either stratagem or force, can deprive me of my life without my own consent; but, as absolute proprietor thereof, I voluntarily lay it down, and will, by my own power, rise from the dead, after making satisfaction for the sins of the world according to the commandment and love of my Father. 25—30. Not only have I, in the strongest declarations, asserted my Messiahship, though ye perversely refused to believe me, but I have demonstrated it by my divine and miraculous works: yet such is your obstinacy, that no declarations or demonstrations will persuade you; as I know, from your indifference and hardness, that your affections are fixed on the world, and that because of this you do not wish to hear me and obey me.—As I distinctly know, observe, and love all men, I shall seek to lead them to attend to, distinguish, prize, and willingly obey the voice of my Word and Spirit, and readily follow my instructions and example. And I freely give them an irrevocable right to all spiritual and eternal benefits, lead them now into some enjoyment of them, and will strive to put them into the full possession.—Nor shall either their own weakness, unworthiness, or sinfulness, make them fall short of heaven, if they will only by faith hold to my words and by prayer and good works consecrate themselves to God. Nay, my heavenly Father, who loves them, and hath a tender interest in them, and who calleth them to me that I might bring them safely to glory, being infinitely superior to all their enemies in power and wisdom, it is absolutely impossible to defeat his gracious designs towards them, or to entice or force them out of his almighty hands, only by their own unfaithfulness. And my Father and I, being the very same in nature, power, and every other perfection, as well as in will and design, we must be both overcome before the weakest of true believers can be deprived of eternal life. 32. Many great and merciful works I have wrought among you, in confirmation of my character, in feeding multitudes of hungry persons, healing all manner of diseases, raising the dead, and casting out tormenting devils. For which of these do you intend to stone me to death? 34—38. And when the Scripture, which is infallible, and must be accomplished, calls your magistrates Gods, who were but types and shadows of the Messiah, why do you perversely charge me, in whom these types are perfectly fulfilled, and whom the Father hath appointed from eternity, and hath sent into the world to exercise all authority as the true Messiah, with blasphemy, for asserting my oneness in nature and perfections with the Father! If I do not perform works as great and glorious as could be expected from the Father, and which, being superior and contrary to the laws of nature, must be performed by that power which is in the Father himself, I do not claim your belief as the Son of God or promised Messiah. But if I perform works peculiar to God, and in a manner proper to him, then, however ye disregard my person or doctrine in itself, submit to the unexceptionable evidence of my miracles, that ye may be convinced that my Father and I have essential and necessary communion in Godhead.

Ver. 3. Calleth his own sheep by name. The eastern shepherds give names to their sheep, as Europeans generally give to their dogs; and by its name the eastern shepherd will call any sheep in his flock, and it will immediately come out and follow him. C.

Ver. 4. Goeth before them. The eastern shepherd, having often to conduct his flock far, and through unfrequented tracts, in search of grass, does not drive, but walks before his flock, which is taught to look to and follow him. C.

Ver. 16. Other sheep. The Gentiles that were not of the Jewish fold, but whom our Lord in due time gathered into one, Ep. 1. 10; 2. 11—22; 3. 6, 15. C.

Ver. 18. I have power, &c. This power or authority of laying down and taking up life is peculiar to Christ—This commandment (rather, 'this commission') have I received of my Father.

—Note, When 'the WORD was made flesh' he came into the world 'to do the will' of his Father—consequently, as Messiah, did nothing but by the Father's authority or commandment. Oh, that believers would remember this part of the condition of Christ 'in the days of his flesh,' and 'go and do likewise!' C.

Ver. 22. Feast of the dedication. This feast was appointed by Judas Maccabæus to commemorate the purification of the temple after it had been profaned by Antiochus. It began on the 25th of Chisleu (answering to part of our December), and lasted for eight days. C.

Ver. 27. My sheep hear my voice. (1) As a voice of truth. (2) As a voice of love and mercy. (3) As a voice of power.—And I know them. (1) In all their waywardness. (2) In all their weakness. (3) In all their sin. (4) In all their troubles, perplexities, and dangers.—And they follow me. (1) In believing on my name. (2) In denying themselves. (3) In bearing my cross through all danger. (4) In bearing witness for me through all gainsaying. (5) In holiness in all manner of conversation. C.

Ver. 30. I and the (not my) Father are one—one in energy and power; for power is the attribute in question (see ver. 28, 29)—and therefore one in Godhead; which doctrine results from the identity of divine attributes between the Father and the Son. C.

Ver. 36. Sanctified—set apart for himself (Ps. 4. 3) by giving him 'the Spirit without measure,' and dwelling essentially in him, and working the works of Godhead in him and by him, ch. 3. 34; 14. 10; 17. 21. See also ver. 37, 38. C.

Ver. 41. John did no miracle. The performing of miracles is not essential to the proof of a divine commission. All that is absolutely necessary is doctrinal conformity with the Word of God (already established by miracles and prophecy), with holiness of life and singleness of purpose—the visible evidences of the presence, power, and authority of the Spirit of God. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Infinitely necessary and useful is Jesus Christ to sinful men, as their shepherd, to seek out, gather, and feed them, as their door and entrance to, and the precious price of, salvation. Indissoluble are his living connections with his people, and kind his regards to them. Unbounded was his love in giving his life for all men, and rising again for their justification. And through him they receive the most holy liberty, inexpressible delight, spiritual supplies, and superabundant and endless felicity. With what transcendent faithfulness, wisdom, and grace, he seeks them out, and strives to bring them into his kingdom and church, and guides, governs, protects, and goes before them through life and death into everlasting blessedness! Infallible is their perseverance, and certain their eternal life, if they continue faithful to the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus Christ. But base are the men who, without his commission, thrust themselves into offices in his church, or behave indolently, unconcerned, or tyrannically therein. Let every one that regards the life of his soul flee from them. The purpose of God certainly stands firm, whether with respect to men's salvation or ruin. But how implacable is the rage which words of infinite grace, offers of unbounded fulness, declarations of truth, and merciful miracles unnumbered, do but heighten and provoke to murder the Saviour! No wonder he abandons such, and offers his presence to others more likely to regard him.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 25, 26. Not only will the Father grant me whatever I request, but I have life in myself, and do quicken, spiritually or corporally, all sinful men. Every one therefore that believeth in me shall be renewed in his soul, and even in his body, at the resurrection; or, likewise in this world also. And no one that, being spiritually quickened, continues faithful, shall ever undergo eternal death, nor shall his body be always continued in the state of the dead. 41—43. Christ never prayed for power to work a miracle, having infinite power in himself; but here he thanked his Father for this opportunity of demonstrating his Messiahship, for the con-

4 And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he<sup>h</sup> goeth before them, and the sheep follow him: for they know his voice.

5 And <sup>a</sup>a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of strangers.<sup>1</sup>

6 This parable spake Jesus unto them: <sup>k</sup>but they understood not what things they were which he spake unto them.

7 Then said Jesus unto them again, Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the door of the sheep.

8 All <sup>n</sup>that ever came before me<sup>2</sup> are thieves and robbers: but the sheep did not hear them.

9 I<sup>o</sup> am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out,<sup>3</sup> and find pasture.

10 The<sup>p</sup> thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: <sup>q</sup>I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.<sup>4</sup>

11 I<sup>r</sup> am the good shepherd: <sup>s</sup>the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.<sup>5</sup>

12 But<sup>t</sup> he that is an hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the <sup>w</sup>wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth: and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep.

13 The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep.

14 I<sup>v</sup> am the good shepherd, and <sup>x</sup>know my sheep, <sup>y</sup>and am known of mine.

15 As<sup>z</sup> the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father:<sup>6</sup> and <sup>a</sup>I lay down my life for the sheep.

16 And<sup>b</sup> other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, <sup>c</sup>and one shepherd.

17 Therefore<sup>c</sup> doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again.

18 No<sup>d</sup> man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. <sup>e</sup>This commandment have I received of my Father.<sup>7</sup>

19 ¶ There<sup>g</sup> was a division therefore again among the Jews for these sayings.

20 And many of them said, <sup>h</sup>He hath a devil, and is mad; why hear ye him?

21 Others said, These are not the words of him that hath a devil. <sup>i</sup>Can a devil open the eyes of the blind?

<sup>1</sup> I have often seen eastern shepherds tending their flocks. I have been present when, during the heat of day, a number of flocks assembled round a fountain. The shepherds rested together for an hour or two; their sheep mingled. When the time arrived for going off again to pasture, each shepherd went through the mingled flock, then walked off slowly along his own path, uttering a peculiar call; his own sheep followed him. course is intimately connected with the healing of the blind man and the outrageous conduct of the Pharisees. They professed to be the only shepherds of God's people; Christ shows that they are in reality thieves and robbers. Instead of tending and watching the sheep, they destroy them. In the first verses of this chapter every ruler or minister in the church is a shepherd; Christ is the door; the sheep are God's true, not merely professing people; the porter is the Divine Spirit; the fold is the invisible church.—P.

22 ¶ And it was at Jerusalem the feast<sup>8</sup> of the dedication, and it was winter.

24 Then came the Jews round about him, and said unto him, How long dost thou make us to doubt?<sup>2</sup> If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly.

25 Jesus answered them, <sup>i</sup>I told you, and ye believed not: <sup>k</sup>the works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witness of me.

26 But<sup>i</sup> ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep, as I said unto you.

27 My<sup>n</sup> sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me:

28 And<sup>o</sup> I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any pluck them out of my hand.

29 My Father, <sup>p</sup>which gave them me,<sup>3</sup> is greater than all;<sup>4</sup> and none is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand.

30 I<sup>q</sup> and my Father are one.

31 ¶ Then<sup>r</sup> the Jews took up stones again to stone him.

32 Jesus answered them, <sup>s</sup>Many good works have I showed you from my Father; <sup>t</sup>for which of those works do ye stone me?

33 The Jews answered him, saying, <sup>u</sup>For a good work we stone thee not; but for blasphemy; and because that thou, being a man, makest thyself God.

34 Jesus answered them, <sup>v</sup>Is it not written in your law, I said, Ye are gods?

35 If he called them gods, <sup>w</sup>unto whom the word of God came, and <sup>x</sup>the scripture cannot be broken;

36 Say ye of him, whom <sup>y</sup>the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest; because I said, <sup>z</sup>I am the Son of God?

firmation of his disciples and the conviction of others present.

Ver. 4. Is not unto death and corruption, but to illustrate my divine power by a miraculous resurrection. This seems to be the verbal message returned to the disconsolate sisters and their suffering brother. O! that believers, when their friends are sick, would take example by Martha and Mary, and prayerfully send this message of faith to Jesus—'Lord, he whom thou lovest is sick!' And O! how certainly does murmuring give place to submission, and fear and sorrow to hope and joy, when the sufferer can say, 'My Beloved is mine, and I am his!' C.

Ver. 9. The Jews divided every day, from sunrise to sunset, into twelve hours; so that the number of hours was always the same, but the length of the hours varied according to the seasons. And as the principal means of measuring time among the ancient Jews was by sun-dials, 2 Ki. 20. 11; Is. 38. 8, a practical mathematician would have little difficulty in constructing, either one dial-plate with movable parts, capable of extension or contraction, on the hour line—or a succession of dial-plates, to be changed at brief and fixed intervals throughout the year, still dividing the absolute time of sunshine into twelve equal parts.—Note, Hence learn the necessity of measuring and noting time, and see how equal are the opportunities of working for God presented by the shortest as well as by the longest life! The question is, not how long we walk, but how circumspectly we walk. The Lord preserve our hearts from fearing and our feet from stumbling, Ps. 116. 8. C.

Ver. 36. The groaning and the weeping of Jesus appear to the Jews incontestable evidences of love. There must have, there

CHAPTER XI.

1 Christ raiseth Lazarus, four days buried. 45 Many Jews believe. 47 The high-priests and Pharisees gather a council against Christ. 49 Caiaphas prophesieth. 54 Jesus hideth himself. 55 At the passover they inquire after him, and lay wait for him.

NOW a certain man was sick, named Lazarus, of <sup>a</sup>Bethany, the town of <sup>b</sup>Mary and her sister Martha.<sup>1</sup>

2 (It<sup>c</sup> was that Mary which anointed the Lord with ointment, and wiped his feet with her hair, whose brother Lazarus was sick.)

3 Therefore his sisters sent unto him, saying, Lord, behold, <sup>d</sup>he whom thou lovest is sick.

4 When Jesus heard that, he said, <sup>e</sup>This sickness is not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby.

5 Now <sup>g</sup>Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.

6 When he had heard therefore that he was sick, <sup>h</sup>he abode two days still in the same place where he was.<sup>2</sup>

7 Then after that saith he to his disciples, Let<sup>i</sup> us go into Judea again.

8 His disciples say unto him, Master, <sup>j</sup>the Jews of late sought to stone thee; and goest thou thither again?

9 Jesus answered, Are there not twelve hours in the day?<sup>3</sup> If any man walk in the day, he stumbleth not, because he seeth the light of this world.

10 But<sup>4</sup> if a man walk in the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him.

11 These things said he: and after that he saith unto them, <sup>k</sup>Our friend Lazarus <sup>l</sup>sleepeth; but I go, that I may awake him out of sleep.

12 Then said his disciples, Lord, if he sleep, he shall do well.<sup>5</sup>

13 Howbeit Jesus spake of his death: but they thought that he had spoken of taking of rest in sleep.

14 Then said Jesus unto them <sup>m</sup>plainly, Lazarus is dead;

15 And I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, to the intent <sup>n</sup>ye may believe;<sup>6</sup> nevertheless let us go unto him.

16 Then said <sup>p</sup>Thomas, which is called Didymus, unto his fellow-disciples, Let us also go,<sup>7</sup> that we may die with him.<sup>8</sup>

17 Then when Jesus came, he found that he had lain in the grave four days already.<sup>9</sup>

18 Now Bethany was nigh unto Jerusalem, about fifteen furlongs<sup>1</sup> off:<sup>2</sup>

19 And many of the Jews came to Martha and Mary, <sup>q</sup>to comfort them concerning their brother.

20 Then Martha, as soon as she heard that Jesus was coming, went and met him: but Mary sat still in the house.

21 Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, <sup>r</sup>if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

22 But I know, that even now, <sup>s</sup>whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee.

23 Jesus saith unto her, <sup>t</sup>Thy brother shall rise again.

24 Martha saith unto him, <sup>u</sup>I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.

25 Jesus said unto her, <sup>v</sup>I am the resurrection, and the life:<sup>3</sup> he<sup>x</sup> that believeth in me, <sup>w</sup>though he were dead,<sup>4</sup> yet shall he live:

26 And<sup>z</sup> whosoever liveth and believeth in me<sup>5</sup> shall never die. <sup>a</sup>Believest thou this?

27 She saith unto him, <sup>b</sup>Yea, Lord; I believe<sup>6</sup> that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world.<sup>7</sup>

28 And when she had so said, she went her way, and called Mary her sister secretly, saying, <sup>c</sup>The Master is come, and calleth for thee.

29 As<sup>d</sup> soon as she heard that, she arose quickly, and came unto him.

30 Now Jesus was not yet come into the town, but was in that place where Martha met him.

31 The Jews then which were with her in the house, and <sup>e</sup>comforted her, when they saw Mary, that she rose up hastily and went out, followed her,<sup>8</sup> saying, She goeth unto the grave to weep there.

32 Then when Mary was come where Jesus was, and saw him, <sup>f</sup>she fell down at his feet, saying unto him, <sup>h</sup>Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

33 When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping which came with her, <sup>i</sup>he groaned in the spirit, and was <sup>g</sup>troubled, 34 And said, Where have ye laid him? They said unto him, Lord, come and see.

35 Jesus wept.<sup>1</sup>

TOMB OF LAZARUS. [JOHN, xi:43.]—The tomb of Lazarus is in Bethany, where Mary and Martha and Lazarus lived. This is a wretched and miserable village now. But because it was once the home of the family where our Savior was so often entertained it has an undying charm for the Christian world. The tomb of Lazarus is a deep vault excavated in the rock and lined with masonry. Christians and Mohammedans alike regard the place with the greatest reverence. It is absolutely certain that Lazarus was buried here. It seems reasonable to accept the place that has so long been looked upon as the tomb of Lazarus as correct. Above the tomb and the village of Bethany is a square tower called the Castle of Lazarus.

thee, That, if thou wouldest believe, thou shouldst see the glory of God?

41 Then they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid. And Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me.

42 And I knew that thou hearest me always: but because of the people which stand by I said it, that they may believe that thou hast sent me.

43 And when he thus had spoken, he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth.

44 And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave-clothes: and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus saith unto them, Loose him, and let him go.

45 Then many of the Jews which came to Mary, and had seen the things which Jesus did, believed on him.

46 But some of them went their ways to the Pharisees, and told them what things Jesus had done.

47 ¶ Then gathered the chief priests and the Pharisees a council, and said, What do we? for this man doeth many miracles.

48 If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him: and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation.

49 And one of them, named Caiaphas, being the high-priest that same year, said unto them, Ye know nothing at all,

50 Nor consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not.

51 And this spake he not of himself: but being high-priest that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation;

52 And not for that nation only, but that also he should gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad.

53 Then from that day forth they took counsel together for to put him to death.

54 Jesus therefore walked no more openly among the Jews: but went thence unto a country near to the wilderness, into a city called e The supper was in the house of Simon the leper, not of Lazarus. The only conclusion we can draw from ver. 2, is that it took place in Bethany. Matthew and Mark mention an alabaster-box of ointment, which Mark says 'she brake,' or 'crushed,' and poured on his head. Though neither Matthew nor John mention the crushing, yet as I have frequently had occasion to state, Mark is always characterized by minuteness of detail. John says 'she anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair.' Matthew and Mark say nothing of this, but simply mention the pouring on his head. There is no contradiction. Crushing the box with her hands over his head, the ointment ran down upon it as he reclined. Then with her hands already smeared she stooped and anointed his feet, wiping them with her long loose hair.—P.

Ephraim, and there continued with his disciples.

55 ¶ And the Jews' passover was nigh at hand: and many went out of the country up to Jerusalem before the passover, to purify themselves.

56 Then sought they for Jesus, and spake among themselves, as they stood in the temple, What think ye, that he will not come to the feast?

57 Now both the chief priests and the Pharisees had given a commandment, that, if any man knew where he were, he should show it, that they might take him.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Jesus excuseth Mary anointing his feet. 9 The people flock to see Lazarus. 10 The high-priests consult to kill him. 12 Christ rideth into Jerusalem. 20 Greeks desire to see Jesus. 23 He foretelleth his death. 37 The Jews are generally blinded: 42 yet many chief rulers believe, but do not confess him: 44 therefore Jesus calleth earnestly for confession of faith.

THEN Jesus, six days before the passover, came to Bethany, where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raised from the dead.

2 There they made him a supper, and Martha served: but Lazarus was one of them that sat at the table with him.

3 Then took Mary a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair: and the house was filled with the odour of the ointment.

4 Then saith one of his disciples, Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, which should betray him, 5 Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor?

6 This he said, not that he cared for the poor; but because he was a thief, and had the bag, and bare what was put therein.

7 Then said Jesus, Let her alone: against the day of my burying hath she kept this.

8 For the poor always ye have with you; but me ye have not always.

9 ¶ Much people of the Jews therefore knew that he was there: and they came not for Jesus' sake only, but that they might see Lazarus also, whom he had raised from the dead.

Ver. 49, 50. Caiaphas, according to his own view, was merely giving utterance to a common sentiment, that 'whatever is politically expedient for a nation is to be boldly executed, however it may be morally wrong in itself or injurious to individual rights.' He does not assert that Jesus for any crime deserves to die, but that, for sake of the people and nation, it is expedient that he should die. But yet, while he thus utters his own opinion, God, unknown to the speaker, overrules his words, ver. 51, and, in honour of the office of the high-priesthood, of which he was personally unworthy, he employs him, in his bloodthirstiness, as he employed Balaam in his covetousness, and draws from him an official exposition of the great doctrine of atonement by sacrifice. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Jesus keeps an exact account of all his people's works of faith and their labours of love. But the most eminent piety cannot exclude afflictions and death. Yet if Christ love us, we may boldly apply to him in our distress. And happy is it if our troubles give him an opportunity to glorify himself, and either prepare us for, or usher us into, everlasting happiness. He often indeed graciously defers relief till it become seemingly impossible. But neither danger nor provocation can make him to neglect his work in its proper season. And with cheerfulness and activity we ought always to follow his example. The death of our godly friends should make life less sweet, death less bitter, and heaven more desirable to us. Dead saints ought not to be lamented as lost, but as gone before, to be with Christ, and to be raised with him to glory.—Many mournful changes may happen in a short time. And it is absurd to pride ourselves in our bodies that may quickly become so ugly and loathsome. It is very friendly to attempt comforting the distressed; but only Jesus' presence can afford solid relief. He at once delightfully acts as the mighty God, the object of faith, and raiser of the dead; and as the affectionate man, whose heart sympathizes with the afflicted, and is burdened with their unbelief. With eagerness then should we run to meet him, and pour our lamentations, as well as our requests, into his bosom. Secret fellowship may ascertain his approaching gracious deliverances. For quickly his salvation comes, whenever our heart is prepared for it by faith. And we never believe aright till we receive and rest on him as God's eternal Son and our given Saviour. With eager delight he lays hold on every opportunity to comfort his people and glorify his Father: and with the greatest ease he can grant instantaneous deliverances to either soul or body. No death, no bands can hinder his work. Alas! that while his marvellous works affect some, they should but enrage others against him. And great must be the wickedness of human hearts that can be thus influenced. But none are more furious enemies to the Redeemer than careless clergymen; and nothing more hurries men into plots and practices against him than worldly views. While all things work together for the redemption of those who love God, the sinful methods taken to preserve nations do but accelerate their ruin. While Christ hides himself, he may be sought for different ends; and though he delay his approach, he will always attend the ordinances of his own grace.

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 23-26. This request of the Greeks manifests that the time appointed of the Father for glorifying me, in the salvation of the Gentiles as m Alford says on this passage:—'Could not, i.e. it was otherwise ordained in the divine counsels. No attempt to escape this meaning will agree with the prophecy cited ver. 40. But the inability, as thus stated, is coincident with the fullest freedom of the human will.'—P.

and <sup>h</sup>where I am, there shall also my servant be: 'if any man serve me, him will my Father honour.

27 Now<sup>j</sup> is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour: <sup>k</sup>but for this cause came I unto this hour.

28 Father,<sup>l</sup> glorify thy name. <sup>n</sup>Then came there a voice from heaven, saying, I <sup>o</sup>have both glorified it, and will <sup>p</sup>glorify it again.

29 The people therefore that stood by, and heard it, said that it thundered: others said, An angel spake to him.

30 Jesus answered and said, This voice came not because of me, <sup>q</sup>but for your sakes.

31 Now<sup>r</sup> is the judgment of this world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out.<sup>9</sup>

32 And I, if I be <sup>s</sup>lifted up from the earth, <sup>t</sup>will draw <sup>u</sup>all men unto me.

33 (This he said, <sup>v</sup>signifying what death he should die.)

34 The people answered him, We have heard out of the law<sup>1</sup> that<sup>x</sup> Christ abideth for <sup>2</sup>ever: and how sayest thou, The Son of man must be lifted up? <sup>y</sup>who is this Son of man?

35 Then Jesus said unto them, <sup>z</sup>Yet a little while is the light with you. <sup>a</sup>Walk while ye have the light, lest <sup>b</sup>darkness come upon you: for <sup>c</sup>he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth.

36 While<sup>d</sup> ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be <sup>e</sup>the children of light. These things spake Jesus, and <sup>f</sup>departed, and did hide himself from them.

37 ¶ But though he had done so many miracles before them, <sup>g</sup>yet they believed not on him:

38 That the saying of Esaias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he spake, 'Lord, who hath believed our report? and to whom hath <sup>i</sup>the arm of the Lord been revealed?

39 Therefore<sup>k</sup> they could not believe, because that Esaias said again,

40 He<sup>l</sup> hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them.<sup>3</sup> well as the Jews, is just at hand.—Were I to continue in my present state, without dying a sacrifice for sin, I should not have the honour of raising up a spiritual seed to bear my image, and show forth my praise; but being made an offering for sin, I shall be glorified in the conversion, and salvation, and praises of repentant sinners.—And ye likewise must be conformed to me in entering into your glory through much tribulation: for whoever, from love to this life, and the enjoyments of it, denies, disowns, and rejects me, that he may escape persecution and danger, shall certainly fall short of the heavenly felicity; and he that undervalues his natural life, and all its enjoyments, for my sake, shall certainly inherit eternal life as his gracious reward. If any man therefore would be a true disciple and servant to me, let him follow my example, and the instructions of my Word, providence, and Spirit. Then shall he quickly share with me in the felicities of the heavenly world, in which my divine nature is at present, and my human will shortly be; and his unfeigned devoting himself to my service shall issue in his obtaining immortal honours from my Father. 27-30. My soul is inexpressibly distressed, in the views of my approaching sufferings and tribulations from every quarter. If it were possible, I could gladly be excused from it; but I do not insist upon it, as the great end of my coming into the world is to undergo them: I therefore entirely resign myself to the will of God, and beg that, in all I do or suffer, his perfections may be glorified to the highest.—To which the Father, by a voice from heaven, replied, That he had already glorified himself in his obedience, ministry, and miracles, and would further glorify himself in his sufferings and death, and in the complete salvation of Jews and Gentiles flowing therefrom. 31. Certainly and quickly shall both Jews and Gentiles be tried with regard to their thoughts of me; the righteous shall be distinguished from the wicked, and they shall be acquitted or condemned answerably to their believing or not believing in me. And Satan, who hath long reigned over most part of the world, in ignorance, idolatry, and other wickedness, and who reigns in the hearts of worldly men, shall be totally vanquished, his claim defeated, his oracles silenced, and himself be cast out of men's hearts, by the powerful spread of the gospel. 32. And I, after first offering up myself a sacrifice for sin on a cross, and in the virtue of it ascending to my Father's right hand, will erect my kingdom upon the ruins of his, inviting men of all ranks, Gentiles as well as Jews, to myself by my Word and Spirit. 35, 36. As the light of my personal ministry, or even the dispensation by my apostles, is to continue but a short time with you Jews, ye ought without delay to make the most diligent improvement of it; for if ye do not, ye must be left to continue in your ignorance and unbelief, to your utter destruction, in time and eternity. While you have me and my gospel among you to show you the way of salvation, believe in me that ye may receive the truth in the love of it, and be under its infallible direction, till ye be admitted into the mansions 41 These things said Esaias, "when he saw his glory, and spake of him.

42 ¶ Nevertheless "among the chief rulers also many believed on him; but "because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue:

43 For<sup>a</sup> they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God.

44 ¶ Jesus<sup>c</sup> cried and said, "He that believeth on me, believeth not on me,<sup>d</sup> but on him that sent me.

45 And<sup>t</sup> he that seeth me seeth him<sup>5</sup> that sent me.

46 I<sup>u</sup> am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness.

47 And "if any man hear my words, and believe not, I judge him "not:<sup>7</sup> for I came not to judge the world, but to save the world.

48 He<sup>r</sup> that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: "the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day.

49 For<sup>z</sup> I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak.

50 And I know that "his commandment<sup>8</sup> is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.

of glory above. 44-50. He that truly believes in me as the promised Messiah, believes not in me only or ultimately, but, together with and through me, believes in my heavenly Father, who sent me into the world to seek and save lost sinners. And he who, by faith, discerns my person and office, is thereby led into the knowledge of my Father's nature, perfections, and will. I am come into this world to dispel the darkness of ignorance, superstition, and idolatry, and to bring life and immortality to light by the gospel, that whosoever receives and trusts in me should not continue under the power of spiritual blindness, nor wander in the way to eternal misery, but be instructed and guided in the way to everlasting blessedness. And if men, who have had opportunities of hearing and knowing my gospel, wilfully refuse it, and me in it, I will at present neither accuse them to the Father, nor pass nor execute upon them any sentence of condemnation; as the direct design of my coming into the world is not to accuse, condemn, or punish, but to secure, offer, and graciously give spiritual and eternal salvation to all that believe, whether Jews or Gentiles. But he that contemns and rejects me and my doctrines, shall, in due time, find an impartial Judge to try, condemn, and punish him: and the truths which I have preached shall be the rule of judgment, and the awful means of aggravating his offences in the last day. For the holy, excellent, supernatural, and gracious nature of the doctrines which I have taught, and my manner of delivering and confirming the same, manifest that I have uttered them as one directed and authorized by my Father. And whatever ye think of it, I know that what I preach by his authority is the only means of bringing lost sinners to everlasting life; and it is at your infinite peril to reject it.

Ver. 3. Some consider this event distinct from that of Matthew (ch. xxvi.) and Mark (ch. xiv.)—(1) Because this was six days before the passover, that only two, Mat. 26. 2. (2) This seems to have occurred in the house of Lazarus, that in the house of Simon the leper, Mat. 26. 6. (3) In this Mary anointed the feet of Jesus, in that a woman unnamed poured ointment on his head, Mat. 26. 7. Others consider the three narratives identical, though the circumstances differ, judging it more probable that Matthew and Mark should have dislocated the chronology of the events, than that our Lord should have twice been anointed within four days. C.

Ver. 24. This statement of our Lord, and that of Paul, 1 Co.

15. 36, have been impugned as contrary to fact; for, say the objectors, if the grain of wheat die, there can be no produce. This objection is a melancholy specimen of ignorance. When a man dies, the outward body dies—the inward "spirit returns to God who gave it." So, when the outward parts of the seed are chemically changed by moisture and heat, the inward germ, the embryo plant, is developed, and presents, if not an intended type, yet a natural parallel and illustration, of the resurrection. C.

Ver. 27. If our Lord prayed to be saved and was not answered, how can it be said that "the Father heareth him always?" ch. xi. 42. Two simple and efficient answers present themselves:—(1) The words may be taken interrogatively: "What shall I say? (Shall I say) Father, save me from this hour? (Nay) but for this cause came I unto this hour." (2) A more literal translation will totally remove the difficulty without the interrogation: "Father, save me out of this hour;—(which prayer was literally fulfilled, for out of that hour of darkness he arose more bright than ever):—'but for this cause came I into this world,' and therefore know I must patiently endure till thy name is glorified in my sufferings. C.

Ver. 41. The glory which Isaiah saw, ch. 6. 1, 5, 8, 9, and the person of whom he spoke, was certainly JEHOVAH, JEHOVAH OF HOSTS; and certainly the words of Isaiah are here applied to Christ. The conclusion is, therefore, inevitable—Christ is JEHOVAH "manifest in the flesh." C.

REFLECTIONS.—Grateful acknowledgments should never be long delayed. While true believers think all expense and service for Christ too little, hypocrites grudge him either heart, hand, or purse: and it is not regard to the poor, but love to the world, that sways them. While some gospel-hearers relish the report of Jesus and his works, others are thereby filled with murderous rancour. And the more Christ honours men, the world will hate them the more. Yea, the stronger evidence of his character Christ gives, obstinate unbelievers are the more exasperated; and if God check them, they become more resolute in wickedness. But let them rage as they please, Jesus will royally triumph over all opposition, fulfil his Father's promises, and honour his perfections, in both his sufferings and glories.—Thrice happy is it, if even curiosity lead us to the saving knowledge of him, and if regard to his people occasion our intimacy with himself!—Great is the virtue of his obedience and death for glorifying God, vanquishing Satan, and converting Jews, and especially Gentiles, to God. Much self-denial is necessary in following him aright. And transcendent is their reward who faithfully serve him, and, by faith, improve the light of his gospel while they have it. But great is their guilt and misery who indulge spite,

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Jesus washeth the disciples' feet: exhorteth them to humility and charity. 18 He foretelleth, and discovereth to John by a token, that Judas should betray him: 31 commandeth them to love one another, 36 and forewarneth Peter of his denial.

NOW before<sup>a</sup> the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew<sup>1</sup> that "his hour was come that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, "having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end.<sup>2</sup>

2 And "supper being "ended,<sup>4</sup> ("the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray him;)

3 Jesus knowing that "the Father had given all things into his hands, and that "he was come from God, and went to God;

4 He<sup>i</sup> riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel, and girded himself.

5 After that he poureth water into a bason, and began to "wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded.

6 Then cometh he to Simon Peter: and Peter<sup>5</sup> saith unto him, Lord, "dost thou wash my feet?

7 Jesus answered and said unto him, "What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.

8 Peter saith unto him, "Thou shalt never wash my feet.<sup>6</sup> Jesus answered him, "If I wash thee not,<sup>7</sup> thou hast no part with me.

devise cavils, and shut their eyes against the illuminations of his Word; or who, for secular honours, avoid the open profession of his name. Abandoned by God, they go on in the ways of ignorance and self-deceit, till they land in the depths of hell. Dreadful will be their case when he, who came into the world to save men, shall judge and condemn them at last. Yea, nothing will more fearfully aggravate their guilt and punishment than abused means of salvation.

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 1, 7. You know not the reasons of what I am now doing, and little think what is my meaning in it; but I will in a little time somewhat explain my design; and when the Holy Ghost shall be poured out from on high he will further acquaint you with it, and make you to experience the benefit of it. 8. You may think your refusal is a humble aversion to my disparaging myself; but you cannot be my disciple if you set yourself against my authority, wisdom, and love; and you can have no fellowship with me, or interest in my saving blessings, unless you be spiritually washed in my blood, and, by my Word and Spirit, from the guilt and filth of your sins. 10. He who is once justified and sanctified by my blood and Spirit, needs only to be further cleansed, in the daily exercise of faith and repentance, from the guilt and defilement which, through remaining corruption, he perpetually contracts by his conversation in the world. And most, though not all, of you present are cleansed in this respect. 18. I do not expect you all to be either obedient or happy. I know that, though I have chosen you all to the apostleship, there is one among you, sitting familiarly with us at table, that is not seeking faith, holiness, and salvation, and who will ungratefully desert and betray me. 31, 32. Now the hour is just at hand when I, the Messiah, shall, by more remarkable sufferings and death, gloriously fulfil all my engagements in the room of sinners, conquer sin, Satan, and all his assistants, and secure an eternal redemption; yea, all the perfections of my heavenly Father shall be harmoniously exalted in this my astonishing self-abasement, and therefore shall he honour me in my sufferings by amazing signs and wonders, and with testimonies 3 Simon Peter saith unto him, Lord, <sup>not</sup> my feet only, but also my hands and my head.

10 Jesus saith to him, He that is <sup>2</sup>washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit: and <sup>3</sup>ye are clean, but not all.

11 For he knew who should betray him; therefore said he, Ye are not all clean.

12 So after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, and was set down again, he said unto them, <sup>4</sup>Know ye what I have done to you?

13 Ye <sup>5</sup>call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am.

14 If <sup>6</sup>I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet.

15 For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you.

16 Verily, <sup>7</sup>verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him.

17 If <sup>8</sup>ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.

18 ¶ I speak not of you all: <sup>9</sup>I know whom I have chosen: but that the scripture may be fulfilled, <sup>10</sup>He that eateth bread with me <sup>11</sup>hath lifted up his heel against me.

19 Now <sup>12</sup>I <sup>13</sup>tell you before it come, that, when it is come to pass, ye may believe that I am he.

20 Verily, <sup>14</sup>verily, I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send receiveth me: and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me.

21 When Jesus had thus said, <sup>15</sup>he was troubled in spirit, and testified, and said, <sup>16</sup>Verily, verily, I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me.<sup>17</sup>

22 Then <sup>18</sup>the disciples looked one on another, doubting of whom he spake.

<sup>20</sup> Satan had formerly, through the influence of avarice, 'put into the heart of Judas (the thought) to betray' his Lord: now through the door which, not the suggestion, but the entertainment of that thought, had opened, he himself enters in, and takes full possession of his slave.—C.
<sup>21</sup> This is the commencement of Christ's last discourse to his disciples. At first there is a dialogue between him and them as they sat at table—they asking, and he replying; 'but when they had risen from the supper (ch. 14. 31), the discourse of Christ took a higher form: surrounding their Master the disciples listened to the words of life, and seldom spoke. 23 Now there was leaning on Jesus' bosom one of his disciples, whom <sup>1</sup>Jesus loved.<sup>2</sup>

24 Simon Peter therefore beckoned<sup>3</sup> to him, that he should ask who it should be of whom he spake.

25 He then lying<sup>4</sup> on Jesus' breast<sup>5</sup> saith unto him, Lord, who is it?

26 Jesus<sup>6</sup> answered, He it is to whom I shall give a sop,<sup>7</sup> when I have dipped it. And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iseariot, the son of Simon.<sup>8</sup>

27 And after the sop <sup>9</sup>Satan entered<sup>10</sup> into him. Then said Jesus unto him, 'That thou doest, do quickly.

28 Now no man at the table knew for what intent he spake this unto him.

29 For some of them thought, because <sup>1</sup>Judas had the bag, that Jesus had said unto him, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast; or, that he should give something to the poor.<sup>1</sup>

30 He then, having received the sop, <sup>2</sup>went immediately out: and it was night.

31 ¶ Therefore when he was gone out, Jesus said, <sup>3</sup>Now is the Son of man glorified, and <sup>4</sup>God is glorified in him.<sup>2</sup>

32 If <sup>5</sup>God be glorified in him, God shall also glorify him in himself, and shall straightway glorify him.

33 Little children, <sup>6</sup>yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me: and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you.

34 A <sup>7</sup>new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.

35 By <sup>8</sup>this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.

36 ¶ Simon Peter said unto him, <sup>9</sup>Lord, whither goest thou? Jesus answered him, extorted from enemies themselves; and shall speedily and suitably reward me with a glorious resurrection, ascension, and exaltation at his right hand. 34. The command of brotherly love is here called NEW, not as if it had not all along existed in the law of God, but because Christ revived it when it was sadly corrupted and almost forgotten, and enjoined it by a new example, and with new explications, motives, and enforcements, that it might be observed with a new spirit and temper, and in a new manner, as a fundamental law of his kingdom, written in his people's hearts by the spirit of the New Testament; and because it is most excellent, and will be eternally in full force.

Ver. 1. The former chapter having closed John's account of our Lord's public teaching and procedure, here commences a specimen of his private instruction and domestic intercourse with his disciples—a portion of the Word most deeply interesting, both as the best example for fathers and mothers, and the highest practical authority for the use of family prayer. C.

Ver. 10. He that is washed. Rather, 'He that is bathed,' whose whole body has been washed (for so the original signifies), needs not but to wash his feet. That is, he that has once truly received the gospel, who has been 'justified by faith,' and entered into 'peace with God,' will never again require such renewal; but will require, nevertheless, continual watchfulness and prayer, that in his daily walk he may 'keep himself unspotted from the world.' C.

Ver. 14. Had this precept been literal, there would doubtless have been some subsequent mention of it in the Acts or Epistles. The precept, however, is not literal, but emblematic, as the act of which it is the exposition. It is annually caricatured at Rome, when he who proudly professes to be the successor of Peter, and blasphemously asserts himself to be the vicar of Christ, washes the feet of a company of poor; and it is truly fulfilled whosoever one Christian, of whatever rank, performs an act of mercy and kindness to another; but it is violated wherever pride despises, indifference neglects, or covetousness refuses to condescend and relieve. C.

Ver. 26. The 'sop' was a portion of the paschal supper, collected in the fingers and dipped in the sauce, and handed to a guest as a mark of attention.—Note, From considering the position of our Lord and his disciples, and the fact that our Lord, while John was reclining on his bosom, could not have reached to any considerable distance, it seems probable that Judas lay immediately to his left, so that had our Lord laid down his head as John did it, it would have rested on the breast of the traitor. C.

Ver. 31. Now is the Son of man glorified. In the translation the prophetic present is put for the future; in the Greek it is the preterite, used also prophetically to express the nearness or certainty of an event; see ch. 15. 6. The Son is glorified by the resurrection, the victory over death and hell, speedily to be achieved. 'God (the Father) is glorified' in the manifestation of his love to sinners through Jesus. C.

Ver. 32. In himself. Either in the Father 'himself,' by again receiving the Son into the bosom of eternal love, or in the Son 'himself,' by exhibiting in his Godhead-glory the power of his resurrection, ascension, and kingdom. C.

Ver. 34. A new commandment. 'New' to you; for you have hitherto been ambitious and envious, and at strife for supremacy, that can never operate but in a 'new' heart, enforced by a 'new' and unchangeable sanction, 'as I have loved you,' and that will abide for ever 'new,' as the sun in the firmament that waxes not old or dim—the emblem of myself, 'the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—How affectionate and permanent is Christ's love to all men! Astonishing was his condescension for their instruction and advantage. And it is impossible to be his disciples unless he wash us by his blood and Spirit, and we are willing to obey his command, and imitate his condescension and kindness. If his providences be dark, we must wait till he explain them, and meanwhile daily apply his Word, Spirit, and blood, for the further purification of our heart and life. Without hesitation we must always submit to his authority, and put all the knowledge which we have of his truths into practice. To know better, and do worse, is doubly criminal. And, alas! awful is the thought that any who are in profession Christ's disciples, and under the highest visible relation and obligation to him, should kick at and betray him! But fearfully Satan leads men captive at his will when they are left to their own corruptions. Yea, never is he more ready to enter into men than when they are employed in solemn acts of religion; and desertion of godly society is a common inlet to final apostasy.—It is a great mercy that the Lord knows them that are his, and will assist them in their spiritual state and gracious course, if they are only faithful and walk in him as they received him; and that, notwithstanding the most dreadful falls, he seeks to restore by his love, and afterwards bring them to his glory. Transcendent were the glories of our Redeemer in his death and exaltation to heaven; and marvellous the displays of the divine perfections in him, as manifested, and to be for ever manifested, in the salvation of men. Strong, then, is the reason, and plain the duty, of following him through good report

Whither I go, thou canst not follow me now; but thou shalt follow me afterwards.

37 Peter said unto him, Lord, "why cannot I follow thee now? I will lay down my life for thy sake.

38 Jesus answered him, "Wilt thou lay down thy life for my sake? Verily, verily, I say unto thee, The cock shall not crow, till thou hast denied me thrice.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Christ comforteth his disciples with the hope of heaven: 6 professeth himself the way, the truth, and the life, and one with the Father: 13 assureth their prayers in his name to be effectual: 15 requesteth love and obedience: 16 promiseth the Holy Ghost, the Comforter: 27 and leaveth his peace with them.

CHAPTER XIV. Ver. 1–3. Be not discomposed or terrified at my being betrayed, nor at my approaching ignominies and death, nor at the disappointments and sufferings which ye may be called to undergo on my account; but labour to live by faith, not only on God's promises, but also on my character, offices, relations, work, and fulness, as represented in the gospel, as the blessed means of quieting your hearts. For in heaven, where my Father dwells in the highest manifestations of himself, there are many delightful abodes, and some in which ye shall have eternal rest and satisfaction after your toil and trouble on earth. If it had been otherwise, I would have faithfully and kindly undeceived you; but I am going away from you by death to secure that glory for you, and, by my ascension, to take possession of it in your name, and to prepare everything in the best manner for your arrival thither.—And when, and as surely as, I go in this manner to prepare heaven for you, I will quickly return, by my Spirit, to prepare you for it; and will receive your souls at death, and your whole persons at my second appearance, into my immediate presence and fellowship, that ye may be for ever in a state of freedom, honour, and delight, where I already am in my divine nature, and shortly will be in my human. 6, 7. I myself am the only mean of access to and acceptance with God, and of your receiving grace and eternal blessedness from him. I am the Way, as, by my own blood, I am entering into the holy place, and will thereby open a path for you to follow me. I am the Truth, as all the legal types and ancient promises are fulfilled in me, and as I attest the truths of God and teach you the sure way to heaven. And I am the Life, as I have life in myself, and am the author of spiritual and eternal life to all that believe in me; so that no man can acceptably approach to God in worship, or have any comfortable communion with him, by faith and love here, or any personal admission into his immediate presence hereafter, in any other way than by me. And if ye had known what I am in my person, natures, and office, ye would have known what my Father is, who is one with me in all essential properties. And as ye have begun to see him in the manifestations which I have made of his power and goodness, ye shall hereafter, by the descent of the Holy Ghost, and by other means, know more and more of him. 9–11. Whoever is duly acquainted with me, who am his express image, in my person, offices, and work, hath seen the most lively displays of the Father's perfections. Why, then, after so long acquaintance with me, do you unadvisedly desire a visible representation of him to satisfy all your doubts? Do you not yet believe that I and my Father, though distinct persons, are essentially united, and have the most real, mutual, and intimate communion in Godhead? For neither do I preach the doctrines which you have heard, nor perform the miraculous works which you have seen, but as inseparably united to and sent by him. Believe therefore upon the authority of my Word, and upon the credit of my miracles which I perform in so godlike a manner, that I and my Father have an essential and inseparable inbeing in one another. 12–14. And I assure you, my disciples, that if ye believe in me, according to the declarations which I have made of myself, ye shall be enabled to do as great miracles as ye have seen me do; nay, be instrumental in the far greater and more extensive work of converting multitudes of Jews and Gentiles through all nations of the world; because I will ascend to heaven to intercede for and send down my Spirit upon you and them. And whatsoever ye shall ask for the glory of God, and your own assistance, acceptance, and success, upon the ground of my grant and promise, and with humble dependence upon my wisdom and power, faithfulness and grace, merit and advocacy, I will certainly perform it in answer to your prayers, that the Father may manifest his glorious perfections through my obedience and sufferings, and in my gracious and almighty works. 15–17. Since such shall be the fruits of my departure from you, instead of being anxiously concerned at losing my bodily presence, or at the disappointment of your secular expectations, show your affection to me in a conscientious respect to all my commandments.—And to encourage you herein, I, as your High-priest and Advocate, will intercede effectually with my Father for you; and he, in concurrence with me, will send you another Counsellor, Advocate, and Comforter, to supply the want of my bodily presence, in instructing, assisting, and exciting you to every duty, in pleading your cause against your enemies, and comforting you in all your tribulations: who shall not abide with you a little while, as I have done, but in every period of time and eternity—even the Holy Ghost, who, being of the same nature with me and my Father, is truth itself, infinitely faithful, and the author and teacher of all truth; and whom caral and unregenerate men do not entertain or embrace, because they have no true knowledge of or affection towards him; but ye who are enlightened and renewed by his operation have an experimental acquaintance with him; for he at present dwells, and works, and manifests himself in you, by his gracious and miraculous influences; and shall quickly further manifest himself in you with increasing light, power, and consolation. 18–20. And though I am going from you by death, I will not leave you destitute, exposed, friendless, and forlorn, but will pay you repeated visits after my resurrection; and will return, by my Spirit, after my ascension, to your unspeakable comfort and advantage. Shortly these wicked men who reject, despise, and abuse me, shall see me no more on earth, but ye shall see me alive after my passion; and because I am the living God, and shall rise again to an immortal life in my manhood, and always live in heaven as the head of my mystical body, ye shall, in union to my person, in fellowship with me, and by virtue derived from me, live spiritually, in a state of justification, sanctification, and consolation, in this world, and of glorification in the next. And when I have risen from the dead, as a triumphant conqueror over sin and Satan, death and hell, and have poured out my Spirit upon you, ye shall begin more clearly to understand that I am essentially one with the Father, and that ye are spiritually united to me as the source of your life. 21–24. Whoever, by virtue of this union with me, not only hears, but receives, hides in his cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you.

18 I<sup>a</sup> will not leave you comfortless:<sup>7</sup> I will come to you.

19 Yet<sup>e</sup> a little while, and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me: <sup>9</sup>because I live, ye shall live also.

20 At that day ye shall know <sup>b</sup>that I am in my Father, and <sup>c</sup>ye in me, and I in you.

21 He<sup>j</sup> that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that<sup>k</sup> loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him.

22 Judas<sup>l</sup> saith unto him, (not Iscariot,) Lord, how<sup>n</sup> is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world?

23 Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and <sup>o</sup>we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.

24 He<sup>p</sup> that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings: <sup>q</sup>and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me.

25 These<sup>r</sup> things have I spoken unto you, being <sup>s</sup>yet present with you.

heart, and faithfully observes, my commandments, manifests his love to me; and shall in return be accepted and approved of, and delighted in, by me and my Father; and we will favour him with the peculiar manifestations of our glory; multiply the tokens of our special presence with him, by our Word, ordinances, and Spirit, and continue to hold the most free and intimate fellowship with him, as the spiritual house and temple in which we desire to dwell. 26, 27. But when, after my death and ascension to heaven, the Holy Ghost, whom the Father shall, for my merit and upon my intercession, send as a Guide, Advocate, and Comforter, to supply my room and carry on my work, is come unto you, he shall lead you into a more clear and extensive acquaintance with all truths necessary to be known or preached, and shall revive in your minds the remembrance of all the particulars which ye have heard from me, that ye may fully apprehend and properly improve the same. And meanwhile, as your parting and dying friend, I not only earnestly wish for you, but promise, and graciously bestow upon you, all that solid and substantial peace and happiness which I secure and enjoy, and which the world neither can give you nor take from you. Let therefore no apprehensions of my approaching death, nor of your own loss or trouble, discompose your minds. 28, 29. I have told you that I am just going to leave you with a design to return and receive you into my Father's heavenly palace. If your love to me were truly spiritual, regular, and considerate, instead of being troubled, ye would, both for my sake and your own, rejoice at my departure to my Father, that I, his servant as man and mediator, may with him enjoy the utmost blessedness, and all power in heaven and earth, as the reward of my obedience and suffering, to exercise it for your advantage.—And I have told you these things beforehand, that when you see them accomplished ye may be the more confirmed in your belief of my being the promised Messiah, able and ready to fulfil whatever I have promised to you. 30, 31. I shall have little opportunity of discoursing more to you before my death; for Satan, who formerly pretended to offer me all the kingdoms of this world, and who powerfully works in the hearts of its rulers and people, is now making his last effort, stirring up his evil instruments, to unite their stratagems and force for murdering me. But he can find no corruption in me to work upon by his temptations, or to give him power over me. Nor can he hinder my death from tending to the glory of my Father, the salvation of believers, and destruction of his own kingdom, or even bring it about, without my own free consent. But to make it evident, both to friends and foes, that I love my Father, and am now heartily willing to obey his commandment in laying down my life for all the world, let us therefore rise from this table and retire to the garden, whither my enemies are coming to apprehend me.

Ver. 9. He that hath seen me hath seen the Father. God, in his infinity of being and perfection, must be essentially invisible to every finite creature; for it is manifestly impossible for the finite, either by bodily or mental sight, to comprehend the infinite. God therefore becomes 'manifest in the flesh,' and he that has, on examination and conviction, acknowledged Jesus to be the 'Son of God,' has seen all that man can see of the eternal love, the tender mercy, the overflowing goodness, the unerring wisdom, and the saving power of 'God the Father.' C.

Ver. 12. This promise has undoubtedly a special reference to the apostles, and was most literally fulfilled when Peter, not by a power inherent in himself (as was the power of our Lord), but merely by a power derived from the name of Jesus, converted, by one sermon, 3000 (Ac. 2. 41, 47), and by another, 5000 souls (Ac. 4. 4); and when Paul turned to the Gentiles, preached the gospel in every nation, and reared up churches in every city. And greater by far than all miracles upon their bodies were these miracles of converting grace upon the souls of men. The promise has moreover an encouraging reference to every believer; for he that 'attempts great things for God will also, in due time, perform great things for God.' See, for instruction and encouragement, almost every history of Protestant missions to the heathen. C.

Ver. 16. I will pray the Father. If Jesus prayed to the Father, then, say the deniers of the true and proper Godhead of the Word, how could he be God? for God would thus be found praying to God. This objection proceeds upon two oversights—1. That Jesus was as truly man as he was truly God. 2. That man prays only in proportion as he is God-possessed.—

give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let <sup>a</sup>not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.

28 Ye have heard how I said unto you, <sup>b</sup>I go away, and come again unto you. If ye loved me, <sup>c</sup>ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father: for my Father is <sup>d</sup>greater than I.

29 And<sup>b</sup> now I have told you before it come to pass, that, when it is come to pass, ye might believe.

30 Hereafter I will not talk much with you: for <sup>e</sup>the prince of this world cometh, and <sup>f</sup>hath nothing in me.<sup>9</sup>

31 But<sup>e</sup> that the world may know that I love the Father; and as the Father gave me commandment, even so I do. Arise, let us go hence.

CHAPTER XV.

1 The consolation and mutual love between Christ and his members, under the parable of the vine. 18 A comfort in the hatred and persecution of the world. 26 The office of the Holy Ghost, and of the apostles.

I AM<sup>a</sup> the true vine, and my Father is <sup>b</sup>the husbandman.

2 Every<sup>c</sup> branch in me<sup>d</sup> that beareth not fruit he taketh away: and <sup>e</sup>every branch that beareth fruit he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.

3 Now<sup>e</sup> ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you.

4 Abide<sup>g</sup> in me, and I in you.<sup>2</sup> As<sup>h</sup> the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me.

Wherefore, as in Jesus 'dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily,' from him, as our Mediator, must ever ascend the voice of all our necessities to the Father, and through him must come down, in reply, 'every good and every perfect gift.' C.

Ver. 23. We will come unto him, &c. The union of Jesus and the Father in one word, 'we;' and in one action, 'we will come;' and in one permanent 'abode' with every believer, is surely an assertion of the Godhead attribute of omnipresence common to the Father and the Son which is not to be resisted or gainsaid! Had the speaker been a mere man or the highest angel, the language had been folly, falsehood, and blasphemy! C.

Ver. 28. My Father is greater than I. This is the accustomed stronghold of all who deny the Godhead of the Son. But surely, whether they assert Jesus to be mere man or highest angel, the declaration that God was 'greater' in power than either man or angel amounts to the merest and most useless truism, conveying no new information. How, then, is the Father greater than the Son? Even as every believer is greater, not in nature, but in work, because the Son has gone in righteousness to the Father (see ver. 12), and thence supplies him with grace and power, ver. 13. Thus also the Father is greater, not in nature, but in working for the glory of the Son, than was the Son, either for his own glory or the glory of the Father. In the days of his humiliation he 'finished the work which the Father had given him to do,' but no more.—But the Father has reserved 'in his own power' (Ac. 1. 7) the 'greater work' of progressively subduing all the enemies of the Son, even to the last enemy, death, 1 Co. 15. 28. C.

REFLECTIONS.—What a safe and suitable object of faith is our Redeemer! All his Father's perfections shine in him as his only begotten Son and mediatorial Servant. There is no saving knowledge of, faith in, or fellowship with God, but through him. Infinite was his condescension in becoming his Father's servant, and cheerfully yielding up himself to obedience and sufferings. And great is the glory to which he is advanced as his reward. It is a sure confirmation to our faith that all his predictions are exactly accomplished. And strong is the consolation to our souls that he is our new and living way to God and glory; and that he has risen from the dead, and in our nature ascended to heaven, to secure our interest there, and provide delightful mansions for us. In death, and at the resurrection, he will therefore receive us to, and keep us for ever with, himself. His life secures ours, spiritual and eternal; and his and his Father's presence, and his Spirit's indwelling influence, shall refresh and com-

5 I am the vine, ye are the branches: he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me<sup>3</sup> ye can do nothing.<sup>4</sup>

6 If<sup>j</sup> a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned.

7 If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, <sup>k</sup>ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.

8 Herein<sup>i</sup> is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;<sup>5</sup> so<sup>n</sup> shall ye be my disciples.

9 As<sup>o</sup> the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you: <sup>p</sup>continue ye in my love.

10 If<sup>a</sup> ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love.

11 These<sup>r</sup> things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you,<sup>6</sup> and that your joy might be full.

12 ¶ This<sup>t</sup> is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you.

13 Greater<sup>t</sup> love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.

14 Ye<sup>u</sup> are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.

15 Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I have called you friends: <sup>v</sup>for all <sup>w</sup>things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you.

16 Ye<sup>x</sup> have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and <sup>y</sup>ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain: that <sup>z</sup>whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name,<sup>8</sup> he may give it you.

17 These<sup>a</sup> things I command you, that ye love one another.

18 ¶ If<sup>b</sup> the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you.

19 If<sup>c</sup> ye were of the world,<sup>9</sup> the world would fort our hearts; his peace allays our troubles and our fears; his answers to our prayers supply our wants; and his instructions and influences graciously conduct us to the heavenly mansions, where we shall sit with him on his throne, and see him as he is. Astonishing is it that he should thus manifest himself unto us and not unto the world! And if we desire further discoveries of his glory, and experience of his goodness, let us love him, keep his commandments, and faithfully follow him whithersoever he goeth.

CHAPTER XV. Ver. 1-5. In my peculiar relation to the church, I am the fountain of spiritual influence, and the means of conveying it to her members: and my Father plants and takes care of me, and of all that are connected with me. Such members of the church as are united to me only in profession and appearance, without bringing forth the fruits of holiness, he, in his righteous judgment, cuts off as unprofitable and injurious. Such, as being spiritually and vitally united to me by my Spirit and faith, bring forth fruits of righteousness, he, by the various methods of his Word, ordinances, influences, and rods, purges from their remaining corruption, that they may abound more in good works, and have their end everlasting life. Now therefore, Judas being gone, ye are all my living and fruitful members, partakers of my Spirit, and inwardly purified by faith in my Word, which works truly in you: adhere therefore more and more closely by faith and love to me, as your source of perpetual support and supply; for whatever be your present attainments in grace, ye cannot continue to perform holy obedience any otherwise than by continued union and communion with me. And the more abundantly ye cleave to me by faith and love, and have my Spirit dwelling in you, the more ye will abound in spiritual fruits, to the glory of God, and your own and others' advantage: for separate from me, and without my continual influence, even ye, my real members, can do nothing truly good and acceptable to God. 6, 7. Such church members, as do not thus adhere to me by faith and love, shall quickly be stripped of all relation to me or my church; and their gifts, profession, and specious appearances shall wither and die; and they shall be gathered together at the last day as fit fuel for divine wrath, and cast into everlasting remorse. But they who steadfastly cleave to me, and have me and my Word dwelling in their heart by faith, to guide, govern, quicken, and establish them, shall have everything which they request of God, for his glory and their own edification and fruitfulness, granted them to the utmost of their desires and wants. 8-11. By your thus abiding in me, and I in you, and having your petitions answered, my Father's wisdom, faithfulness, and grace are gloriously manifested; for thus he enables you to abound in holy tempers and works, by which he may be still further glorified; and ye may more plainly appear to yourselves and to the world as my true disciples, and be approved, esteemed and owned by me as such. For as my Father dearly loves and delights in me, not only as his eternal Son, but as the root and medium of all gracious communications to you, so I dearly love and delight in you, as branches united to me, and deriving virtue unto all holy fruitfulness from me. Cleave therefore affectionately and steadfastly to me, that ye may be still further approved of and delighted in by me. And if, from a principle of faith and love, ye cheerfully obey my commandments as your Lord and Saviour, ye shall continue to be approved and owned by me as my dearly beloved friends, even as I, in the character of man and mediator, have cheerfully fulfilled all righteousness in obedience to my Father's commandment, and am continually approved by him, and know that he loves me.—These things have I thus freely and plainly declared to you, that I may rejoice in you as my fruitful members; and ye may rejoice in your union with me, and in my abiding love to you; that through the influences of my Spirit, ye may have fulness of joy to support you under all your troubles and losses; and all may issue in your complete and everlasting joy with me. 12-17. The great command which I now insist on, as a proof of your sincere affection and discipleship to me, is, that you be affectionate, and ready to perform all kind offices one to another for my sake, in consideration and in imitation of my fervent love to you in laying down my life for you. For greater love I cannot show to you, who were naturally my enemies, than in dying for you, as if ye had been my most important and endeared friends. And ye will manifest yourselves to be my true friends, and be esteemed and owned by me as such, if, from the sense of my love to you, ye make conscience of a ready and impartial obedience to all my commandments.—I neither have nor will use you as mere servants, who are kept ignorant of their master's secrets, but as friends, to whom I have imparted, and will further impart by my Spirit, all the blessed love of my Father, which is profitable for you to know or preach.—And not from natural goodness of yours, but out of love, have I called you either to salvation or to the apostleship, but by my own grace have I made you my servants and friends, that, by virtue derived from me, ye may bring forth the fruits of righteousness in your lives and ministrations, and persevere in them, till ye and your converts propagate my cause on earth, and arrive safe in heaven: and that my Father may grant you everything you ask in my name, as your prevailing advocate and friend, to promote these holy purposes. These things I require of you, in order that ye, after my example, may heartily love one another, as members of the same body, partakers of the same blessings, and as servants, disciples, and friends of the same Lord. 18-21. Do not wonder if carnal and worldly men, the children and subjects of Satan, hate, oppose, and persecute you; for ye know that they began with me, and have been as full of rage and spite against me, your head and chief, as they can be against you.—If ye were of the same carnal temper and disposition with worldly men, encouraging them in their sinful courses, they would esteem you as persons of their own party and likeness; but because ye are not conformed to them in their corrupt principles, manners and customs, but are through active taint in my sacrifice set apart to exemplify and preach my spiritual and holy gospel, they have an irreconcilable antipathy to you. In order therefore to prevent murmuring at the maltreatment which you must meet with, often consider that you are not worthy of, nor warranted to expect, better treatment than I, your Lord and Master, have found. If then these carnal men have reviled and persecuted me, ye may expect they will do the same to you: and if, instead of receiving the truth in the love of it from me, they have carped and cavilled at my doctrine on account of its contrariety to their depraved sentiments, tempers, and views, they will, for the same reason, set themselves against it when delivered by you.—And on account of your relation and likeness to me, and your zealous profession and publishing of my gospel, they will thus hate, oppose, and persecute you, as they have no true knowledge of God, nor of his sending me into the world to secure the salvation of men. 22-25. If I had not in the plainest manner asserted and demonstrated my Messiahship among them, their sin, in refusing to believe in me, had been less: but since they have had so long the enjoyment of the clearest evidence of the divinity of my person, office, and doctrine, their sin is so highly aggravated, that they can plead no excuse for it.—And whoever hates and opposes me, is an enemy to my heavenly Father who sent me, and hath given public testimony to me as his beloved Son.—Nay, if I had not wrought among them such a multitude of merciful and public miracles, as neither Moses nor any other man ever wrought in such a gracious and god-like manner, they might still have had some pretence of excusing their infidelity, or at least of lessening its guilt: but their persisting in it, notwithstanding their being eye-witnesses of all, must proceed from a rooted enmity at the holiness and authority of both me and my Father; and is, as the psalmist David typically foretold, a hating me without any just provocation. 26, 27. But notwithstanding their most furious and causeless enmity to my person, truths, and interests, they shall triumph over all opposition; for when that divine Counsellor, Advocate, and Comforter is come, whom I have promised, and with my Father's concurrence will send unto you,—even the Holy Spirit, who is infinitely faithful, and the inditer of all inspired truth; and who, in a divine manner, proceeds from the Father as well as from me,—he will direct, encourage, comfort, and support you under all your difficulties and dangers, and will attest my dignity and character by the further revelations which he will make, and the miraculous operations that he will enable you to per-love his own: but <sup>a</sup>because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.

20 Remember the word that I said unto you, The<sup>e</sup> servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you; <sup>9</sup>if they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also.

21 But<sup>h</sup> all these things will they do unto you for my name's sake, because they know not him that sent me.

22 If<sup>i</sup> I had not come and spoken unto them, they had not had sin:<sup>1</sup> but now they have no cloak<sup>2</sup> for their sin.

23 He<sup>j</sup> that hateth me hateth my Father also.

24 If<sup>k</sup> I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had sin: <sup>1</sup>but now have they both seen and hated both me and my Father.

25 But this cometh to pass, <sup>n</sup>that the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law, They hated me without a cause.

26 ¶ But <sup>o</sup>when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me:

27 And<sup>p</sup> ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with me from the beginning.
